By JOHN M. CREWDSON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — With public confidence in its rectitude undermined by disclosures of illegal activity, corruption and abuse of power, the FBI that the Carter administration will inherit Jan. 20 is in the midst of its worst internal crisis.

Under the cautious leadership of its director, Clarence M. Kelley, the bureau recently began to redefine its mission and to install administrative safeguards designed to prevent future abuses of the sort that have sullied its once-impeccable image.

But the ultimate success of those reforms will depend to a considerable extent on the man Jimmy Carter chooses to head the nation's foremost law-enforcement agency over the next few years, a period of transition that promises to be the most crucial in the bureau's 50-year history.

It will also depend on Griffin B. Bell, the attorney general-designate, who has thus far reserved to himself his views about the future of the bureau, but to whom the responsibility will fall for setting a moral tone that will determine much about that future.

One example of the elements that can contribute to such a climate was contained in a recent recollection of Edward H. Levi, the present attorney general, that shortly after he took office last year he was approached by an FBI agent who presented him with a request for a national security wiretap and then stood by waiting for him to sign it.

"I asked the agent to leave the request with me — I think, perhaps, to his surprise — so that I could consult with other officials in the department," the attorney general recalled.

Although the president-elect and Bell have indicated that they are considering keeping Kelley in place, sources close to both men are persuaded that the present director has no chance of remaining for more than a few weeks after Carter takes office.

Carter, the sources recalled, expressed dissatisfaction in his campaign with the pace of Kelley's reforms, and even said at one point that, had he then been president, he would have discharged the director for having permitted the bureau's carpenters to redecorate his suburban apartment.

The summary of Kelley's three-and-a-half year tenure as director is mixed. He has reorganized the bureau's intelligence division, a small part of its overall operations, but the one that contributed most heavily to the record of abuse, and has reduced the number of its domestic intelligence investigations from several thousand to a few hundred.

But he has, on occasion, been as surprised as those outside the bureau at the reports that some bureau agents and informers have taken part in illegal activities, in a few instances under his very nose. Justice Department lawyers investigating those illegalities have reportedly concluded that they have evidence to bring criminal charges against 10 to 20 past and present bureau officials.

Hot seat on a cold day

Getting into a ski-lift chair is not always the simple affair it looks, as President Ford found out at Vail, Colo., Friday. First, he dropped one of his poles (top) across his skis as the chair swung into place to take him and Secret Service agent Larry Buendorf to the top of Vail Mountain. Then, as he started forward to retrieve the pole, the chair caught him behind the legs (lower picture) and unceremoniously scooped him up.

New Year survival kit

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press

New Year's Day may dawn too bright and too loud for those who toasted the end of 1976 too long.

But bartenders, who ought to know, offer hope to revelers intent on starting 1977 with vision sufficiently clear for televised football bowls and holiday brunches.

"I put a couple of eggs in a shaker, add a little heavy cream, two teaspoons of sugar and a secret ingredient — two teaspoons of vanilla yogurt," said a New York City bartender, Bob Venezia. "And then I shake it real fine and drink it down."

Persons who were more moderate in their New Year's Eve toasts can find a variety of activities to fill their sober hours today— from breaking resolutions to trying to find something on television other than football games.

Gridiron action today will take viewers from the Cotton Bowl in Dallas to the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, and the Orange Bowl in Miami.

Not enough? Sunday's schedule promises a Sun Bowl in El Paso, Tex., a Shrine Bowl in Palo Alto, and the All-American Lions Bowl at Tampa, Fla.

Those up to marching bands will find them today in the Tournament of Roses Parade, to be telecast nationally on NBC at 8:30 a.m., and in the Mummers parade along Philadelphia streets.

Some new snow should get skiers to the slopes in Western states. But residents of Northern states likely will find their home fireplaces more inviting in the wake of a cold spell that bridged the end of 1976 and beginning of 1977.

Among those planning to spend today quietly at home was Jimmy Carter. His New Year's resolution: "To do a good job as president" after Jan. 20. (See story, Page A-2.)

In Japan and part of South Korea, midnight marked the end of the Year of the Dragon and start of the Year of the Snake. It means 12 months of bright, proud and beautiful babies, Japanese soothsayers say.

Other Asian nations, which use the lunar calendar, will have to wait until Feb. 18 for the Year of the Snake to begin.

Residents of Detroit and the Hartford suburb of Windsor can thank local policemen for a chance to recuperate today.

Connecticut squad cars were on call late Friday and early today to escort tipsy drivers from parties to their front doors, and Detroit policemen hailed taxis to give overdoors a free ride home.

In Waseca, Minn., the city rented a bus from a senior citizens agency to get rural residents home safely.

Others won't be so lucky. The National Safety Council estimated that between 350 and 450 persons would be killed in traffic accidents between 6 p.m. Thursday and midnight Sunday.

The year ended in Rome with President Giovanni Leone characterizing 1976 as "a difficult and bitter" year for Italy's depressed economy and in London with Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey looking ahead to better financial times for England.

It was to start in Cherryville, N.C., with some 40 men sustaining a 200-year-old German and English custom of greeting their neighbors with shouts and gunfire New Year's morn, whether they were ready or not.

Those wondering how 1976 ended and 1977 began may be able to find out from this list of what went on New Year's Eve:

Social Security taxes going up

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of Americans will pay as much as $70.20 more in Social Security taxes in the new year.

By law, the maximum annual tax payment increases from $895.05 in 1976 to $965.25 in 1977. Forty years ago, in 1937, the maximum tax was $30 a year.

But only the 19 million or so Americans earning more than $15,300 will pay a higher tax in 1977. The tax rate on a worker's income will remain at 5.85 per cent, so persons who earn less than $15,300 will not pay any more than they paid on the same amount of earnings last year.

In 1976, a worker had paid all Social Security tax obligations by the time he reached the $15,300 salary level, and income over this was not subject to additional tax. Persons for whom tax deductions stopped in 1976 after they reached the cutoff point will find the tax is being deducted from their checks longer.

The cutoff for wages and salaries in 1977 has been raised to $16,500, above which no additional Social Security tax will be collected. About 16 million workers earn more than $16,500.

The increase in the tax is automatic in the year after which there has been an increase in Social Security benefits, which rose 6.4 per cent in 1976.

The maximum Social Security tax on self-employed persons will rise from $1,208.70 to $1,303.50 in 1977.

The increases, which have to be matched by employers, will produce an estimated $2.3 billion for the Social Security system. However, this will not close the gap of benefit payments over income which amounted to about $4.3 billion last year.

Although the Social Security tax bite has been rising sharply since the early 1960s, it still has not kept pace with the flow of benefits. There is concern that the system's reserves will be eroded and that it may have to turn to general tax revenues to keep going.

The maximum tax was just $30 a year between 1937 and 1949. Then it rose slowly to $174 in 1963. Additional benefits for Medicare for the aged and disabled pushed the maximum tax to $277.20 by 1966.

Increases became even steeper in subsequent years, rising to a maximum $290.40 in 1967, $343.20 in 1968, $374.40 in 1969, $405.60 in 1971, $468 in 1972, $631.80 in 1973, $772.20 in 1974, $824.85 in 1975 and $895.05 in 1976.

Also in 1977, out-of-pocket payments for Medicare hospital insurance are to increase 19 per cent starting today, meaning that elderly or disabled persons entering a hospital will be responsible for the first $124 of their initial bill for a two-month period, up from $104 in 1976.

Monthly premiums for supplementary medical insurance will be increased by 50 cents for 25.4 million Medicare beneficiaries beginning in July. The increase will raise the monthly premium to $7.70.

Persons receiving Social Security benefits can gain from another change this year. The limit on earnings they can make without losing the retirement benefits has been increased from $2,760 to $3,000.

After earning $3,000, a person loses $1 in Social Security benefits for every $2 in outside income.

Showers may dampen New Year's festivities

By JOHN SHEEHAN

Nagging drizzles might yap at the heels of Tournament of Roses spectators this morning in Pasadena, but officials say infrequent misty showers won't dampen parade spirits.

Today's chance of showers was estimated at up to 40 per cent at dawn. Mostly near the mountains, they were expected to keep the temperature at about 60 degrees. (Complete weather, Page B-3.)

National Weather Service forecasters said overnight parade route temperatures would be near freezing. There will be a 20 per cent chance of rain during the Michigan-USC football game at the Pasadena Rose Bowl this afternoon.

The prediction of possible drizzles came in the wake of a storm front which swept down the coast Friday from the North Pacific, bringing .38 of an inch of rain to the Long Beach area before noon.

Rain also blacked out parts of the Southland Thursday and Friday and was blamed for at least one traffic death.

The storm was good news for those who got away to Southland mountains, where the snow level dropped below 4,000 feet.

An estimated 40,000 persons from all over the country had lined up along the 5½-mile Pasadena parade route by 6 p.m. Friday, huddling around hibachis or snuggling in sleeping bags to avoid the dampness. Another 5,000 were gathering in campers and motor homes at the Rose Bowl.

Ford proposes 51st state: Puerto Rico

New York Times Service

VAIL, Colo. — In a dramatic and unexpected step taken just weeks before he leaves office, President Ford called Friday for the admission of Puerto Rico as the 51st state of the Union.

In a statement issued at this ski resort on the last day of the nation's Bicentennial year, Ford proposed that "the people of Puerto Rico and the Congress of the United States begin now to take those steps which will result in statehood for Puerto Rico."

The action reportedly took the government and people of Puerto Rico by surprise and even the President's small staff here said they were not aware such a move was coming. Ford said that he had not personally contacted the incoming governor of Puerto Rico, Carlos Romero Bracelo, in advance of announcing his proposal.

Conflict code: port panel chief to quit

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

The president of the Long Beach Harbor Commission — and possibly one other commissioner — will resign rather than file statements of financial worth under the new Conflict of Interest code now mandatory under the state's Political Reform Act, it was learned Friday.

James Craig Jr., scion of a shipbuilding family and a harbor commissioner for more than 11 years, said he plans to resign before the code goes into effect.

His resignation is expected to be announced at the Jan. 11 meeting of the City Council.

"It's not because I have any conflicts of interest . . . but it's because I don't believe my financial position is any of the public's business," Craig said in an interview.

Meanwhile, former commission president Llewellyn Bixby, Jr., indicated he and his attorney are studying the 50-page book of instructions on the filing of the conflict of interest statements.

Bixby said he would decide in a few days.

"I was considering resigning before," Bixby said, "because my wife and I want to travel and the Monday meetings have become a handicap.

"My term is up in June, so I have only a few months to go, but I'm not happy with what I see in the Conflict of Interest Code."

At least two of the other three members of the powerful commission — as well as all other commissioners and department heads contacted — indicated they had no problem with filing the statements.

Both James Grey, president of Harbor Bank, and H.E. "Bud" Ridings, former car dealer, said they would file the financial reports by deadline time, and saw no problems with it.

Deputy City Atty. Arthur Honda, handling the complex code preparations for the city, said approximately 35 departments and commissions in the city must abide by the disclosure act.

Each department and commission, according to Honda, has filed its own code, based on a model prepared by his office. He said the codes vary depending on the types of jobs and functions within the department.

"This is done," the attorney said, "to balance the individual's right of privacy against the public's right to know his financial interests as they pertain to his official position."

The codes, he said, were filed by the Jan. 1 deadline and will be before the City Council on Jan. 4. However, the council is not expected to act, or adopt them, until the following week.

It was learned, however, that should the council members decide to adopt the codes at Tuesday's meeting, all department heads and commissioners involved — including Craig and Bixby — would then be compelled by the law to file the statements.

Carters to feast on a 'good luck' New Year's meal

Combined News Services

The dish is a traditional one on New Year's Day for many southerners, including the Carters. The hog jowls, something like salt pork, are used to season the peas which have soaked all night and then been simmered slowly for hours.

With no official appointments Friday, the president-elect went hunting for quail in the fields near his home, followed by Secret Service men. He spent New Year's Eve alone with his wife Rosalynn, and daughter, Amy.

"As 1976 comes to a close, and a new year begins, my family and I join with every American in the hope that 1977 will be a time of peace and prosperity for all the world," the president-elect said in a New Year's statement.

On his schedule today was a meeting with Hamilton Jordan, one of his top aides, about the composition of Carter's White House staff. Aides said the final makeup of the staff probably would be announced next week. Many names and assignments already have been disclosed.

Carter also planned to spend part of the day watching football on television. Aides said that he particularly wanted to watch the Sugar Bowl game between Georgia and Pittsburgh.

First woman priest in Episcopal Church will be ordained today

Jacqueline Means, a former Roman Catholic who once quit going to church for seven years, will be ordained today as an Episcopalian priest, the first woman to be ordained since the Episcopal Church authorized women priests.

She jokingly calls herself "God's favorite lady" and wears a T-shirt with "Mother Means" emblazoned on the back.

Mrs. Means has been the target of some opposition from both men and women within the church, and a busload of demonstrators is expected at the ordination ceremonies at All Saints' Episcopal Church in Indianapolis today.

Becoming a priest was hardly a lifetime goal for Jackie Means, a 40-year-old mother of four who started attending church again only for her children's sake. She doesn't even consider herself a religious person — at least not in the traditional sense.

"What's a religious person?" she asks rhetorically. "I don't think anybody else knows. But I had a strong belief in God. Religion to me is caring about people and belief in other people."

The daughter of alcoholic, non-churchgoing parents, she quit high school at 16 to elope. Mrs. Means and her Methodist husband, Delton, were unable to accept each other's religion, so they stopped going to church altogether.

Seventeen years ago, they decided to go again.

"I decided then that we needed to go to church for the kids," she said. "You don't ever think you need it, but your kids need it."

He's sorry

Independence, Mo., Mayor Richard King said Friday that he was drunk when he stole six coats from a local restaurant after being ordered to leave by the manager. The mayor issued an apology "to everyone involved in the incident and to the people of Independence in general."

King, 32, unsuccessful Republican candidate for Congress from Missouri's 4th District last November, did not elaborate on the theft of the coats — two of which were still missing on Friday.

Detective Al Hainen of the city police force said police would present the case against King to the city prosecutor on Monday. City offices were closed Friday because of the New Year's holiday.

Foxx weds

Nightclub and television star Redd Foxx was married on stage in Las Vegas Friday to Yun Chi Chung, a Korean native who now lives in Los Angeles.

It was the third marriage for Foxx, 54, and the second for Miss Chung, 34.

Secret of life

A 101-year-old man who says a key to long life is "women and drinking" is serving a two-month jail sentence in Pensacola, Fla., on a liquor law violation. Johnny White, born in Jamaica in March 1875, was sentenced Wednesday on a charge of possessing liquor for sale without a license.

However, White told a newspaper reporter, "I don't know why I'm here because I didn't do anything illegal. They said I was going to sell the whisky, but all of it I get I drink myself."

He attributed his long life to treating people with respect, and proper eating and sleeping habits; "but most importantly, limit yourself to women and drinking."

No survivors found in Peru plane crash

Combined News Services

LIMA, Peru — Rescue parties reported that all 20 persons aboard a DC4 passenger plane perished when the aircraft slammed into a mountainside in the Andes of northern Peru, an airline official said Friday.

All aboard were believed to be Peruvians.

The four-engine plane of the privately operated Faucett Airlines crashed Thursday about 10 minutes after taking off from Trujillo, a town on the Pacific coast about 325 miles north of Lima.

Helicopters spotted the wreckage Friday and reported the fuselage of the plane was largely intact, raising hopes there might be survivors among the 13 passengers and seven crew members.

But rescue teams that reached the scene reported all were killed.

Faucett spokesmen said the airliner lost radio contact with Trujillo airport shortly after taking off on a flight to Tarapoto, a farming town of about 9,000 in the upper Amazon valley.

Cause of the crash was not known, officials said.

4 dead at St. Louis from subzero cold

ST. LOUIS — Four men were found frozen to death Friday as temperatures fell to 10 degrees below zero here, a 112-year low.

Johnny Beard, 57, and Horace Currie, 55, both died of exposure, a spokesman at City Hospital said.

Beard's body was found behind a stack of wooden crates, apparently erected as a wind shelter. There was a dead fire nearby. Currie was found sitting in a chair in a vacant lot. He was near a barrel filled with debris and railroad ties. The fire in the barrel had gone out, police said. A passerby said he saw Currie sitting in the armchair at 7 p.m. Thursday. The other two victims were unidentified.

Attica riot furor

NEW YORK — Gov. Hugh Carey's decision to "close the book" on the 1971 prison uprising at Attica with clemency actions drew sharp criticism Friday from heads of unions representing state troopers and prison guards.

Patrick Carroll, president of the Police Benevolent Association of the New York State Police, said he was "appalled" by the governor's actions Thursday to pardon seven former Attica inmates and commute the sentence of an eighth who participated in the riot.

In his statement Thursday, Carey said his actions "should not be construed as a reflection of a lack of culpability for the conduct at issue."

Rather, he said, the failure to plan properly the retaking of Attica or for the collection and preservation of evidence, and failure to budget and administer properly the investigation of the uprising "have effectively precluded the possibility now of bringing to justice, by trial or disciplinary action, any armed personnel who were misdirected or abused their authority in the retaking of the facility and rehousing the inmates."

Year ends violently

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Gunfire and death ushered out the old year in Argentina Friday as security forces reported killing 30 suspected left-wing guerrillas in six different clashes.

The latest killings brought to 1,479 the number of deaths for 1976 in the country's continuing political violence. This far exceeds the toll from factional warfare in Northern Ireland, where British army statistics show that 296 persons were killed this year.

U.S.-Saudi trade

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia — American trade and contracts with Saudi Arabia have nearly doubled in the past year, a U.S. Embassy official said Friday.

He confirmed a Saudi report, however, that this oil-rich kingdom's trade with other countries was growing faster than with the United States.

"It's true," he added, "that in terms of our relative share of the market there has been a decline, but in terms of contracts won and goods sold we have never been better."

Vatican won't sell

VATICAN CITY — A Vatican prelate in charge of sacred art rejected suggestions Friday that Michelangelo's Pieta sculpture and other priceless Vatican art objects be put on sale for funds to aid the needy.

Bishop Giovanni Fallani, writing in the Holy See's weekly magazine L'Osservatore della Domenica, said to sell the Vatican's riches would be tantamount to "the triumph of materialism over spiritualism."

He said suggestions that the Vatican should divest itself of its artistic riches have been and are still continuing, adding that the idea was once put forward also by the late Italian President Luigi Einaudi, who studied the matter and dismissed it as "unfeasible."

Oil takeover deal

QUITO, Ecuador — The government of Ecuador reported Friday night that it has completed negotiations with Gulf Oil Corp. to acquire Gulf's shares in Ecuador's oil consortium.

Gulf owned 37.5 per cent of the consortium that includes another U.S. firm, Texaco with 37.5 per cent, and CEPE, the state oil company.

Ecuador will pay Gulf $82,128,000 — an amount it determined. Gulf had sought $117 million.

Combined News Services

The dish is a traditional one on New Year's Day for many southerners, including the Carters. The hog jowls, something like salt pork, are used to season the peas which have soaked all night and then been simmered slowly for hours.

With no official appointments Friday, the president-elect went hunting for quail in the fields near his home, followed by Secret Service men. He spent New Year's Eve alone with his wife Rosalynn, and daughter, Amy.

"As 1976 comes to a close, and a new year begins, my family and I join with every American in the hope that 1977 will be a time of peace and prosperity for all the world," the president-elect said in a New Year's statement.

On his schedule today was a meeting with Hamilton Jordan, one of his top aides, about the composition of Carter's White House staff. Aides said the final makeup of the staff probably would be announced next week. Many names and assignments already have been disclosed.

Carter also planned to spend part of the day watching football on television. Aides said that he particularly wanted to watch the Sugar Bowl game between Georgia and Pittsburgh.

First woman priest in Episcopal Church will be ordained today

Jacqueline Means, a former Roman Catholic who once quit going to church for seven years, will be ordained today as an Episcopalian priest, the first woman to be ordained since the Episcopal Church authorized women priests.

Mrs. Means has been the target of some opposition from both men and women within the church, and a busload of demonstrators is expected at the ordination ceremonies at All Saints' Episcopal Church in Indianapolis today.

Becoming a priest was hardly a lifetime goal for Jackie Means, a 40-year-old mother of four who started attending church again only for her children's sake. She doesn't even consider herself a religious person — at least not in the traditional sense.

COMPOSITE SKETCHES OF SUSPECTS

Police released descriptions and composite sketches of two men who might have seized her two weeks ago and are possible suspects in the kidnap-slaying.

Miss Stallcup, 19, a Cypress College coed studying to be a nurse, was last seen alive Dec. 19 at about 8:30 p.m., when she left her home to attend a pre-Christmas party.

One suspect was armed with a .38-caliber chrome-plated revolver but police refused to say if Miss Stallcup was shot. Officially, she died of a broken neck. Toxicological tests and a full report on the condition of her body have not been completed.

Both wanted men are white and in their twenties, police said. They were seen in a dirty white car, possibly a 1963 or 1964 Chevrolet two-door model, police added.

One suspect was described as age 22 to 24, about 5-feet-9, 185 pounds, with frizzy, dirty blond hair parted in the middle. Police believe he had the weapon.

The other man, 26 to 28 years of age, is 6-feet tall, weighs about 180 pounds, and has long, light-brown "kinky" hair.

Officer Lon Wilson, who released the descriptions and composite drawings, said public assistance in tracking Miss Stallcup's kidnapers-slayers is requested. Persons with information should call 714-638-6615.

County can't form smog district

From our L.A. Bureau

The Board of Supervisors was told Friday that it had no authority to set up its own smog control district in defiance of a new state law making Los Angeles County part of a regional pollution agency Feb. 1.

The board had sought to set up the district because of its objections to the new law creating the South Coast Air Quality Management District comprising Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

But in a report from Chief Administrative Officer Harry Hufford, a county counsel opinion says that the new law prohibits any of the four counties from providing smog control services in the area covered by the new district.

The supervisors have criticized a provision of the new law requiring Los Angeles County to pay 70 per cent of the operating tab, while having only 20 per cent of the vote on the new 10-man board.

Cities within the county also would have two representatives on the board but are not required to contribute to the cost.

Initially, supervisors decided to withhold $2.3 million representing Los Angeles County's share of funding for the new agency from Feb. 1 to June 30, 1977. They hoped this would spark emergency legislation to have the state take over funding and operation of the new district.

This, however, has not come about, and there seems little likelihood of it occurring. Meanwhile, the state has filed suit to force the county to release the $2.3 million.

The supervisors, to avoid criticism that the county might be endangering the health of its citizens by not contributing funds to the new district, told officials to study the possibility of setting up the county's own district as of Feb. 1.

Hufford suggested that county officials be instructed to meet with representatives of the other three counties to develop a new funding formula which would make membership in the new district more palatable.

He said one of the funding alternatives being considered was a $1 surcharge on automobile and truck registrations in the four-county area.

Another, he said, envisaged spreading the cost of funding the new agency more evenly among cities and counties.

Serrano funding without tax boost seen by Brown

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown said Friday the state can meet the Serrano school finance decision without raising taxes — a feat many education and tax experts consider impossible.

"It's not going to be easy," Brown told reporters. "(But) I don't envision a need, given a commitment to self-discipline by government, for a general tax increase."

He said the state wouldn't have to sacrifice property tax relief for a solution. And he said he didn't see the need for a statewide property tax — something many analysts feel is virtually required by Thursday's ruling by the State Supreme Court.

The court said the state has to equalize the spending abilities of school districts by 1980 so that districts with high property wealth no longer have an unfair advantage in revenues and tax rates. The case was brought by John Serrano Sr. of East Los Angeles on behalf of his son.

A solution is expected to be expensive because simply leveling district spending would be ruinous to high-wealth districts, many of which are in big cities with large numbers of low-income residents.

So the state might have to increase its subsidies to low-wealth districts to raise their spending to an adequate level.

At the same time it might have to order some pooling of district revenues and could spend hundreds of millions of dollars in subsidies to big-city, high-wealth districts like San Francisco, which would be hurt by that pooling.

Past legislation aimed at compliance has ranged in cost from $500 million to more than $1 billion. A top aide in Brown's Finance Department said Thursday a reasonable figure now might be between $1 billion and $2 billion.

Brown didn't put a cost figure on his proposal or give any details. He said he would unveil it within 10 days — around the time his state budget is introduced.

He said the proposal would take "a number of years" to comply with the decision, hinting that it might not reach full compliance by the court's 1980 deadline. Several analysts have speculated that the court might accept a plan that was well along toward compliance by 1980.

Meanwhile, an attorney on the winning side of Thursday's ruling told reporters in San Francisco that a citizens' "Three R's Commission" was being formed to oversee efforts by Brown and the Legislature at compliance with the decision.

"Nearly bankrupt school districts and undereducated children all over this state are waiting for desperately needed dollars from Sacramento," said Sid Wollinsky of Public Advocates.

He said Serrano compliance could be achieved for $250 million to $500 million, suggesting that much of it could come from higher taxes on business and the wealthy.

Associated Press

Reporter William Farr, who served 46 days in jail in 1972 for refusing to divulge the source of an article he wrote about the Charles Manson murder trial, was ordered Friday to say whether that source was Manson defense attorney Paul Fitzgerald.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Robert Weil issued the order in connection with a $24 million civil libel suit brought against Farr by Fitzgerald and Irving Kanarek, another defense attorney in the Manson case.

In their suit, Fitzgerald and Kanarek charged that Farr libeled them and injured their professional reputations by saying that he based his story upon transcripts he received from two of six defense attorneys without specifying which two.

Credit union

Last year, Action Line answered several questions about the Specialty Workers Credit Union, which you said was being liquidated and everyone would get his money in November 1975. But I still don't have my money. I've been told by some people that the credit union has been liquidated, but some say it hasn't. Can Action Line look into this again? J.P., Norwalk.

Your savings appear safe, but it probably will be months before you get your money. The past Action Line items you referred to dealt with the Paper Specialties Federal Credit Union, which was located in the same building with the Specialty Workers Credit Union. The former was covered by federal insurance, and virtually all its depositors have received their money. The state-charted Specialty Workers Credit Union was not covered by insurance, but there appear to be sufficient assets to cover all the accounts, according to Shirley Burke of the California Credit Union League, a private statewide organization which is handling the liquidation of this credit union. Liquidation of Specialty Workers has just recently begun. Mrs. Burke said the credit union's records were more than a year in arrears, and the league currently is reconstructing the files to determine each depositor's account balance. She also said the league does not have current addresses for all the credit union's depositors and would like to hear from anyone who had a savings account there. You can write to Mrs. Burke at the California Credit Union League, P.O. Box 2322, Pomona, Calif. 91766. Insurance covering savings accounts up to $40,000 is required for all federal-chartered credit unions, but it's currently optional for state-chartered unions. In 1980, however, insurance will be mandatory for virtually all credit unions, Mrs. Burke said.

Off the streets

I recently heard a neighbor telling some children that it is against the law in Long Beach for them to play in the street. Is this true? The children have no other place to play in Belmont Shore, as most of the houses don't have yards and the alleys are too filthy. This neighbor lets his dog relieve himself in the street. Isn't there a health law against this kind of inconsiderateness? T.M., Long Beach.

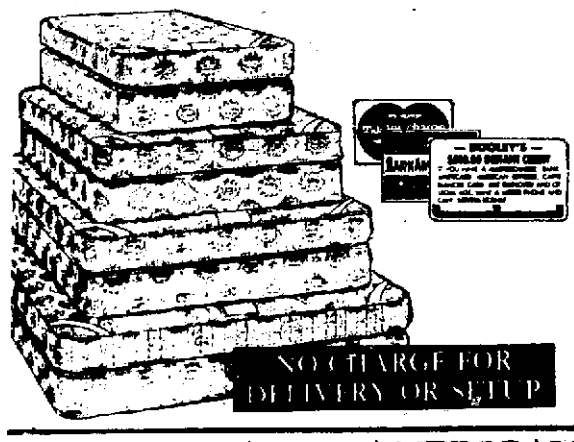

Both are illegal in Long Beach, but neither law is strictly enforced. Section 3410.9 of the Long Beach Municipal Code prohibits "congregating on a public street and obstructing the free use of it," but the police generally enforce the law only if they receive a complaint. Animal defecating on a public street or sidewalk or on private property without the owner's permission is prohibited under Section 5610.57 of the city's code. But, as with all misdemeanors, an officer would have to witness the act before he could cite the animal's owner. A spokesman for the Long Beach Animal Shelter said that if his office receives numerous complaints about a particular animal, the owner may be contacted and informed of the law, but enforcing it is very difficult. He also said that an animal owner who cleans up after his pet probably wouldn't be cited even if a shelter employe saw the animal defecating in the street.

The board had sought to set up the district because of its objections to the new law creating the South Coast Air Quality Management District comprising Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

But in a report from Chief Administrative Officer Harry Hufford, a county counsel opinion says that the new law prohibits any of the four counties from providing smog control services in the area covered by the new district.

The supervisors have criticized a provision of the new law requiring Los Angeles County to pay 70 per cent of the operating tab, while having only 20 per cent of the vote on the new 10-man board.

Cities within the county also would have two representatives on the board but are not required to contribute to the cost.

Initially, supervisors decided to withhold $2.3 million representing Los Angeles County's share of funding for the new agency from Feb. 1 to June 30, 1977. They hoped this would spark emergency legislation to have the state take over funding and operation of the new district.

This, however, has not come about, and there seems little likelihood of it occurring. Meanwhile, the state has filed suit to force the county to release the $2.3 million.

The supervisors, to avoid criticism that the county might be endangering the health of its citizens by not contributing funds to the new district, told officials to study the possibility of setting up the county's own district as of Feb. 1.

Hufford suggested that county officials be instructed to meet with representatives of the other three counties to develop a new funding formula which would make membership in the new district more palatable.

He said one of the funding alternatives being considered was a $1 surcharge on automobile and truck registrations in the four-county area.

Another, he said, envisaged spreading the cost of funding the new agency more evenly among cities and counties.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown said Friday the state can meet the Serrano school finance decision without raising taxes — a feat many education and tax experts consider impossible.

"It's not going to be easy," Brown told reporters. "(But) I don't envision a need, given a commitment to self-discipline by government, for a general tax increase."

He said the state wouldn't have to sacrifice property tax relief for a solution. And he said he didn't see the need for a statewide property tax — something many analysts feel is virtually required by Tuesday's ruling by the State Supreme Court.

The court said the state has to equalize the spending abilities of school districts by 1980 so that districts with high property wealth no longer have an unfair advantage in revenues and tax rates. The case was brought by John Serrano Sr. of East Los Angeles on behalf of his son.

A solution is expected to be expensive because simply leveling district spending would be ruinous to high-wealth districts, many of which are in big cities with large numbers of low-income residents.

So the state might have to increase its subsidies to low-wealth districts to raise their spending to an adequate level.

At the same time it might have to order some pooling of district revenues and could spend hundreds of millions of dollars in subsidies to big-city, high-wealth districts like San Francisco, which would be hurt by that pooling.

Past legislation aimed at compliance has ranged in cost from $500 million to more than $1 billion. A top aide in Brown's Finance Department said Thursday a reasonable figure now might be between $1 billion and $2 billion.

Brown didn't put a cost figure on his proposal or give any details. He said he would unveil it within 10 days — around the time his state budget is introduced.

He said the proposal would take "a number of years" to comply with the decision, hinting that it might not reach full compliance by the court's 1980 deadline. Several analysts have speculated that the court might accept a plan that was well along toward compliance by 1980.

Meanwhile, an attorney on the winning side of Thursday's ruling told reporters in San Francisco that a citizens' "Three R's Commission" was being formed to oversee efforts by Brown and the Legislature at compliance with the decision.

"Nearly bankrupt school districts and undereducated children all over this state are waiting for desperately needed dollars from Sacramento," said Sid Wollinsky of Public Advocates.

He said Serrano compliance could be achieved for $250 million to $500 million, suggesting that much of it could come from higher taxes on business and the wealthy.

Associated Press

Reporter William Farr, who served 46 days in jail in 1972 for refusing to divulge the source of an article he wrote about the Charles Manson murder trial, was ordered Friday to say whether that source was Manson defense attorney Paul Fitzgerald.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Robert Weil issued the order in connection with a $24 million civil libel suit brought against Farr by Fitzgerald and Irving Kanarek, another defense attorney in the Manson case.

In their suit, Fitzgerald and Kanarek charged that Farr libeled them and injured their professional reputations by saying that he based his story upon transcripts he received from two of six defense attorneys without specifying which two.

Credit union

Last year, Action Line answered several questions about the Specialty Workers Credit Union, which you said was being liquidated and everyone would get his money in November 1975. But I still don't have my money. I've been told by some people that the credit union has been liquidated, but some say it hasn't. Can Action Line look into this again? J.P., Norwalk.

Your savings appear safe, but it probably will be months before you get your money. The past Action Line items you referred to dealt with the Paper Specialties Federal Credit Union, which was located in the same building with the Specialty Workers Credit Union. The former was covered by federal insurance, and virtually all its depositors have received their money. The state-charted Specialty Workers Credit Union was not covered by insurance, but there appear to be sufficient assets to cover all the accounts, according to Shirley Burke of the California Credit Union League, a private statewide organization which is handling the liquidation of this credit union. Liquidation of Specialty Workers has just recently begun. Mrs. Burke said the credit union's records were more than a year in arrears, and the league currently is reconstructing the files to determine each depositor's account balance. She also said the league does not have current addresses for all the credit union's depositors and would like to hear from anyone who had a savings account there. You can write to Mrs. Burke at the California Credit Union League, P.O. Box 2322, Pomona, Calif. 91766. Insurance covering savings accounts up to $40,000 is required for all federal-chartered credit unions, but it's currently optional for state-chartered unions. In 1980, however, insurance will be mandatory for virtually all credit unions, Mrs. Burke said.

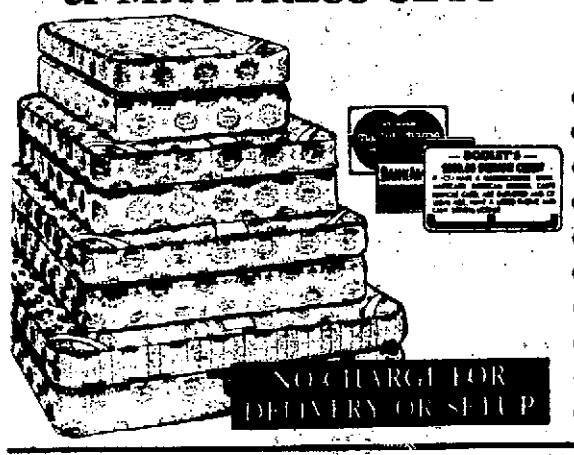

Off the streets

I recently heard a neighbor telling some children that it is against the law in Long Beach for them to play in the street. Is this true? The children have no other place to play in Belmont Shore, as most of the houses don't have yards and the alleys are too filthy. This neighbor lets his dog relieve himself in the street. Isn't there a health law against this kind of inconsiderateness? T.M., Long Beach.

Both are illegal in Long Beach, but neither law is strictly enforced. Section 3410.9 of the Long Beach Municipal Code prohibits "congregating on a public street and obstructing the free use of it," but the police generally enforce the law only if they receive a complaint. Animal defecating on a public street or sidewalk or on private property without the owner's permission is prohibited under Section 5610.57 of the city's code. But, as with all misdemeanors, an officer would have to witness the act before he could cite the animal's owner. A spokesman for the Long Beach Animal Shelter said that if his office receives numerous complaints about a particular animal, the owner may be contacted and informed of the law, but enforcing it is very difficult. He also said that an animal owner who cleans up after his pet probably wouldn't be cited even if a shelter employe saw the animal defecating in the street.

THE BUREAU has been badly stung by disclosures that J. Edgar Hoover, its late and long-time director, misused his authority in a variety of ways and countenanced practices by his agents that the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence Activities characterized as "unworthy of a democracy and occasionally reminiscent of the tactics of totalitarian regimes."

"This is what my children have told me was going on," observed Sen. Philip A. Hart, the late Michigan Democrat who served on the special Senate committee that unearthed many of the abuses. "I did not believe it."

The FBI, whose executives have spent much of the last 18 months testifying before that committee and several others on Capitol Hill, might well have recovered fully from the criticism and public disillusionment provoked by the unveiling of its blemished history.

BUT CARTER'S bureau director will have more than history to contend with. The most stunning blow thus far, one with ramifications for the future, has been the discovery that dozens of present and former bureau agents and officials have been caught up in the ongoing Justice Department inquiry into the recent use of such illegal investigative techniques as burglaries and the "systematic theft" of government property.

Tension inside the bureau has occasionally run high as a hand-picked team of agents, known derisively as the "dirty dozen" and working at the direction of the Justice Department prosecutors, has been digging into the alleged crimes of fellow agents.

AT ONE point, bureau sources reported, members of the special team were confronted by agents in the bureau's giant Manhattan field office as the special team attempted to remove official records thought to reflect some of the illegal activities.

That confrontation passed without incident, but other sources say that old friends are no longer speaking in the corridors as some of those under investigation, granted partial immunity from prosecution, have begun to testify against their colleagues before federal grand juries in New York City and Washington.

As the stream of adverse disclosures grew from a trickle into a torrent, Kelley struggled to contain the damage to the bureau's image and to keep its investigative machinery turning smoothly. But his success has not been unqualified, and in some instances his efforts have only exacerbated internal divisions and further diminished the bureau's already dismal morale.

AND WHEN, out of apparent deference to the bureau's old guard, he delayed in removing Nicholas P. Callahan as his top deputy, Kelley caused some chafing among younger, less doctrinaire agents who saw the old Hoover lieutenant as the last guardian of outmoded and unfair traditions within the bureau.

Callahan's dismissal last July, a result of his implication in the bureau's administrative scandals, was followed by the quiet departures of several other long-time officials and, although Kelley has insisted that he was never under the sway of the "Hooverites," it was only after they began to leave that he reorganized the bureau's intelligence division and its mossy executive hierarchy.

The shakiness of Kelley's command up to then, and an object lesson for whoever follows him, was illustrated by the director's acknowledgement that he had been "deceived" by his aides into believing that burglaries by bureau agents had been halted by Hoover 10 years ago.

Justice Department prosecutors have since established that such burglaries have taken place with some frequency this decade, a few of them under Kelley's administration, although apparently without his knowledge, and they have also confirmed the rumors of illegal wiretapping by bureau agents that the director once dismissed as "patently false."

Although assessments of Kelley's performance as the nation's top law-enforcement officer vary, he has received much praise from Atty. Gen. Levi, who this week declared that the director had done an "outstanding" job in effecting a "complete transformation of priorities in the FBI."

Whether Kelley would have taken such steps without being compelled by the public disclosures of illegalities and improprieties is an open question, but it has lately become clear that he is committed in his own way to setting the bureau right.

Some of that commitment has been inspired by Levi, a distinguished legal scholar and confirmed civil libertarian, who by all accounts is distressed at what he has learned about the FBI. But the managerial and organizational reforms that Kelley has implemented in recent months will stand as his principal legacy to his as yet-unnamed successor.

Kelley is trying to redirect more resources toward the prosecution of white-collar and organized crime cases, cutting back on the marginal criminal investigations that have for years been the bureau's staple and have buttressed its statistical performance records.

He is liberalizing personnel policies, introducing modern planning techniques and pushing a career development program that identifies and speedily promotes agents with management ability.

But most important, he has dissolved the bureau's old domestic intelligence unit, the fountainhead of many of the bureau's past abuses, and reduced the number of "internal security" investigations by 98 per cent, dramatically reversing the trend toward increasing political surveillance of Americans begun four decades earlier when Franklin D. Roosevelt first asked Hoover to monitor Nazi and Communist sympathizers in this country.

In recent Senate testimony, Kelley attributed the cutback in domestic intelligence investigations in large part to the end of the Vietnam war, which he said had eliminated "a major cause for divisiveness in this country." He might also have mentioned, but did not, the decline in urban violence that occupied much of the bureau's time in the late 1960s.

But sociological factors are only part of the reason that the bureau's interest in Americans with divergent political views has fallen off from 21,414 active investigations three years ago to fewer than 300 today (the bureau handles some half-million cases of all kinds each year).

Another part is the bureau's own initiative in closing out the least productive of those cases, based on what Kelley terms a "quality over quantity" approach to deploying his manpower.

Of equal importance in the bureau's housecleaning, however, has been the role of the Justice Department, which earlier this year issued guidelines, the first ever, that substantially limit the grounds for opening and pursuing domestic security investigations.

'76 good year for consumer reform laws

LOUISE COOK
Associated Press

Consumers are beginning the new year with tighter controls over the food they eat, the drugs they take and the cars they drive.

Action by the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government at the federal level covered a wide range of topics in 1976. Here is a rundown on some of them:

ADDITIVES—The Food and Drug Administration banned Red Dye No. 2 and ended its provisional approval of Red Dye No. 4, used in maraschino cherries, and carbon black, used to color licorice. The agency OKd the use of Red No. 4 in externally applied drugs and cosmetics, but said carbon black cannot be used in food, drugs or makeup.

ADVERTISING—The Supreme Court overturned state laws prohibiting pharmacists from advertising prices for prescription drugs. The Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission also took steps to end bans on advertising by professionals such as doctors and lawyers.

AEROSOLS—The National Academy of Sciences said fluorocarbons used as propellants in some aerosols — particularly personal grooming products — threaten the ozone layer protecting the earth from harmful ultraviolet radiation. The FDA, with jurisdiction over most aerosols containing fluorocarbons, proposed that such products carry warning labels, saying they could harm the environment. The Consumer Product Safety Commission started proceedings for an outright ban on fluorocarbons in the products it supervises.

AIRLINES—The Supreme Court, in a case involving Ralph Nader, ruled that a passenger who has been bumped from an overbooked flight may sue the airline for damages.

ANTITRUST—Congress enacted a law allowing state attorneys general to bring antitrust actions on behalf of the citizens of their states against alleged price fixers. This is important in cases where the amount involved for any one consumer is small — say 15 cents — and therefore is not worth going to court over.

CARS—The Energy Policy and Conservation Act which took effect last March sets mandatory fuel-economy standards starting at 18 miles per gallon for 1978 cars and rising to 27.5 miles per gallon for 1985 models. Another law, applying to used cars, makes it a criminal offense to tamper with an odometer or to incompletely disclose mileage.

CREDIT—The Equal Credit Opportunity Act was expanded to make it illegal for creditors to discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, age or because all or part of the consumer's income is from public assistance. The law, effective this year, also requires creditors to tell consumers why they were turned down for credit.

FAIR TRADE—The last of the so-called "Fair Trade" laws went out of existence in March, thanks to federal legislation making it illegal for manufacturers to fix prices of consumer products sold by retailers.

FOOD LABELS—The FDA issued a final regulation regarding a uniform procedure for listing food ingredients on labels. The deadline for compliance is Jan. 1, 1978, although manufacturers may change labels earlier if they want to.

LEASING—Congress enacted a law requiring leasing companies to give consumers a written statement, before a contract is signed, describing: any extra charges such as license fees, the extent of any warranty, insurance coverage and the number, amount and due dates of payments.

MEAT—The USDA proposed allowing the use of mechanically deboned meat and low temperature rendered meat in hot dogs and some sausages. Consumer groups fought the proposal, a court ruling overturned the USDA, and the department formally withdrew the regulations.

MORTGAGES—Legislation was passed requiring financial institutions with more than $10 million in assets and operating in large urban areas to provide information on mortgage and home-improvement loans. The aim is to eliminate red-lining — the practice of refusing to lend mortgage money in old or poor neighborhoods.

WARRANTIES—The FTC issued rules to implement 1975 legislation on warranties. Under regulations taking effect this month, all written warranties for products costing more than $15 must contain a description of the parts or components covered, a statement of what the warrantor will do and information on settling disputes. The rules also require display of warranties so consumers can read them and compare at the time of sale.

THE BUREAU has been badly stung by disclosures that J. Edgar Hoover, its late and long-time director, misused his authority in a variety of ways and countenanced practices by his agents that the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence Activities characterized as "unworthy of a democracy and occasionally reminiscent of the tactics of totalitarian regimes."

"This is what my children have told me was going on," observed Sen. Philip A. Hart, the late Michigan Democrat who served on the special Senate committee that unearthed many of the abuses. "I did not believe it."

The FBI, whose executives have spent much of the last 18 months testifying before that committee and several others on Capitol Hill, might well have recovered fully from the criticism and public disillusionment provoked by the unveiling of its blemished history.

BUT CARTER'S bureau director will have more than history to contend with. The most stunning blow thus far, one with ramifications for the future, has been the discovery that dozens of present and former bureau agents and officials have been caught up in the ongoing Justice Department inquiry into the recent use of such illegal investigative techniques as burglaries and the "systematic theft" of government property.

Tension inside the bureau has occasionally run high as a hand-picked team of agents, known derisively as the "dirty dozen" and working at the direction of the Justice Department prosecutors, has been digging into the alleged crimes of fellow agents.

AT ONE point, bureau sources reported, members of the special team were confronted by agents in the bureau's giant Manhattan field office as the special team attempted to remove official records thought to reflect some of the illegal activities.

That confrontation passed without incident, but other sources say that old friends are no longer speaking in the corridors as some of those under investigation, granted partial immunity from prosecution, have begun to testify against their colleagues before federal grand juries in New York City and Washington.

As the stream of adverse disclosures grew from a trickle into a torrent, Kelley struggled to contain the damage to the bureau's image and to keep its investigative machinery turning smoothly. But his success has not been unqualified, and in some instances his efforts have only exacerbated internal divisions and further diminished the bureau's already dismal morale.

AND WHEN, out of apparent deference to the bureau's old guard, he delayed in removing Nicholas P. Callahan as his top deputy, Kelley caused some chafing among younger, less doctrinaire agents who saw the old Hoover lieutenant as the last guardian of outmoded and unfair traditions within the bureau.

Callahan's dismissal last July, a result of his implication in the bureau's administrative scandals, was followed by the quiet departures of several other long-time officials and, although Kelley has insisted that he was never under the sway of the "Hooverites," it was only after they began to leave that he reorganized the bureau's intelligence division and its mossy executive hierarchy.

The shakiness of Kelley's command up to then, and an object lesson for whoever follows him, was illustrated by the director's acknowledgement that he had been "deceived" by his aides into believing that burglaries by bureau agents had been halted by Hoover 10 years ago.

Justice Department prosecutors have since established that such burglaries have taken place with some frequency this decade, a few of them under Kelley's administration, although apparently without his knowledge, and they have also confirmed the rumors of illegal wiretapping by bureau agents that the director once dismissed as "patently false."

Although assessments of Kelley's performance as the nation's top law-enforcement officer vary, he has received much praise from Atty. Gen. Levi, who this week declared that the director had done an "outstanding" job in effecting a "complete transformation of priorities in the FBI."

Whether Kelley would have taken such steps without being compelled by the public disclosures of illegalities and improprieties is an open question, but it has lately become clear that he is committed in his own way to setting the bureau right.

Some of that commitment has been inspired by Levi, a distinguished legal scholar and confirmed civil libertarian, who by all accounts is distressed at what he has learned about the FBI. But the managerial and organizational reforms that Kelley has implemented in recent months will stand as his principal legacy to his as yet-unnamed successor.

Kelley is trying to redirect more resources toward the prosecution of white-collar and organized crime cases, cutting back on the marginal criminal investigations that have for years been the bureau's staple and have buttressed its statistical performance records.

He is liberalizing personnel policies, introducing modern planning techniques and pushing a career development program that identifies and speedily promotes agents with management ability.

But most important, he has dissolved the bureau's old domestic intelligence unit, the fountainhead of many of the bureau's past abuses, and reduced the number of "internal security" investigations by 98 per cent, dramatically reversing the trend toward increasing political surveillance of Americans begun four decades earlier when Franklin D. Roosevelt first asked Hoover to monitor Nazi and Communist sympathizers in this country.

In recent Senate testimony, Kelley attributed the cutback in domestic intelligence investigations in large part to the end of the Vietnam war, which he said had eliminated "a major cause for divisiveness in this country." He might also have mentioned, but did not, the decline in urban violence that occupied much of the bureau's time in the late 1960s.

But sociological factors are only part of the reason that the bureau's interest in Americans with divergent political views has fallen off from 21,414 active investigations three years ago to fewer than 300 today (the bureau handles some half-million cases of all kinds each year).

Another part is the bureau's own initiative in closing out the least productive of those cases, based on what Kelley terms a "quality over quantity" approach to deploying his manpower.

Of equal importance in the bureau's housecleaning, however, has been the role of the Justice Department, which earlier this year issued guidelines, the first ever, that substantially limit the grounds for opening and pursuing domestic security investigations.

'76 good year for consumer reform laws

LOUISE COOK
Associated Press

Consumers are beginning the new year with tighter controls over the food they eat, the drugs they take and the cars they drive.

Action by the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government at the federal level covered a wide range of topics in 1976. Here is a rundown on some of them:

ADDITIVES—The Food and Drug Administration banned Red Dye No. 2 and ended its provisional approval of Red Dye No. 4, used in maraschino cherries, and carbon black, used to color licorice. The agency OKd the use of Red No. 4 in externally applied drugs and cosmetics, but said carbon black cannot be used in food, drugs or makeup.

ADVERTISING—The Supreme Court overturned state laws prohibiting pharmacists from advertising prices for prescription drugs. The Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission also took steps to end bans on advertising by professionals such as doctors and lawyers.

AEROSOLS—The National Academy of Sciences said fluorocarbons used as propellants in some aerosols — particularly personal grooming products — threaten the ozone layer protecting the earth from harmful ultraviolet radiation. The FDA, with jurisdiction over most aerosols containing fluorocarbons, proposed that such products carry warning labels, saying they could harm the environment. The Consumer Product Safety Commission started proceedings for an outright ban on fluorocarbons in the products it supervises.

AIRLINES—The Supreme Court, in a case involving Ralph Nader, ruled that a passenger who has been bumped from an overbooked flight may sue the airline for damages.

ANTITRUST—Congress enacted a law allowing state attorneys general to bring antitrust actions on behalf of the citizens of their states against alleged price fixers. This is important in cases where the amount involved for any one consumer is small — say 15 cents — and therefore is not worth going to court over.

CARS—The Energy Policy and Conservation Act which took effect last March sets mandatory fuel-economy standards starting at 18 miles per gallon for 1978 cars and rising to 27.5 miles per gallon for 1985 models. Another law, applying to used cars, makes it a criminal offense to tamper with an odometer or to incompletely disclose mileage.

CREDIT—The Equal Credit Opportunity Act was expanded to make it illegal for creditors to discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, age or because all or part of the consumer's income is from public assistance. The law, effective this year, also requires creditors to tell consumers why they were turned down for credit.

FAIR TRADE—The last of the so-called "Fair Trade" laws went out of existence in March, thanks to federal legislation making it illegal for manufacturers to fix prices of consumer products sold by retailers.

FOOD LABELS—The FDA issued a final regulation regarding a uniform procedure for listing food ingredients on labels. The deadline for compliance is Jan. 1, 1978, although manufacturers may change labels earlier if they want to.

LEASING—Congress enacted a law requiring leasing companies to give consumers a written statement, before a contract is signed, describing: any extra charges such as license fees, the extent of any warranty, insurance coverage and the number, amount and due dates of payments.

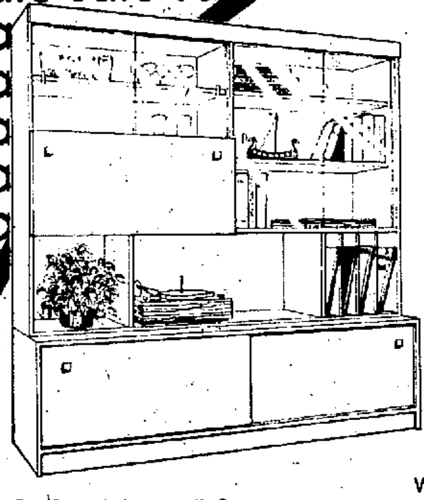

MEAT—The USDA proposed allowing the use of mechanically deboned meat and low temperature rendered meat in hot dogs and some sausages. Consumer groups fought the proposal, a court ruling overturned the USDA, and the department formally withdrew the regulations.

MORTGAGES—Legislation was passed requiring financial institutions with more than $10 million in assets and operating in large urban areas to provide information on mortgage and home-improvement loans. The aim is to eliminate red-lining — the practice of refusing to lend mortgage money in old or poor neighborhoods.

WARRANTIES—The FTC issued rules to implement 1975 legislation on warranties. Under regulations taking effect this month, all written warranties for products costing more than $15 must contain a description of the parts or components covered, a statement of what the warrantor will do and information on settling disputes. The rules also require display of warranties so consumers can read them and compare at the time of sale.

Dry humor brings no smiles in drought-hit Midwest

"It's so dry," Allen Pearson said, "that if a farmer in central or western Kansas got rain, he'd faint and have to be revived with a bucket of dust."

PEARSON, head of the National Weather Service office here and chief of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center, displayed a set of tables, graphs and charts showing that about three-fourths of Kansas and two-thirds of Missouri are drought areas by government standards.

Kansas City had its driest December since record-keeping began in 1888. Missouri and Kansas have fallen 12 inches short of average rainfall in 1976. Only in 1936 and 1954 was it drier.

Columbia, Mo., has had its driest year since 1901, with only 23 inches instead of the 37½-inch average.

"I am not saying we're in a severe drought," Pearson said. "What I am saying is that subsurface moisture in the two states is in pretty bad shape. And that's what we need to get replaced first."

ONE RAINFALL or snowfall will not cure the deficiency, he said.

"It will help, but if the rain hits frozen ground, it's just going to roll off. All that six inches of rain would do for us now is fill the farm ponds. What's needed now is snow cover, snow that percolates into the ground slowly as it melts."

Phil Shideler, chief meteorologist in Kansas for the National Weather Service, said signs of severe drought have been intensifying — dried up ponds, low reservoirs, exhausted top soil and subsoil moisture, some blowing dust, lowered water tables.

In Missouri, livestock farmers have been hauling water because their creeks, ponds and wells have dried up.

The most immediate effect on farmers is shown in the gaunt cattle moving through sales barns to slaughter houses at depressed prices. With pastures dead and hay costing $90 a ton, it is too expensive to keep and feed them.

The drought is also affecting the winter wheat crop. The federal government's Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said the "crop is in poor to fair condition. Stands are short and root development is poor as the result of the cold, dry fall."

Three weeks ago, without anticipating there would be almost no moisture in December, the service had estimated that the 1977 crop would be the third largest in Kansas history.

Don Bay, chief statistician for the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, said its Dec. 10 estimates that winter wheat acreage and yields will be down this year "reflect the fact that we have been very dry here since April 1."

Bay said the drought may also cut production of row crops such as soybeans, corn and cotton, because farmers will need more land next year to grow hay to replace their depleted reserves.

"I know right now it does not look very promising," said Verlin H. Peterson, crop and soils specialist of the extension service at Kansas State University.

"But I have learned not to make any predictions until about May. Last year's wheat crop had about everything going against it and it turned out to be one of the largest," he recalled.

The weather service's drought areas map shows a broad band from southwest to northeast Kansas, missing only a dozen or so counties in the northwest corner and another dozen or so in the southeast. The band continues along the southern edge of Iowa and takes in roughly the northern two-thirds of Missouri.

On 'will'

Print puzzles Dummar, too

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Melvin Dummar, the former gas station attendant named beneficiary in the "Mormon will" of Howard Hughes, says he doesn't know how his thumbprint could have gotten on the envelope containing the document.

Dummar claims he found Hughes wandering in the Nevada desert in 1968, gave him a ride and loaned him a quarter. Dummar would inherit one-sixteenth of Hughes' estate of about $2.5 billion if the "Mormon will" were declared valid.

THE three-page, handwritten document was found last April in the headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"About all I know on this case is what I read in the papers," Dummar told Barbara Bernstein of the Deseret News in an interview published Friday. "I just don't see how that thumbprint they say they found on the envelope is mine."

Dummar's attorney said Hughes' Summa Corp. has the capability of transferring Dummar's print to the document, but the attorney said he was making no such allegation.

Dummar told the Deseret News that he moved to Ogden after his landlady in Willard got a court order evicting him.

"I visit the Job Service every day," Dummar said. "I sent out to Syracuse (Utah) this week to apply for a job as a mechanic, but I haven't heard from them yet.

"I HAD several interviews with a local department store, and I thought they were going to offer me something in the carpet sales department, but they haven't called me back on it."

He said he spent most of his time working around the 100-year-old house where he and his wife, Bonnie, live, reading about himself in the paper, consulting with his lawyer and studying transcripts of Hughes-related court hearings.

Courts in several states are hearing cases involving claims on Hughes' estate.

Dry humor brings no smiles in drought-hit Midwest

"It's so dry," Allen Pearson said, "that if a farmer in central or western Kansas got rain, he'd faint and have to be revived with a bucket of dust."

PEARSON, head of the National Weather Service office here and chief of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center, displayed a set of tables, graphs and charts showing that about three-fourths of Kansas and two-thirds of Missouri are drought areas by government standards.

Kansas City had its driest December since record-keeping began in 1888. Missouri and Kansas have fallen 12 inches short of average rainfall in 1976. Only in 1936 and 1954 was it drier.

Columbia, Mo., has had its driest year since 1901, with only 23 inches instead of the 37½-inch average.

"I am not saying we're in a severe drought," Pearson said. "What I am saying is that subsurface moisture in the two states is in pretty bad shape. And that's what we need to get replaced first."

ONE RAINFALL or snowfall will not cure the deficiency, he said.

"It will help, but if the rain hits frozen ground, it's just going to roll off. All that six inches of rain would do for us now is fill the farm ponds. What's needed now is snow cover, snow that percolates into the ground slowly as it melts."

Phil Shideler, chief meteorologist in Kansas for the National Weather Service, said signs of severe drought have been intensifying — dried up ponds, low reservoirs, exhausted top soil and subsoil moisture, some blowing dust, lowered water tables.

In Missouri, livestock farmers have been hauling water because their creeks, ponds and wells have dried up.

The most immediate effect on farmers is shown in the gaunt cattle moving through sales barns to slaughter houses at depressed prices. With pastures dead and hay costing $90 a ton, it is too expensive to keep and feed them.

The drought is also affecting the winter wheat crop. The federal government's Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said the "crop is in poor to fair condition. Stands are short and root development is poor as the result of the cold, dry fall."

Three weeks ago, without anticipating there would be almost no moisture in December, the service had estimated that the 1977 crop would be the third largest in Kansas history.

Don Bay, chief statistician for the Missouri Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, said its Dec. 10 estimates that winter wheat acreage and yields will be down this year "reflect the fact that we have been very dry here since April 1."

Bay said the drought may also cut production of row crops such as soybeans, corn and cotton, because farmers will need more land next year to grow hay to replace their depleted reserves.

"I know right now it does not look very promising," said Verlin H. Peterson, crop and soils specialist of the extension service at Kansas State University.

"But I have learned not to make any predictions until about May. Last year's wheat crop had about everything going against it and it turned out to be one of the largest," he recalled.

The weather service's drought areas map shows a broad band from southwest to northeast Kansas, missing only a dozen or so counties in the northwest corner and another dozen or so in the southeast. The band continues along the southern edge of Iowa and takes in roughly the northern two-thirds of Missouri.

On 'will'

Print puzzles Dummar, too

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Melvin Dummar, the former gas station attendant named beneficiary in the "Mormon will" of Howard Hughes, says he doesn't know how his thumbprint could have gotten on the envelope containing the document.

Dummar claims he found Hughes wandering in the Nevada desert in 1968, gave him a ride and loaned him a quarter. Dummar would inherit one-sixteenth of Hughes' estate of about $2.5 billion if the "Mormon will" were declared valid.

THE three-page, handwritten document was found last April in the headquarters of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Authorities said Tuesday that Dummar's left thumbprint was found on the envelope with the will.

"About all I know on this case is what I read in the papers," Dummar told Barbara Bernstein of the Deseret News in an interview published Friday. "I just don't see how that thumbprint they say they found on the envelope is mine."

Dummar's attorney said Hughes' Summa Corp. has the capability of transferring Dummar's print to the document, but the attorney said he was making no such allegation.

Dummar told the Deseret News that he moved to Ogden after his landlady in Willard got a court order evicting him.

"I visit the Job Service every day," Dummar said. "I sent out to Syracuse (Utah) this week to appl" for a job as a mechanic, but I haven't heard from them yet.

"I HAD several interviews with a local department store, and I thought they were going to offer me something in the carpet sales department, but they haven't called me back on it."

He said he spent most of his time working around the 100-year-old house where he and his wife, Bonnie, live, reading about himself in the paper, consulting with his lawyer and studying transcripts of Hughes-related court hearings.

Courts in several states are hearing cases involving claims on Hughes' estate.

Manson cultist loses bail plea

Leslie Van Houten leaves Superior Court in Los Angeles Friday after Judge Jack Goertzen refused to lower $200,000 bail while she awaits a retrial in 1969 slaying of grocer Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary. Miss Van Houten, 27, a Charles Manson follower, was not involved in the Manson family murders of Sharon Tate and four other persons the day before the LaBianca slayings. Her 1971 conviction was overturned in November.

HOW TO SURVIVE NEW YEAR

—In Cozzo Lomellina, Italy, a controversial friar named Angelo Gelmini offered a 20-course dinner for $1,200, with proceeds promised for charity. "It's better they spend their money here than in gambling houses outside Italy," he said, adding that half of the 80 seats in his restaurant were reserved in advance.

—Athenians headed for the Greek countryside for the long weekend or traveled, by the thousands, to gambling parties where one local newspaper estimated that some $162 million would exchange hands.

—Giving the nation's Bicentennial year a proper sendoff, Boston held its first "First Night" celebration with 50 free events ranging from music to fireworks and a parade. Festivities were staged from subway stations to the Boston Common.

—A $100-per-person New Year's Eve dinner at the Beverly Hilton's Le Escoffier in Los Angeles started with pate foie gras and quail's egg and ended with Coupe Grimaldi, a Bavarian cream with Zabayon sauce. Also served: three wines and after-dinner liqueurs.

—"If you go, smoke a joint for me," said a nonreveling writer for a San Francisco underground newspaper of the Cow Palace concert featuring the Grateful Dead, Santana and the Sons of Champlin.

—Tickets cost up to $250 a head for a Liza Minnelli-Sammy Davis Jr. performance at the Diplomat Hotel in Miami. Among those slated to watch were Carol Channing, David Janssen, Richard Harris, George Hamilton, Lucille Ball and Norman Mailer.

—Women's groups in Omaha, Neb., were the hosts for a $5-per-person house party, with proceeds intended to help promote passage of the Equal Rights Amendment. Men were welcome.

—For a mere $3,235, up to 100 persons were able to take advantage of the time zones and celebrate the start of the new year at three different points as they headed east from New York to Paris aboard a Concorde supersonic jet.

—The Soviet news agency Tass reported that Friday night marked the 141st new year for Madjid Agayev. The retired shepherd, who lives in the village of Tikyaband, in the mountains, will celebrate his 142nd birthday on Feb. 2, the news agency said.

For those still wondering if, not when, they'll survive the day's excesses to celebrate their 1977 birthdays, a parting word from a New York bartender: "Bed rest and penance."

CONFLICT CODE

They could not, merely by resigning after the code was adopted, avoid filing the statements.

The code stipulates that an officer or employe, who participates in or makes decisions which have a material effect on a financial interest, is affected and is required to file an annual statement disclosing his interest in investments, real property and income.

"There are a lot of questions about this, but no problems as far as we know," Honda said.

"The first financial statements must be filed 30 days after the code is approved, and thereafter in February of each year, covering the preceding year."

And this, says Craig, is what he will refuse to do.

"For one thing, my term expires at the end of June, and to risk my entire financial worth for six months more on the Harbor Commission is not worth it.

"It is my understanding that we are subject to . . . civil damages in a lawsuit . . . should we fail to list a holding.

"For a $25-a-week Harbor Commission salary, it's not worth it.

"I'm not saying that the law is unfair," he said, "but I think what has happened is that the pendulum has swung too far because of Watergate, and the interpretation of this law could be that if I receive more than $1,000 from any source I must report it . . .

"That could be oil stock or whatever . . . a very easy thing to overlook.

"Any crackpot could sue us and take everything we own if we fail to list something in which we had an interest or in the event a conflict of interest develops."

HE HAS NO problem with conflict of interest, he says, although he has some interest in some property in the area.

"But every time that piece of property comes up . . . for lease or whatever . . . I withdaw from voting. I never even take part in the conversation."

He regrets having to resign, he says, because he has made some good friends with the Sohio officials in their attempts to build a terminal in the area for Alaskan oil, and will not see that to its conclusion.

"I'd like to be able to see those projects through," he says, "but I can work to support them on the outside—away from the commission."

Harbor General Manager Thomas J. Thorley also was scheduled to retire, but will delay his departure until May, at the request of the commissioners.

"I prefer not to file," he says frankly, "but the commission asked me to stay on a few more months, so I will have to file."

Other commissioners apparently feel they can continue and abide by the new Conflict of Interest Code. They said they are having no misgivings.

"OUR commissioners aren't faced with it," said Chance Hill, director of Parks, "because it's an advisory commission only and is not autonomous. But the city park officials must.

"We have nothing to hide, though . . . Park people aren't that wealthy . . . We have no intention of resigning."

"I know of no one on the commission who is planning to resign . . . nor have any resigned.

"After reviewing the code in detail, I saw nothing in it that wouldn't allow a person to serve . . .

NEW YEAR SHOWERS

Pasadena police spokesman John McAlister said the original estimate of 1.3 million spectators was expected to hold up despite the threatening skies.

"We've got more RVs down by the Rose Bowl than ever before," McAlister said. "So far, I don't see the weather as any deterrent."

A drizzle misted the Rose Parade in 1955, and it has been a dry spectacle since then.

The storm raised the season rainfall total in Long Beach since July 1 to almost 3 inches, compared to only .59 inch as of this day last year.

Travelers' advisories and chain restrictions were in effect for most mountain areas because of heavy snow showers.

Daytime mountain temperatures hovered near 30 degrees as skiers enjoyed the first sizable snowfall of the season. Resort lodges in Big Bear reported they were booked solid through the weekend.

The storm knocked down power lines in Los Angeles early Friday, blacking out lights for nearly 1,250 utility users. About 500 residents in Pacific Palisades were without power from 9 p.m. Thursday to 10 a.m. Friday.

The storm brought relief to the barren slopes of the Sierra Nevada, where the few ski resorts that remained open had been operating only a handful of runs. Forecasters predicted up to 2 feet of snow in most areas of the Sierra, providing a potential New Year's bonanza for anxious skiers.

Meanwhile in Northern California, fair weather was forecast after today in the wake of the Pacific storm's welcome rains and snow.

Travelers' advisories for the Sierra eased off as mountain snows showed signs of ending early today. Ski resort operators were elated over a 5-inch snowfall at higher elevations.

A second Pacific storm, which appeared pointed for the meteorological "gate" that opened after the long-lasting high pressure system broke up, has fizzled.

Some areas of Marin, San Mateo, San Francisco and Alameda counties received more than an inch of rainfall. While 48 million gallons of water fell in San Francisco's three big Peninsula reservoirs in 24 hours, thirsty Marin County reported little benefit from the rain.

Gas explosion traps 45 in Czech mine

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A gas explosion trapped 45 miners in a coal mine at Chlebovice in northern Moravia, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK said Friday. According to unofficial reports, there was little or no hope that they survived the blast.

CTK referred to the explosion at the Staric mine in the Ostrava coal basin Thursday night as "a tragedy" and said emergency crews were attempting to locate and rescue the missing miners.

It said "a substantial number of miners" managed to escape to the surface following the blast.

Government officials headed by Deputy Premier Josef Simon went to the scene soon after the explosion.

The Staric mine has a history of accidents. A cave-in killed a miner there in November 1974 and 11 miners were killed in a gas explosion in February 1975.

Assassinations panel asks to pursue probe

By DAVID BURNHAM
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The House Select Committee on Assassinations reported Friday that its preliminary probe of the murders of President Kennedy and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had uncovered enough unresolved questions to require a continuing investigation.

The committee made the statement in an interim report recommending that the 95th Congress — which meets for the first time Tuesday — approve a $6.5 million budget for the first year of a two-year investigation.

THE report said that, on the basis of "numerous areas of inquiry and the necessity to preserve evidence already under subpoena, the select committee unanimously recommends to the 95th Congress that the Select Committee on Assassinations be immediately reestablished to continue the investigation."

The committee cited several examples of what it called "new and disturbing questions" which remain unanswered about the two cases.

"Did the Central Intelligence Agency deliberately avoid furnishing critical information to the Federal Bureau of Investigation which would have resulted in the surveillance of Lee Harvey Oswald prior to the assassination of President Kennedy?" the report asked.

CONCERNING the killing of the Rev. Dr. King, the committee cited James Earl Ray's unexplained courtroom statement in 1969 disagreeing with remarks made by his attorney and the state prosecutor that there had not been a conspiracy to kill the civil rights leader. It added:

"The committee does not mean to imply that there was or was not a conspiracy; it merely indicates that this is one of the areas which requires further investigation, especially in view of the failure to obtain a full statement of involvement from Ray by the Tennessee authorities."

Legislation establishing the select committee was approved last Sept. 17 by the House of Representatives, and it has been operating under a $150,000 budget for the last three months. It has a staff of 68.

The committee several weeks ago approved a recommendation by Richard A. Sprague, its chief counsel and director, which said the investigation of the assassinations would require at least $13 million and two years to complete.

The committee's report and proposed budget will be used by its members to try to persuade the House to reestablish the committee and grant it the funds that Sprague has said are required to conduct an independent investigation of the two cases.

THE committee noted that 12 years had passed since the Warren Commission released its report finding that Oswald was the sole assassin of Kennedy and eight years since Ray's guilty plea was accepted.

"The passage of time has not healed the national trauma caused by these assassinations," the report concluded. "In the ensuing years, old doubts have remained, and new and disturbing questions have been raised as additional evidence has come to light."

Water rationing 'urged' for north

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown said Friday the state is urging — but not requiring — water rationing in 29 drought-stricken towns and water districts.

He also called for a statewide water conservation effort to ease the effects of California's lingering drought, eased only slightly by rain and snow this week.

The 29 communities and water districts are all in Northern and Central California. Most are small towns with inadequate storage capacity in their water systems to withstand prolonged drought.

But they include two medium-sized cities: Santa Cruz and Petaluma.

Brown's water resources director, Ron Robie, said most of them have been heeding the call to draw up rationing plans, even though water bills may have to be raised to make up for a loss of revenue caused by a drop in demand.

AT THE MOMENT, Brown told reporters, the state is not requiring rationing or the conservation and water exchanges between counties. But it is recommending these measures to meet the drought.

He said that if the actions aren't carried out voluntarily, the California Constitution gives the state "authority to require reasonable use of water and authority to prevent waste."

He said the state has the power to order water rationing, but that the decision is being left to local communities.

He said the state has drafted a model rationing ordinance for the 29 communities that includes such things as a $25 fine for repeated excessive watering of lawns.

Robie said the State Water Project expects to meet all its contracts to water users next year.

He said the state is willing to pay the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California to use more expensive Colorado River water rather than the Northern California water for which it has contracted. That would let some parched Northern California areas keep their water.

Tougher tanker rules to be sought by U.S.

Associated Press

A federal panel will recommend tighter regulations for oil tankers Jan. 8, but U.S. Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman cautioned Friday it could be far longer before tougher rules take effect.

Coleman commented in Falmouth, Mass., after being flown over the huge oil slick from the wrecked Argo Merchant off Nantucket Island.

The Liberian-registered tanker piled onto the shoals Dec. 15 and broke in two a week later, spewing 7.5 million gallons of heavy industrial oil over the Georges Bank, one of the world's richest fishing areas.

COLEMAN said the speed with which maritime laws and treaties are changed "will depend on how skillful" his successors in the Carter administration are.

Coleman said a new Transportation Department task force will examine the grounding and subsequent break-up of the Argo Merchant, the explosion of the Sansinena in Los Angeles harbor, the spill from the Olympic Games in the Delaware River near Philadelphia and the less serious grounding of the Daphne off Puerto Rico.

The four tankers are registered in Liberia.

Coleman warned that changes in maritime law would not be easy.

"WE'RE dealing with 163 nations, each one a sovereign nation, each one with an interest in the high seas. That means we'll have to work out an agreement," he said.

U.S. economic controls over the sea will be extended to 200 miles offshore March 1.

Meanwhile, in New York, the Argo Merchant's chif engineer testified that the ship got stuck in shallow water when the engine room flooded because the captain slammed it full speed in reverse.

The deep water in the engine room prevented rescuers from freeing the loaded tanker before it broke apart.

THE testimony was at an inquiry in federal court in New York. Another hearing was to be held Jan. 17 for the master of the Liberian tanker Olympic Games, which was moved Friday to an anchorage after a 134,000-gallon oil spill in the Delaware River on Monday.

THE Argo Merchant engineer, Panagiotis Sotiriou, said that when his tanker struck the shoal Dec. 15 off Nantucket Island the captain reversed engines to free it. But the ship shook so violently that a valve burst and sea water poured into the engine room.

The engine room was in the very rear of the ship, and the vessel grounded just forward of it.

Coast Guard spokesmen said that the weight of the water in the engine room prevented the Coast Guard from towing the tanker and floating it free of the shoal. They said the water's weight contributed to the eventual break-up of the tanker.

Cypress pilot, 3 others lost with plane in desert

A light plane carrying three passengers and piloted by a Cypress resident disappeared on a flight from Orange County Airport to Las Vegas Friday and was presumed down somewhere in the desert 28 miles southeast of Barstow, the California Civil Air Patrol reported.

The pilot was identified as J. Marzoa. The names of his passengers were not known.

CAP spokesman Frank Burnham said three ground rescue teams combing the area late Friday were to be joined by CAP search planes today. Bad weather prevented an air search Friday.

The twin-engine Beechcraft Baron took off from Orange County Airport at 3:13 p.m. Friday on an estimated 1½-hour flight to Las Vegas and, because the pilot had filed an instrument flight plan, was being tracked by radar when it disappeared.

Manson cultist loses bail plea

Leslie Van Houten leaves Superior Court in Los Angeles Friday after Judge Jack Goertzen refused to lower $200,000 bail while she awaits a retrial in 1969 slaying of grocer Leno LaBianca and his wife, Rosemary. Miss Van Houten, 27, a Charles Manson follower, was not involved in the Manson family murders of Sharon Tate and four other persons the day before the LaBianca slayings. Her 1971 conviction was overturned in November.

Assassinations panel asks to pursue probe

By DAVID BURNHAM
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The House Select Committee on Assassinations reported Friday that its preliminary probe of the murders of President Kennedy and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had uncovered enough unresolved questions to require a continuing investigation.

The committee made the statement in an interim report recommending that the 95th Congress — which meets for the first time Tuesday — approve a $6.5 million budget for the first year of a two-year investigation.

THE report said that, on the basis of "numerous areas of inquiry and the necessity to preserve evidence already under subpoena, the select committee unanimously recommends to the 95th Congress that the Select Committee on Assassinations be immediately reestablished to continue the investigation."

The committee cited several examples of what it called "new and disturbing questions" which remain unanswered about the two cases.

"Did the Central Intelligence Agency deliberately avoid furnishing critical information to the Federal Bureau of Investigation which would have resulted in the surveillance of Lee Harvey Oswald prior to the assassination of President Kennedy?" the report asked.

CONCERNING the killing of the Rev. Dr. King, the committee cited James Earl Ray's unexplained courtroom statement in 1969 disagreeing with remarks made by his attorney and the state prosecutor that there had not been a conspiracy to kill the civil rights leader. It added:

"The committee does not mean to imply that there was or was not a conspiracy; it merely indicates that this is one of the areas which requires further investigation, especially in view of the failure to obtain a full statement of involvement from Ray by the Tennessee authorities."

Legislation establishing the select committee was approved last Sept. 17 by the House of Representatives, and it has been operating under a $150,000 budget for the last three months. It has a staff of 68.

The committee several weeks ago approved a recommendation by Richard A. Sprague, its chief counsel and director, which said the investigation of the assassinations would require at least $13 million and two years to complete.

The committee's report and proposed budget will be used by its members to try to persuade the House to reestablish the committee and grant it the funds that Sprague has said are required to conduct an independent investigation of the two cases.

THE committee noted that 12 years had passed since the Warren Commission released its report finding that Oswald was the sole assassin of Kennedy and eight years since Ray's guilty plea was accepted.

"The passage of time has not healed the national trauma caused by these assassinations," the report concluded. "In the ensuing years, old doubts have remained, and new and disturbing questions have been raised as additional evidence has come to light."

Water rationing 'urged' for north

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown said Friday the state is urging — but not requiring — water rationing in 29 drought-stricken towns and water districts.

He also called for a statewide water conservation effort to ease the effects of California's lingering drought, eased only slightly by rain and snow this week.

The 29 communities and water districts are all in Northern and Central California. Most are small towns with inadequate storage capacity in their water systems to withstand prolonged drought.

But they include two medium-sized cities: Santa Cruz and Petaluma.

Brown's water resources director, Ron Robie, said most of them have been heeding the call to draw up rationing plans, even though water bills may have to be raised to make up for a loss of revenue caused by a drop in demand.

AT THE MOMENT, Brown told reporters, the state is not requiring rationing or the conservation and water exchanges between counties. But it is recommending these measures to meet the drought.

He said that if the actions aren't carried out voluntarily, the California Constitution gives the state "authority to require reasonable use of water and authority to prevent waste."

He said the state has the power to order water rationing, but that the decision is being left to local communities.

He said the state has drafted a model rationing ordinance for the 29 communities that includes such things as a $25 fine for repeated excessive watering of lawns.

Robie said the State Water Project expects to meet all its contracts to water users next year.

He said the state is willing to pay the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California to use more expensive Colorado River water rather than the Northern California water for which it has contracted. That would let some parched Northern California areas keep their water.

They could not, merely by resigning after the code was adopted, avoid filing the statements.

The code stipulates that an officer or employe, who participates in or makes decisions which have a material effect on a financial interest, is affected and is required to file an annual statement disclosing his interest in investments, real property and income.

"There are a lot of questions about this, but no problems as far as we know," Honda said.

"The first financial statements must be filed 30 days after the code is approved, and thereafter in February of each year, covering the preceding year."

And this, says Craig, is what he will refuse to do.

"For one thing, my term expires at the end of June, and to risk my entire financial worth for six months more on the Harbor Commission is not worth it.

"It is my understanding that we are subject to . . . civil damages in a lawsuit . . . should we fail to list a holding.

"For a $25-a-week Harbor Commission salary, it's not worth it.

"I'm not saying that the law is unfair," he said, "but I think what has happened is that the pendulum has swung too far because of Watergate, and the interpretation of this law could be that if I receive more than $1,000 from any source I must report it . . .

"That could be oil stock or whatever . . . a very easy thing to overlook.

"Any crackpot could sue us and take everything we own if we fail to list something in which we had an interest or in the event a conflict of interest develops."

HE HAS NO problem with conflict of interest, he says, although he has some interest in some property in the area.

"But every time that piece of property comes up . . . for lease or whatever . . . I withdaw from voting. I never even take part in the conversation."

He regrets having to resign, he says, because he has made some good friends with the Sohio officials in their attempts to build a terminal in the area for Alaskan oil, and will not see that to its conclusion.

"I'd like to be able to see those projects through," he says, "but I can work to support them on the outside—away from the commission."

Harbor General Manager Thomas J. Thorley also was scheduled to retire, but will delay his departure until May, at the request of the commissioners.

"I prefer not to file," he says frankly, "but the commission asked me to stay on a few more months, so I will have to file."

Other commissioners apparently feel they can continue and abide by the new Conflict of Interest Code. They said they are having no misgivings.

"OUR commissioners aren't faced with it," said Chance Hill, director of Parks, "because it's an advisory commission only and is not autonomous. But the city park officials must.

"We have nothing to hide, though . . . Park people aren't that wealthy . . . We have no intention of resigning."

"I know of no one on the commission who is planning to resign . . . nor have any resigned.

"After reviewing the code in detail, I saw nothing in it that wouldn't allow a person to serve . . .

Pasadena police spokesman John McAlister said the original estimate of 1.3 million spectators was expected to hold up despite the threatening skies.

"We've got more RVs down by the Rose Bowl than ever before," McAlister said. "So far, I don't see the weather as any deterrent."

A drizzle misted the Rose Parade in 1955, and it has been a dry spectacle since then.

The storm raised the season rainfall total in Long Beach since July 1 to almost 3 inches, compared to only .59 inch as of this day last year.

Travelers' advisories and chain restrictions were in effect for most mountain areas because of heavy snow showers.

Daytime mountain temperatures hovered near 30 degrees as skiers enjoyed the first sizable snowfall of the season. Resort lodges in Big Bear reported they were booked solid through the weekend.

The storm knocked down power lines in Los Angeles early Friday, blacking out lights for nearly 1,250 utility users. About 500 residents in Pacific Palisades were without power from 9 p.m. Thursday to 10 a.m. Friday.

The storm brought relief to the barren slopes of the Sierra Nevada, where the few ski resorts that remained open had been operating only a handful of runs. Forecasters predicted up to 2 feet of snow in most areas of the Sierra, providing a potential New Year's bonanza for anxious skiers.

Meanwhile in Northern California, fair weather was forecast after today in the wake of the Pacific storm's welcome rains and snow.

Travelers' advisories for the Sierra eased off as mountain snows showed signs of ending early today. Ski resort operators were elated over a 5-inch snowfall at higher elevations.

A second Pacific storm, which appeared pointed for the meteorological "gate" that opened after the long-lasting high pressure system broke up, has fizzled.

Some areas of Marin, San Mateo, San Francisco and Alameda counties received more than an inch of rainfall. While 48 million gallons of water fell in San Francisco's three big Peninsula reservoirs in 24 hours, thirsty Marin County reported little benefit from the rain.

Gas explosion traps 45 in Czech mine

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A gas explosion trapped 45 miners in a coal mine at Chlebovice in northern Moravia, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK said Friday. According to unofficial reports, there was little or no hope that they survived the blast.

CTK referred to the explosion at the Staric mine in the Ostrava coal basin Thursday night as "a tragedy" and said emergency crews were attempting to locate and rescue the missing miners.

It said "a substantial number of miners" managed to escape to the surface following the blast.

Government officials headed by Deputy Premier Josef Simon went to the scene soon after the explosion.

The Staric mine has a history of accidents. A cave-in killed a miner there in November 1974 and 11 miners were killed in a gas explosion in February 1975.

Foretelling the future is just anybody's guess

By BOYCE RENSBERGER
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Ten Harvard undergraduates, cooperating in a test of "psychic" powers to tell the future, did slightly better than 10 nationally prominent "psychics" whose predictions were published in The National Enquirer.

The difference was not statistically significant, however, and a researcher, whose report appears in the first issue of a new journal dedicated to investigating claims of paranormal phenomena, concluded that there was no difference between the predicting ability of professional "psychics" and persons who do not claim such powers.

Both sets of predictions were made at the beginning of 1973 and were reviewed for accuracy by an independent panel at the end of the year.

The researcher, Dr. Gary Alan Fine, a sociologist at the University of Minnesota, said that, although "psychics" appear no better able to predict the future than anyone else, they served a purpose in society.

"People have a desire to reduce the uncertainty in their lives — these predictions point up occurrences which are possible and otherwise unexpected," Fine wrote. "By making the future somewhat more 'predictable and less problematic,' anxiety about the unknown is reduced."

Although Fine did not report the actual predictions, he said there was a qualitative difference between those of the professionals and the students. The amateurs worded their forecasts more mundanely while the "physics" made predictions with consequences that sounded more exotic or cataclysmic.

"PSYCHICS," Fine wrote, "do not randomly choose their predictions but use, perhaps subconsciously, certain formulas and 'tricks of the trade.' Being a psychic is a career. Just as faith healers, stockbrockers and political analysts must learn to make predictions which should be possible though not obvious, psychics must learn the proper level of credibility for which to strive."

The new journal, a semiannual called The Zetetic, is named for the ancient Greek followers of the skeptic Pyrrho. The word means "seeker." The journal is published by the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, a group formed last spring. It grew out of an ad hoc group that published a statement in 1975 condemning astrology as charlatanism.

PAUL KURTZ, co-chairman of the committee, who is a professor of philosophy at the State University of New York at Buffalo, said that the new journal would keep readers informed about the latest developments in paranormal studies.

"In the past," he said, "persons interested in the paranormal have not had access to negative results, for they are rarely seen as newsworthy. The alleged positive results are often unsatisfying because of inadequate scientific controls. 2 more seated on bomb-death jury

TUCSON (AP) — Publicity that led to a mistrial in Phoenix in an investigative newspaper reporter's slaying has not affected potential jurors as much in the second trial in Tucson.

Two more potential jurors were seated in a half-day session Friday, bringing the total chosen in two days to seven. When 37 are selected, the defense and prosecution can each eliminate 10, leaving a 12-member panel and five alternates.

PROSPECTIVE jurors are being questioned in the case of John Harvey Adamson, 33, charged with murdering Don Bolles, who reported on land fraud for the Arizona Republic. Bolles died 11 days after his car was bombed last June 2 in Phoenix.

Two potential jurors questioned by Superior Court Judge Ben C. Birdsall Friday knew of the case from the news media, but said they could put details out of their minds.

Five jurors chosen Thursday said they recalled vague details.

The first trial started in Phoenix on Oct. 18, but a mistrial was declared three days later after potential jurors questioned all said they knew about the case through massive local publicity.

The case was moved to Tucson three weeks ago when the Arizona Supreme Court ordered a change of venue at the request of the defense.

One woman questioned Friday, a housewife, expressed sympathy for Bolles and his family, saying she was "impressed by how he suffered and fought for his life."

But, under Birdsall's questioning, she said she could put the sympathy out of her mind in deciding on a verdict.

Six of the seven potential jurors seated are women. Two other potential jurors have been excused over hardships they said would result from being sequestered about four weeks.

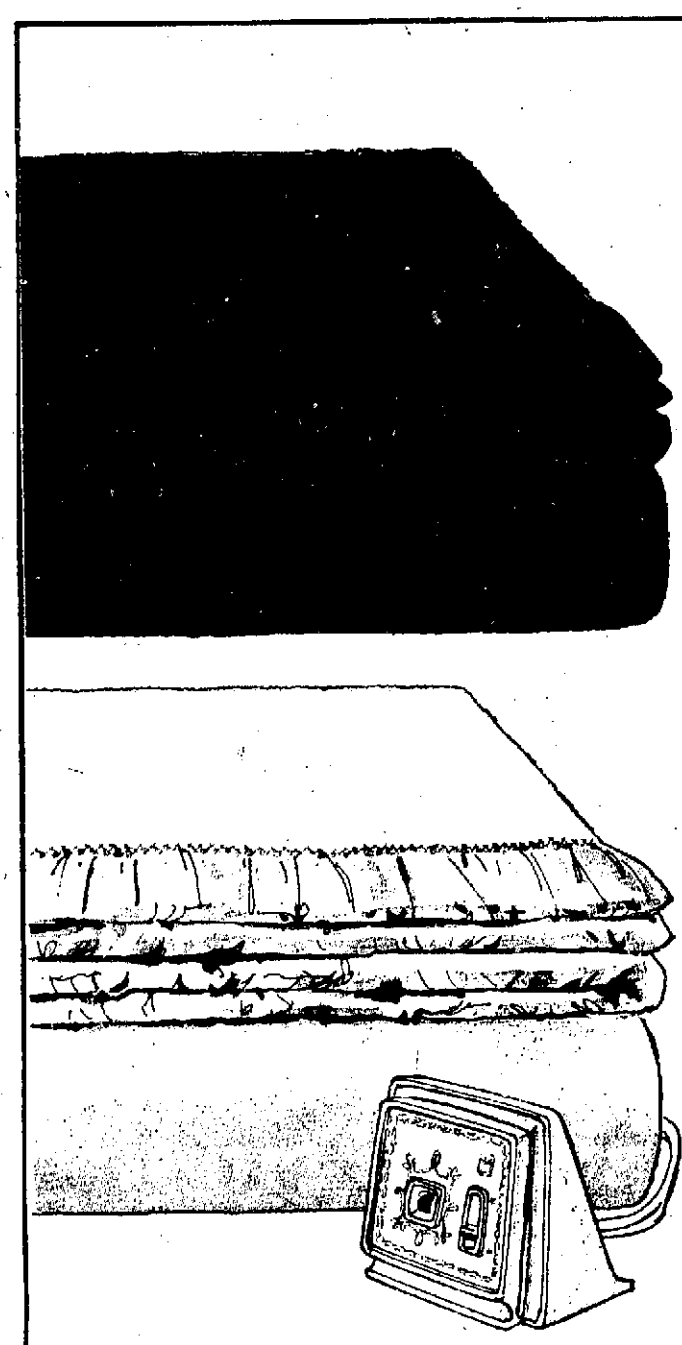

Birdsall has asked that names of the jurors not be made public.

In the questioning, potential jurors get a three-page list of names of possible trial witnesses or persons who might be mentioned in the testimony.

There was no comment from lawyers on the names, or if any of them would be called as witnesses.

Now going on.

Foretelling the future is just anybody's guess

By BOYCE RENSBERGER
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Ten Harvard undergraduates, cooperating in a test of "psychic" powers to tell the future, did slightly better than 10 nationally prominent "psychics" whose predictions were published in The National Enquirer.

The difference was not statistically significant, however, and a researcher, whose report appears in the first issue of a new journal dedicated to investigating claims of paranormal phenomena, concluded that there was no difference between the predicting ability of professional "psychics" and persons who do not claim such powers.

Both sets of predictions were made at the beginning of 1978 and were reviewed for accuracy by an independent panel at the end of the year.

The researcher, Dr. Gary Alan Fine, a sociologist at the University of Minnesota, said that, although "psychics" appear no better able to predict the future than anyone else, they served a purpose in society.

"People have a desire to reduce the uncertainty in their lives — these predictions point up occurrences which are possible and otherwise unexpected," Fine wrote. "By making the future somewhat more 'predictable and less problematic,' anxiety about the unknown is reduced."

Although Fine did not report the actual predictions, he said there was a qualitative difference between those of the professionals and the students. The amateurs worded their forecasts more mundanely while the "physics" made predictions with consequences that sounded more exotic or cataclysmic.

"PSYCHICS," Fine wrote, "do not randomly choose their predictions but use, perhaps subconsciously, certain formulas and 'tricks of the trade.' Being a psychic is a career. Just as faith healers, stockbrockers and political analysts must learn to make predictions which should be possible though not obvious, psychics must learn the proper level of credibility for which to strive."

The new journal, a semiannual called The Zetetic, is named for the ancient Greek followers of the skeptic Pyrrho. The word means "seeker." The journal is published by the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, a group formed last spring. It grew out of an ad hoc group that published a statement in 1975 condemning astrology as charlatanism.

PAUL KURTZ, co-chairman of the committee, who is a professor of philosophy at the State University of New York at Buffalo, said that the new journal would keep readers informed about the latest developments in paranormal studies.

"In the past," he said, "persons interested in the paranormal have not had access to negative results, for they are rarely seen as newsworthy. The alleged positive results are often unsatisfying because of inadequate scientific controls. The result has all too often been that unsubstantiated claims are taken as gospel truth by an uncritical public."

Six plan 4,000-mile trip by snowmobile

By ELLEN GRZECH
Knight News Service

DETROIT — Brickmason Lester Wolfe on Monday will lead five other Michigan men on a two-month, 4,000-mile snowmobile trip to Alaska in temperatures that will probably average about 50 degrees below zero.

By the time they reach Fairbanks, after 59 days of traveling on trails and across the Canadian countryside, the six men will have gone through 4,200 gallons of gasoline, 600 pounds of food and 720 candy bars.

Wolfe swears that he and his crew are not crazy, just looking for a little adventure and glory.

"IT'S NEVER been done before, so I decided to do it," Wolfe said Friday in a telephone interview from Sault Ste. Marie, Canada. "I think everybody likes a little prestige — this is one way to get it."

Wolfe said that the cross-Canada trek will be the longest continuous snowmobile trip ever made. The present record is a 3,100-mile trek through Canada toward the Arctic, he said.

He has been planning this expedition for over a year and estimates it will cost about $100,000.

The six have kicked in about $15,000 for the trip, and the rest has come in small cash contributions, donations of equipment and loans such as the six big snowmobiles the men will ride.

Wolfe began looking for donations and for men to join him after he thought up the idea for the trip last winter.

The 40-year-old contractor from Houghton Lake got volunteers for the crew ranging from an Air Force colonel to a truck driver.

Lt. Col. Ed Whitney, 42, joined the expedition after Wolfe contacted Wurtsmith Air Force base near Oscoda, Mich., to borrow equipment. Computer programmer Larry Kiffner, 39, and truck driver Jerry Lounds, 46, both heard about Wolfe's trip in nearby Prudenville, where they live.

Allan Sevener, 29, left the movie theater he operates in Petoskey to become Wolfe's cinematographer. And 26-year-old Ken Smith of Traverse City joined to write about the trek after hearing about it from a reporter.

Wolfe said that although small personality differences have surfaced among the men, who had never met before, none have been serious.

The six will leave Monday from Central Patricia in western Ontario and will travel northwest through Thompson, Manitoba, Hay River in the Northwest territories and Dawson in the Yukon.

Although they will make 21 stops for gas, they will hit mostly Hudson Bay posts, Indian villages and some small towns.

Each sled will carry between 500 and 600 pounds of supplies like food, gas, chainsaws, heaters, equipment for camping, hunting and fishing, generators and "enough parts to build a snowmobile," Wolfe said.

The men will also be packing some fishing supplies, pen and pencil sets and cigarette lighters to hand out to the Indians, Wolfe said.

The men will eat everything from ham and eggs to goulash and stews, since their wives cooked and froze enough food for the trip.

They decided against carrying much freeze-dried food because "it's no good," Wolfe said with a laugh.

To beat the cold, the men will wear thermal and down underwear, down vests, one or two snowmobile suits and jackets if necessary.

WOLFE SAID ONE spot they will be passing in the Yukon had a recorded low of 83 below, although the temperatures will be 40 or 50 below most of the time they are traveling.

"It's even colder when you're running because of the wind-chill factor," Wolfe said.

Smith, a freelance writer, said he was taking pencils to make notes because "ink would freeze up."

Wolfe and Smith said they did not follow any training plan to get ready for the trek, although the machines were taken on practice runs.

He said he was making the trip for the "adventure, and meeting people in this different culture."

"Besides, I don't have anything else to do," he said.

The men will take pictures and films of their trip, which they hope to sell as a documentary for television.

By PEGGY ANDERSEN

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — For thousands of years Eskimos in Alaska were subsistence hunters, taking the food they needed from vast caribou herds and the bountiful Arctic Ocean.

Now the state wants them to be conservationists, but the Eskimos say they're short on meat and don't want any advice from the white man.

Snowmobiles and modern weaponry made subsistence hunting too efficient, forcing restrictions on hunting this year for the first time to revitalize the dwindling western arctic caribou herd.

THE FIRST test of the state's ability to limit native hunting, state game officials say, will come near the arctic community of Barrow, to which herd migration patterns have brought about 8,000 animals.

Biologists with the Alaska Department of Fish and Game say the caribou herd has dwindled from about 140,000 animals in 1970 to near 50,000 this year.

The state began issuing hunting permits in an effort to reduce the number of caribou killed annually from about 25,000 to 3,000. Biologists say the herd cannot reproduce fast enough to recover unless pressure on the animals is relieved.

Some Eskimo hunters, unhappy with the shortage of fresh meat and new restrictions on Eskimo hunting rights, say they do not intend to sit idly when the herd passes by.

Barrow was issued 375 permits — less than one caribou per household — because of its proximity to the Arctic Ocean's whale and seal populations, traditional Eskimo meat sources.

And Commissioner of Fish and Game James Brooks said, "A couple of thousand caribou very near to the village might prove to be a temptation to some of the villagers."

Public Safety Commissioner Richard Burton said he would prosecute violators of the new rules. The department's fish and wildlife protection unit and agents of the Department of Fish and Game were in the community Friday to enforce the rules, he said.

"We don't know how they will react," Brooks said. "We trust they won't be tempted to harvest in excess of the permit."

Spokesmen for the North Slope Borough Fish and Game Management Committee dispute the state estimates of present herd size, saying the apparent reduction in size is due to migration.

"In this case, I don't think our figures can be challenged," Brooks said, noting that the department had spent thousands of hours doing aerial counts of the caribou population.

Barrow Magistrate Sadie Neakok, a lifelong resident and Barrow's only court official, has disqualified herself from any case involving caribou violations.

"I can't handle anything that big," she said Thursday. "There is too much personal-type feeling among my own people for me to enforce it in my court."

Mrs. Neakok noted that although the whale harvest was good, much of the meat was lost because of a shortage of boats, and ice conditions were too dangerous to permit seal hunting.

She added: "It costs $85 for a beef dinner for one family . . . and store-bought meat is not too appetizing to the Eskimo."

The borough game committee also complained that the state had not produced promised aid during the meat shortage.

Gov. Jay Hammond asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture for disaster aid to the area, but the request was denied.

Year starting off on the right paw

CHICAGO (AP) — Doris and Bobbie are throwing a New Year's Day party. The guests are a pack of dogs living in a forest preserve. The menu includes chicken noodle soup and homemade cookies.

Dogs of all kinds and sizes have been running loose in the wooded South Side preserve, dumped there as unwanted pets, says Sandy Lapinzine, superintendent of the preserve.

Doris Morgan, a 53-year-old widow, and Bobbie Tisdale, a 50-year-old grandmother, have been feeding them daily for the last two years. They operate the Southwest Animal Adoption Center.

The dogs, running in packs numbering as many as a dozen or so, scatter in the woods to elude city dog catchers armed with tranquilizer guns, Lapinzine says.

"But they come to us when we whistle or call," Mrs. Morgan said. "We feed them at the same spots. We've never been bitten. They aren't going to bite the hand that feeds them. Sometimes we can leash one of them and take it to a vet to be checked before we put it up for adoption."

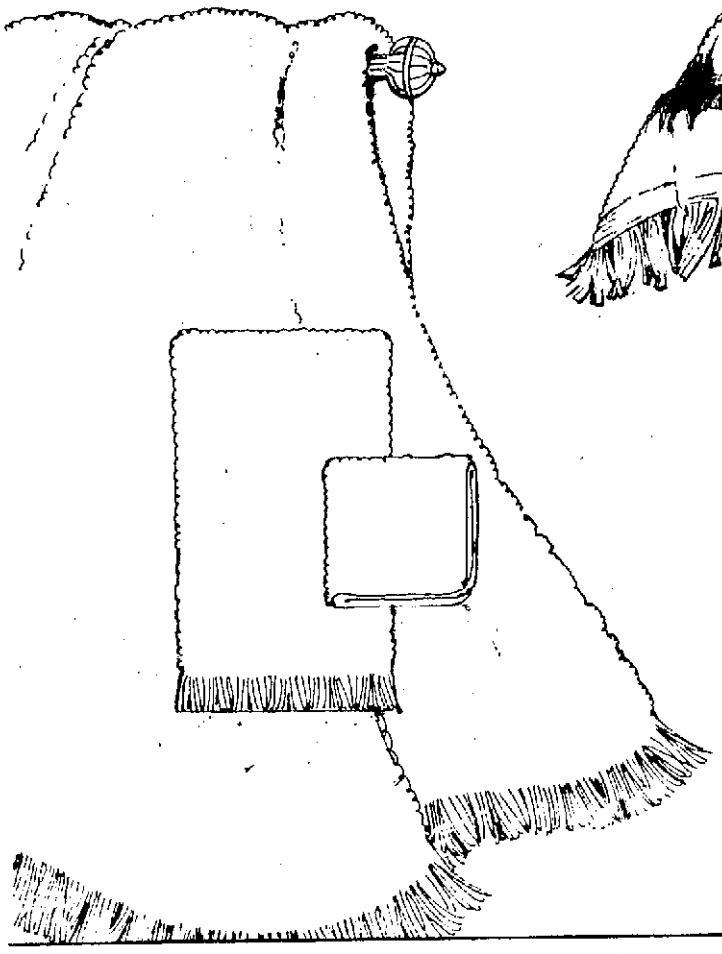

Mrs. Morgan said she and her partner normally take buckets of table scraps mixed with regular dog food and vitamins, but "to start the new year off right, we are mixing in hot chicken noodle soup. We are baking them cookies as a special treat."

The food will be put on plastic trays. "We just don't throw it on the cold ground," she said. "Temperatures are expected to be near zero."

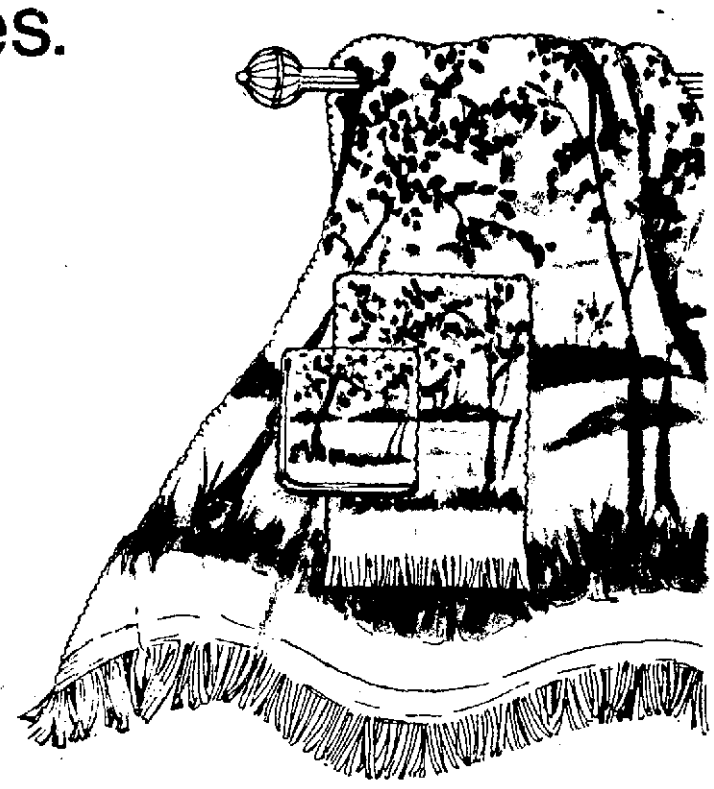

Mrs. Morgan admits that it may seem strange to "go to all this trouble just to take care of dogs roaming around a forest preserve."

"But they've gotten to depend on us," she said.

Milk rule hits Amish farmers

Electricity use scorned

SHIPSHEWANA, Ind. (AP) — Hundreds of Amish dairy farmers, unwilling to compromise their religious beliefs, are being forced out of business by a state regulation requiring them to cool their milk by modern means.

The regulation, going into effect March 1, requires that warm, fresh milk be cooled to 50 degrees Fahrenheit within two hours after it leaves the cow, a process that can be accomplished only by refrigeration. The rapid cooling is intended to prevent growth of bacteria.

But the Amish, who traditionally have cooled their milk with cold water or ice, are forbidden by their religion to use electricity, the source of power for most milk-cooling systems.

AS A result, many Amish are having to sell their herds of dairy cows and many are either planning to raise chickens or hogs or are seeking employment in the mobile home factories dominant in the area.

"We know there's going to be some economic loss involved," said Herbert W. Koenig, chief of the milk production section of the State Board of Health. "But we think it's a valid law.

"We're not unsympathetic to the Amish," he explained, noting that enforcement of the regulation, passed in 1973, has been held up so that some accommodation could be worked out with Amish leaders.

But he added: "Modern cooling procedures have been shown to reduce the bacteria content of milk and that can cut down on intestinal diseases."

SOME Amish, caught between their beliefs and the prospect of losing their source of income, are trying to comply as best they can. Gasoline- and diesel-powered cooling systems could hold the key.

"Using electricity is being like the rest of the world and Scripture teaches them not to conform to the rest of the world," explained Paul J. Miller, owner of Wana Hardware in this small northeastern Indiana community.

"For the past two years, we've booked up many mechanical coolers with gas engines," said Miller, whose customers are predominately Amish.

"Basically, they're saying, 'We'll do what we can to conform.' They're going to do what's required as far as their consciences will let them go."

However, the mechanical coolers are expensive, since there is only a limited market for them, and many of the Amish dairy farmers affected by the regulation cannot afford them.

OFFICIALS of the County Line Cheese Co. in Auburn, Ind., which did $3-million worth of business with Amish dairy farmers in 1975 and expects about the same for 1976, said no bad or inferior products were produced on Amish farms that did not refrigerate.

Under Egypt's prodding

Arabs adopt softer stand toward Israel

By ELIAS ANTAR

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The Arabs, under influence from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, appear to be adopting their most moderate stance on Israel since the birth of the Jewish state in 1948.

Such a stand is likely to manifest itself at Geneva talks on the Middle East which may reopen in March.

The Egyptian president started his "peace offensive" in early November. Since then in statements to U.S. congressmen and interviews with newspapers and magazines, Sadat has outlined the changing Arab position on a Middle East peace settlement.

WHAT HAS emerged is not just the traditional firm stand on Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories, but also a new willingness for give-and-take negotiations to settle the three-decade-old dispute.

Sadat's declarations are significant because for the first time in more than a year he again speaks for almost all the Arabs likely to be dealing with Israel. But he has stressed that the ideas are his own and that more inter-Arab talks are expected until the opening day of a Geneva conference.

The end of the Lebanese civil war in October, the reconciliation between Cairo and Damascus and the all-important backing of Saudi Arabia for both countries opened the way for the peace drive.

Sadat's strategy has been to impress the incoming administration of President-elect Carter with Arab moderation. He also has cited the need for speed, cornering the Israelis into making concessions, and getting the Palestinians to drop war and switch to negotiations.

As explained by Sadat to three U.S. congressional delegations and in five interviews since November, the Arabs have demands concerning the convocation of the conference itself, plus others without which they say there can be no permanent peace.

— After first saying the Geneva conference — which assembled under U.S.-Soviet chairmanship for only two days in December 1973 — could be reconvened in six months, the Arabs now are demanding it be held no later than March 31.

— The Arab participants should be Egypt, Syria, Jordan, Lebanon and Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization — PLO — Sadat has said.

In Tel Aviv, Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said Friday he favored "early informal consultations" with Jordan and Palestinian leaders from the occupied West Bank representing Palestinian Arabs in the talks.

— They should go as separate delegations, including the PLO, Sadat has said. Israel does not recognize the right of the PLO to negotiate for the Palestinians and so far has refused to deal with Arafat, but officials in Tel Aviv have said they would not object to Palestinian representation within the Jordanian delegation.

— The Arabs demand total Israeli withdrawal to the borders of June 4, 1967, the day before the third Arab-Israeli war broke out. Israel has rejected this out of hand.

— This withdrawal should take place within about three months after a settlement is reached, and not in extended phases covering several years.

— A totally independent Palestinian state should be set up on the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip after Israel withdraws from these two areas, Sadat has said. Israel has rejected this in advance.

— Any international guarantees assuring Israel of secure borders also should apply to the Arabs.

In return for fulfillment of these demands, Sadat has said Egypt or the other Arabs would be willing to do the following:

— Sign a formal agreement ending the state of war with Israel. But he has ruled out a peace treaty that would include diplomatic relations and open borders, as demanded by the Israelis.

— Accept international guarantees for the peace borders from the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France "and even China."

— Agree to allow U.N. troops to police these borders, and also to ensure freedom of navigation in the Red Sea's Gulf of Aqaba bordered by the Sinai, Israel, Jordan and Saudi Arabia.

— Accept a link between the Palestinian state and Jordan, in the form of a confederation or some other formula. Israel supports such a link rather than an independent Palestine.

— Accept a military security pact between the United States and Israel if it was deemed necessary in the context of an overall peace settlement.

— Agree to making the Middle East a nuclear-free zone if Israel also agreed.

Knight News Service

TEL AVIV — With even the date for Israel's premature elections still to be set, the race for a new government chief already is underway with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin taking a slight lead.

Defense Minister Shimon Peres is running a close second, and Foreign Minister Abba Eban is third.

The contest, which has split the Labor Party, has some senior party leaders worried. They fear the image of a divided party will have a negative impact at the polls.

RABIN and Peres have been feuding ever since the spring of 1974 when Rabin elbowed out Peres for the party's nomination to succeed Golda Meir as prime minister. From time to time, the wrangling has broken into the open. Rabin has accused Peres of incompetency; Peres has labeled Rabin a dictator.

Eban minced no words when he publicly warned party leaders that unless labor presents "a new team and a new leader of the team, it will fail to gain public confidence" in the elctions forced by Rabin's abrupt resignation Dec. 20. Eban's problem, however, is that he has failed to hit it off with some Labor Party old-timers who consider him too aloof and scholarly.

Eban minced no words when he publicly warned party leaders that unless labor presents "a new team and a new leader of the team, it will fail to gain public confidence" in the elections forced by Rabin's abrupt resignation Dec. 20. Eban's problem, however, is that he has failed to hit it off with some Labor Party old-timers who consider him too aloof and scholarly.

Berrigans recant criticism of Hanoi

By HENRY S. BRADSHER
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Two of the most prominent opponents of the Vietnam war, the Berrigan brothers, have recanted their signatures on a letter accusing Hanoi of violating human rights, and have been invited to talk to Vietnam's observer at the United Nations.

The Rev. Daniel Berrigan reported this the day after other former antiwar leaders publicly renewed charges of Vietnamese human rights violations, including political and religious jailings, and complained of the U.N. observer's refusal to meet them.

THE MOVEMENT that criticized the old Nguyen Van Thieu regime in Saigon for human rights violations, and opposed U.S. involvement in the war, has in recent months split into three elements.

One faction criticizes the newly unified Socialist Republic of Vietnam, another denies reports that Vietnam is holding political prisoners, and a third faction takes a middle position of saying there is insufficient evidence to judge.

Daniel and Philif Berrigan, Daniel Ellsberg, Joan Baez and other antiwar figures, signed a letter to U.N. Observer Dinh Ba Thi in November complaining of "grievous and systematic violations of human rights" in Vietnam. "The evidence is too concrete and persuasive to be ignored," the letter said.

Those who felt the evidence was insufficent included Quakers and Mennonites, who kept relief workers in Vietnam after the Communist victory April 30, 1975. They felt that information available to these workers before the last ones left last summer failed to substantiate accusations of imprisoning persons for religious and ideological beliefs.

Before the November letter was disclosed Dec. 16 by The Washington Star, informed sources said that the Berrigans and some other signers had told friends they would disavow their signatures if the letter became public.

The Berrigans, and three antiwar leaders who had not signed the letter, mailed The Star a comment on the Dec. 16 report. It said they "wish to clarify our common convictions."

"WE BELIEVE first of all that the greatest single obstacle to the rebuilding of Vietnam is the U.S. government," their letter says. It criticized the government for seeking to isolate Vietnam by excluding it from the United Nations and for refusing aid to Vietnam in a "lingering spirit of revenge."

But the November letter, and a similar one sent to the U.N. observer in October by A Citizens' Organization for a Sane World, "raised charges in an irresponsible manner," the new Berrigan letter says. "We have received new materials from Vietnam that give us confidence that the new government is deeply concerned about human rights in their country, and is working hard, in the midst of postwar devastation, to guarantee these rights ...

"WE ARE confident that Vietnam will offer the world in a dark time, an example of pro-human conduct, compassionate, just and generous.

"We will continue to question our friends in Vietnam about matters which the original letters brought up; that is to say, the status of civil and religious rights, of political prisoners, of the alleged deaths by immolation."

But, the letter adds, similar questions need to be raised about "the world at large," and American policies need to be questioned, too.

China restrains antiradical drive

HONG KONG (AP) — The Chinese government, which used troops to put down support for Mao Tse-tung's radical widow in some areas, is worried that elsewhere the campaign against her may get out of hand, various reports indicated Friday.

Broadcasts from the provinces have called on the people to act on official directives only and to stop leaving their jobs without permission to denounce Mao's widow, Chiang Ching. She and three other top radicals, dubbed the "gang of four" by the official press, were purged in October, a month after Mao's death.

A Yunnan broadcast appealed for care in attacking officials who rose to prominence under radical influence of the past. It indicated that some have been subjected to indiscriminate action without consideration for guilt or innocence.

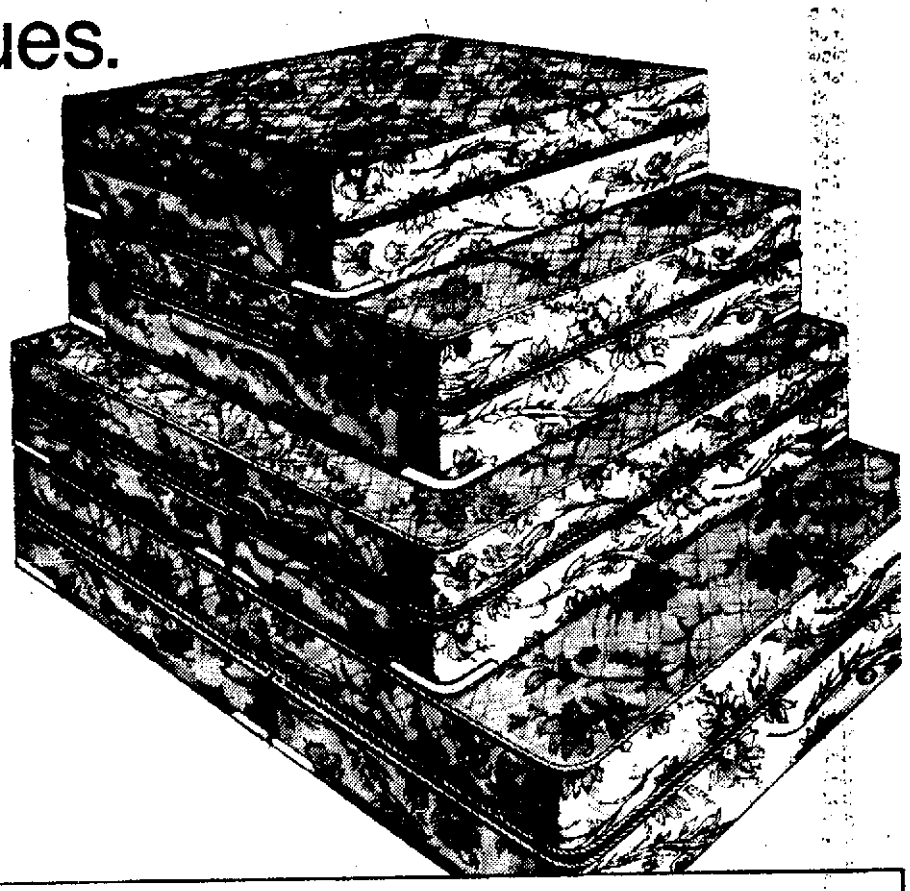

Such actions could upset the efforts of Hua Kuo-feng, Mao's successor as Communist Party chief, to woo the radicals with a promise of leniency to those who repent and come over to his side.

Earlier reports said supporters of Chiang Ching had created "great havoc" in the city of Paoting, 100 miles southwest of Peking. Order was restored only by "concerted effort" of the army, the official reports said.

Chinese broadcasts have also reported antigovernment disturbances in other provinces.

The radicals have been accused by the official media of plotting to depose Hua so that Chiang Ching could succeed her husband.

Port cleanup operation 'most costly ever'

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

Teams of eight to 12 hardhat divers, their face masks and bloated rubber suits covered with black oil, are attempting to suck up oil spilled from the tanker Sansinena's ruptured tanks after it exploded and sank in Los Angeles Harbor Dec. 17.

"We're using hardhat divers exclusively because the suits protect the divers from the oil," said Torrance Parker, owner-manager of Parker Diving Service in San Pedro. "They can't see a thing. But these guys are pros.

"They can feel their way around," he added.

"We are working at about 50 feet using special submersible air pumps to vacuum the oil out from around and beneath the ship and pump it up to storage tanks on the surface and into floating oil barges."

BOTH PARKER and Union Oil Company officials declined to estimate how much bunkers (ship's fuel) has leaked from the ill-fated 810-foot, 38,562-deadweight-ton tanker. At the time of the explosion the ship had unloaded its oil cargo and had taken on about 26,000 barrels of fuel.

Just how much of the fuel oil spilled out or how much still may be trapped inside the bow and stern sections, none of the various investigating teams would estimate.

However, Parker and Coast Guard divers report the leaked oil appears to be fairly well contained within a 1,250-foot long, 250-foot wide, and 50-foot deep dredged channel that allows deep-draft loaded tankers to dock at Union's super-tanker terminal at Berth 46 in the port's outer harbor.

At the time the ship exploded at 7:38 p.m. with a deafening roar that was heard and felt 40 miles away, the unladen ship was taking on sea water for ballast in the ship's empty holds while refueling.

FOUR BODIES were found immediately after the explosion. Thursday night and Friday morning, two more bodies were found, one deck apart, in the ship's mangled superstructure, which was ripped off the ship by the explosion and hurled nearly 100 yards inland.

The county coroner's senior investigator, Donald Stricklin, said both bodies may never be positively identified. The body found Thursday was severely charred and only bone remnants were left of the most recently discovered victim. A guard and two shipmates still are missing and presumed dead.

Union has taken the lead in organizing cleanup operations. In addition to calling in the divers, the company has summoned every major oil spill cleanup company in the Los Angeles-Long Beach port complex.

The company also requisitioned a 38-foot, $326,000 skimmer boat from Clean Coastal Waters, a cooperative organization of 12 Southland oil companies and the City of Long Beach.

ALSO loaned to the company was about 3,500 feet of 20-inch floating boom used to contain surface oil drifting around the partly submerged oil carrier.

Neither oil company officials, the Coast Guard, nor the Department of Fish and Game would hazard a guess as to what the total cleanup and salvage cost will be, other than agreeing the cosus undoubtedly will be the greatest in port history.

Meanwhile, members of the Coast Guard's six-man Marine Board of Investigation, headed by Rear Adm. James W. Moreau, climbed over the ship's massive twisted deckhouse where it landed on the pier. They were seeking evidence of what triggered the blast.

As salvagers from National Metal and Steel Co. on Terminal Island used long-handled steel-cutting torches to slice away sections of the crumpled and twisted deckhouse, the investigators also searched the deckhouse for the missing men.

TUBA TOOTERS LEAD RAINY REHEARSAL OF TIGERS' PRIDE BAND

It's seen worse in N.Y.

By DICK EMERY

"Just kids!"

Yeah? Now hear this about the Tigers' Pride Band!

They earned it—$130,000—in 20 school projects. They ran car washes. They sold gift furniture. They made candy and sold it, and they made craft items and sold them.

They recycled paper. They did odd jobs, and they ran their own drive for support from hometown friends.

The money went for 250 round-trip tickets on planes and buses and for four days and nights at their hotel in Long Beach.

One of the adults said Friday of the young musicians, "They are champions! They have played in a 50-mile-an-hour wind in Buffalo and in zero weather in New York. This little rain today in Long Beach couldn't stop them!"

This "little rain" was a sudden squall that drenched the marching 250 as the band was finishing two hours of before-noon rehearsal on the hotel's parking lot.

Rain hammered on their heads. It ran from their eyebrows and chins. It plastered their clothes to their backs, and it gurgled into their saxophones and rattled on their drums.

"Keep marching!" their director shouted by megaphone.

"Keep playing!"

They marched and they played.

Pitchess assails pay limit; fears threat of bargaining

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau

The County Board of Supervisors' new policy of limiting annual salaries of top executives to $49,500 was termed "shortsighted, regressive, counterproductive and ridiculous" Friday by Sheriff Peter Pitchess, who complained that he will earn about $17,000 a year less than the Los Angeles police chief.

Additionally, the sheriff warned, the wage decision has prompted captains and inspectors to start a move for formal union representation to bargain for salaries and benefits.

IN A LETTER to the board, released Friday, Pitchess predicted that "disfranchised" managers in county government might test the "capricious decision" in court, which will likely result in a finding that the basic provisions of the county's prevailing wage clause have been violated.

The prevailing wage clause requires supervisors to pay salaries equivalent to those available in private industry.

Pitchess noted that when supervisors first agreed on the $49,500 limit in September he thought the move "shortsighted and regressive; but I also felt the board might realize its error and reverse itself." He added:

"NOW THAT the board has perpetuated the mistake (supervisors reaffirmed the ceiling policy last month), we can only describe the situation as counterproductive at best. Perhaps 'ridiculous' is even a more accurate descriptive term."

The sheriff said his earnings are substantially less than the police chief of Los Angeles "despite the fact that the Sheriff's Department is the fifth largest law enforcement agency in the nation and administers a broader range of basic functions than the Police Department." He added:

"This disparity is heightened by the fact there is not even a cost-of-living provision which would allow for flexibility to adjust to ever-soaring inflation rates."

PITCHESS said three assistant chiefs in the LAPD each receive over $8,000 more than the undersheriff and that the same chiefs are paid $13,000 more than the two assistant sheriffs.

He said the policy by July 1978 will mean that the annual salaries of both assistant sheriffs and eight division chiefs will be within $100 or $200 of his own salary.

He noted that the philosophy of "expecting more production for less reward" would result in "an exodus of premature retirements" which will increase the cost of government.

Pitchess said captains and inspectors in his department "have long resisted" seeking formal representation in salary and benefit negotiations.

New Year a time to test faith

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

"Time is a gift which must be used for the growing and maturing of our personalities," Rabbi Bert Klein said as 1976 entered its final hours.

"We should make New Year's resolutions just to see how human we are," he added. "Later we will probably break our resolutions. Then, as we realize our failures, we will be in a better frame of mind to forgive the faults of others."

THE RABBI, leaning back thoughtfully in his office chair at the Temple Beth Zion-Sinai, 6440 E. Del Amo Blvd., Lakewood, said it was fine to greet the New Year "in a somewhat besotten state" with parties and honking horns.

But after a good night's sleep, when the noise is over and the hangovers clear up, it is time to think seriously about what lies ahead.

"It is a Mitzvah (meritous act) to join other people in happy celebrations, to look back upon the past, to forgive ourselves for the time wasted and to make resolutions for the better use of God's gift of time," he said.

"WE SHOULD resolve to live in peace with one another, to respect one another's feelings and convictions, to say nothing that will injure our brotherhood and to do everything we can to help one another during these difficult times," the rabbi added.

The Rev. Galal Gough, of the First United Methodist Church, 507 Pacific Ave., Long Beach, said New Year's Day was a good time to ponder the meaning of life, our values and what direction our lives should take.

"WE CAN begin anew with hope because of the creative, vital forces of the spirit," he said. "We need not repeat all the same old mistakes and disappointments during the New Year."

Youth groups at the First United Methodist Church wrote letters to themselves a year ago and set them aside at the church.

The letters, containing New Years resolutions, were mailed to the youths last week so each person could see how they measured up to their resolutions.

"As people are changed within, they begin seeing their responsibilities in society with a new perspective," Rev. Gough said.

"THEY become more compassionate and caring and want to find concrete, practical ways of contributing to the betterment of others.

"It is through community service projects and increased sensitivity to others' needs that the quality of life in a community is improved.

"Lots of resolutions are made without opening a channel to a power greater than ourselves. Resolutions should be transformed into covenants with God," he added.

New Year's Day is one of six Holy Days on which Catholics are obligated to attend Mass. The day is set aside to honor the "Solemnity of Mary the Mother of God."

The Rev. Robert Byrne, of the Holy Innocents Church, 425 E. 20th St., Long Beach, said his congregation would pray during Mass for a "greater intensity of dedication of the whole nation to the principles of our Founding Fathers."

HE ADDED that special prayers were planned for friendship, morality and togetherness as the foundation for rebuilding the nation and the community.

UCI doctor tells cancer find

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Normal human cells remain pure even when combined genetically with cancerous cells under laboratory conditions, a researcher at the University of California at Irvine's School of Medicine has found.

Dr. Eric J. Stanbridge, assistant professor of medical microbiology, said "such an extended suppression of malignancy as an inherited trait was previously unknown in hybrid cells" used in laboratory research to study the genetic and biochemical properties of cancer.

"Our studies clearly demonstrate that malignancy behaves as a recessive trait in certain human cell hybrids," Stanbridge explained.

"Human cell hybrids also exhibit a degree of chromosomal stability that other kinds of hybrid systems lack, which corresponds to a long-term suppression of malignancy."

Until Stanbridge's study, which he undertook with grants from the American Cancer Society, the National Institutes of Health and the Leukemia Society of America, it was generally assumed that chromosome loss and reversion to malignancy were characteristics of hybrid cell systems.

He said hybrid cells that result from the fusion of normal cells with cancer cells are considered transformed because they bear characteristics of both parent cells.

Stanbridge said most transformed cells act somewhat like cancer cells in laboratory cultures, and they grow and multiply indefinitely.

But when they are injected in laboratory-research "hosts," the experimental animals used in such tests, "a hybrid cell with its genetic material intact will not cause a tumor," the researcher said.

HOWEVER, widely studied hybrid cell systems created from normal and malignant mouse cells, or combinations of mouse and human cells, show an initial suppression of malignancy which subsequently is lost.

They apparently lose some of their chromosomes and become malignant, and scientists believe that this effect occurs when genes responsible for holding the cancer trait in check are somehow lost.

Stanbridge said researchers are encouraged by the stability of human hybrid systems, however.

It may enable researchers to isolate and study intermediate steps in the transition of healthy, normal cells to malignant cancer cells, he explained.

People hesitant about New Year resolutions

By TIM BURT
Staff Writer

Fewer people may break New Year's resolutions this year than in any other.

But that's not because they'll be following through on what they have resolved.

A random check of Long Beach area residents showed that people may be more hesitant to make resolutions they don't think they can keep.

"We just don't make them," said Mrs. Sharon Beard, 3666 Hackett Ave. "I haven't made one in 15 years, and I can't even remember what that one was.

"I believe some people think making a resolution and breaking it is kind of bad luck. The main thing that we try to do each year is have some of our friends over for a nice dinner on New Year's Eve."

"I usually don't make any resolutions because I am a little skeptical about keeping them," said Mrs. Ruth Bigler, 510 Terraine Ave. "They are more likely to be broken than kept."

Some said they had been able to keep few of their previous year's resolutions, which included plans to quit smoking, cut down on drinking, lose weight amd exercise more.

Date for City Hall move to be set

Long Beach city officials—after delays of more than a year—are expected to set a firm date at a meeting Monday to move into the new $41-million Administration Building.

Acting City Manager Robert Creighton said the city's five-member Joint Power Authority would meet at 4 p.m. in the Council Chambers to "review the status" of the building and decide when the move could be made.

A spokesman for the contractor, Montgomery Ross Fisher Inc., assured the city manager that the building would be ready for occupancy by the date set.

New breathing device sniffs out drunk driver

By HAL LOWE
Staff Writer

Those who have had too much holiday cheer this weekend may be introduced to a new device — the Gas Chromatograph Intoximeter (GCI) Mark II.

Persons under suspicion of driving under the influence of alcohol will be requested to breathe into the apparatus at the Lakewood sheriff's station.

IF THE electronic light board hits a reading of .10 or higher, the person is declared intoxicated by state law, officers said.

Sheriff's criminalist Carl Fleming said the lighted number indicates the grams of alcohol per 100 milliliters of blood.

An estimated 175 persons a month have been asked to blow into the tube attached to the machine since its installation in September.

Suspected drunk drivers can still, by law, it was noted, select either a urine or blood sample test or can breathe into the instrument to determine their alcohol content.

Should a driver refuse to take any of the three tests, he can lose his driving rights for six months, regardless of the outcome of the charge, deputies said.

ALTHOUGH there are increases in the number of plain drunk and drunk driving arrests during the holiday season, extra jailers are not required at the station, a spokeman said.

Suspects are entitled to make a telephone call before they are placed in a cell, where the sobering up process is, according to one jailer, usually "quick."

Deputies believe that four hours can sober up most people.

Even in a heavy stupor, most realize where they are and what situation they are facing, deputies said.

During that time, a record check is made. If there are no outstanding warrants or unpaid fines, the suspect can be cited out — given a citation setting a date for an appearance in court.

IF THERE is reason to keep the suspect, and it is on the weekend, he is transferred to the County Jail to await a Monday court date.

Those persons held over can have someone post bail for them to be released.

The drunk driving bail runs about $315, while the plain drunk bail is $50.

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

Teams of eight to 12 hardhat divers, their face masks and bloated rubber suits covered with black oil, are attempting to suck up oil spilled from the tanker Sansinena's ruptured tanks after it exploded and sank in Los Angeles Harbor Dec. 17.

"We're using hardhat divers exclusively because the suits protect the divers from the oil," said Torrance Parker, owner-manager of Parker Diving Service in San Pedro. "They can't see a thing. But these guys are pros.

"They can feel their way around," he added.

"We are working at about 50 feet using special submersible air pumps to vacuum the oil out from around and beneath the ship and pump it up to storage tanks on the surface and into floating oil barges."

BOTH PARKER and Union Oil Company officials declined to estimate how much bunkers (ship's fuel) has leaked from the ill-fated 810-foot, 38,562-deadweight-ton tanker. At the time of the explosion the ship had unloaded its oil cargo and had taken on about 26,000 barrels of fuel.

Just how much of the fuel oil spilled out or how much still may be trapped inside the bow and stern sections, none of the various investigating teams would estimate.

However, Parker and Coast Guard divers report the leaked oil appears to be fairly well contained within a 1,250-foot long, 250-foot wide, and 50-foot deep dredged channel that allows deep-draft loaded tankers to dock at Union's super-tanker terminal at Berth 46 in the port's outer harbor.

At the time the ship exploded at 7:38 p.m. with a deafening roar that was heard and felt 40 miles away, the unladen ship was taking on sea water for ballast in the ship's empty holds while refueling.

FOUR BODIES were found immediately after the explosion. Thursday night and Friday morning, two more bodies were found, one deck apart, in the ship's mangled superstructure, which was ripped off the ship by the explosion and hurled nearly 100 yards inland.

The county coroner's senior investigator, Donald Stricklin, said both bodies may never be positively identified. The body found Thursday was severely charred and only bone remnants were left of the most recently discovered victim. A guard and two shipmates still are missing and presumed dead.

Union has taken the lead in organizing cleanup operations. In addition to calling in the divers, the company has summoned every major oil spill cleanup company in the Los Angeles-Long Beach port complex.

The company also requisitioned a 38-foot, $326,000 skimmer boat from Clean Coastal Waters, a cooperative organization of 12 Southland oil companies and the City of Long Beach.

ALSO loaned to the company was about 3,500 feet of 20-inch floating boom used to contain surface oil drifting around the partly submerged oil carrier.

Neither oil company officials, the Coast Guard, nor the Department of Fish and Game would hazard a guess as to what the total cleanup and salvage cost will be, other than agreeing the cosus undoubtedly will be the greatest in port history.

Meanwhile, members of the Coast Guard's six-man Marine Board of Investigation, headed by Rear Adm. James W. Moreau, climbed over the ship's massive twisted deckhouse where it landed on the pier. They were seeking evidence of what triggered the blast.

As salvagers from National Metal and Steel Co. on Terminal Island used long-handled steel-cutting torches to slice away sections of the crumpled and twisted deckhouse, the investigators also searched the deckhouse for the missing men.

TUBA TOOTERS LEAD RAINY REHEARSAL OF TIGERS' PRIDE BAND

It's seen worse in N.Y.

By DICK EMERY

"Just kids!"

Yeah? Now hear this about the Tigers' Pride Band!

They earned it—$130,000—in 20 school projects. They ran car washes. They sold gift furniture. They made candy and sold it, and they made craft items and sold them.

They recycled paper. They did odd jobs, and they ran their own drive for support from hometown friends.

One of the adults said Friday of the young musicians, "They are champions! They have played in a 50-mile-an-hour wind in Buffalo and in zero weather in New York. This little rain today in Long Beach couldn't stop them!"

This "little rain" was a sudden squall that drenched the marching 250 as the band was finishing two hours of before-noon rehearsal on the hotel's parking lot.

Rain hammered on their heads. It ran from their eyebrows and chins. It plastered their clothes to their backs, and it gurgled into their saxophones and rattled on their drums.

"Keep marching!" their director shouted by megaphone.

"Keep playing!"

They marched and they played.

The march they were playing, during the rain squall, was, "I Love a Parade!"

"We should especially res dve to do something about crime in Long Beach," Father Byrne added. "The fear that old people live in is a scandal in this city."

In an effort to do something about the city's crime problem, the Rev. Michael Dixon, of the First Christian Church, 125 E. 5th St., said his congregation would saturate the downtown area with Gospel booklets, with special emphasis toward pornography dealers and tavern owners.

"It is up to Christians, not just the police, to upgrade morality and reduce crime," he said.

NO SERVICES were scheduled today at his church, he said, adding that he would deliver his regular sermons Sunday at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

The Jewish calendar is in the year 5737, which began Sept. 25. The calendar is dated from what the faithful believe is the creation of the world instead of from the birth of Christ.

But Conservative, Reform and Liberal Jews celebrate both New Year days. Rabbi Klein expects light attendance for prayers and Bible studies from 9-11:30 a.m. today at his synagogue.

Rev. Gough's Sunday sermons at 9 and 11 a.m. will launch his New Year series on "Jesus' Parables on New Beginnings."

Masses at Father Byrne's church are at 8 a.m., 10:30 a.m., 12 noon, 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Lawbreakers make it a hectic New Year's

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

The long arm of the law in Long Beach and other Southland cities taxed its muscles Friday night as police coped with a hectic New Year's Eve.

Burglars, bandits, petty thieves and punks; shooters, stabbers, car clouters and drunks: They were out in force as the Southland gave birth to 1977.

"GET TO a place of safety!"

According to Lt. Richard Roberts, some trigger-happy citizens insist on shooting their weapons at midnight, and wary policemen take cover. Some patrol cars have found themselves moving targets, Roberts said.

"Happens every New Year's Eve," he sighed. "Tell you something else that happens. I've gotten five calls in the last couple of hours from out-of-state residents inquiring about loved ones."

"If they don't get an answer, they become fearful and ask us to check," he said. "There's not much we can do."

IN SOUTH Los Angeles, sheriff's deputies capped 1976 by arresting four Compton men and recovering 24 stolen vehicles.

Drunk drivers were the easiest to apprehend, though their instant gaiety was quickly tarnished by the fatal threat they posed to pedestrians and other motorists.

By 9 p.m. Friday, Long Beach police had booked just one man on suspicion of drunk driving, but others were beginning to stagger in.

Patrol cars and the "eye-in-the-sky" helicopter scurried from one reported burglary to the next. Patrolmen said burglars were apparently taking advantage of so many celebrants and weekend vacationers being away from home.

A QUICK ripping of a window screen, a pipe wrench slapped on a doorknob — there wouldn't be much to celebrate today as citizens sobered up to the sight of their ransacked homes.

Firestone sheriff's deputies said they booked four Compton men on suspicion of auto theft and receiving stolen property.

Deputies said they stopped Gregory Steward on suspicion of speeding and found an engine reported stolen in the rear of the truck he was driving.

STEWARD reportedly led deputies to 135th and Main Streets in Los Angeles, where the other men and 24 stolen autos were found.

Some Southland liquor stores became the focus of activity Friday night as owners called police to investigate suspicious persons loitering in parking lots or near cash registers.

Most of the time, police said, it was a crowd of teen-agers trying to persuade an adult to buy them a case of beer.

Midway through the swing shift, Long Beach police were investigating one strong-armed robbery, one armed robbery, 13 burglaries, six cases of grand theft, a battery, four stolen autos, a stolen motorcycle, four missing bikes, 12 traffic accidents and one assault with a deadly weapon.

NUMEROUS shots were heard throughout the evening and, while police believed that some gun owners were firing weapons into walls and ceilings, most of the noise was probably caused by firecrackers.

In Huntington Beach, 28-year-old Robert Cole held police at bay with a .45-caliber pistol for 45 minutes after barricading himself inside his parents' home at 17392 Avalon St., police said.

"He apparently went berserk," explained Sgt. Monty McKennon. "After being talked into surrendering, Cole was booked for suspicion of remaining in a dwelling as an unwanted guest and displaying a weapon in a rude and threatening manner."

No shots or injuries were reported.

The end of the patrolmen's and detectives' watches early today didn't spell the end of the weekend's violence and destruction, however.

There was still tonight and Sunday.

New year resolutions

Phil Munson, an employe at McCoy's Market in Long Beach, is hopeful he can accomplish his goal to stop smoking — all the time.

"One time I did stop for about six months, then went back at it," he said. "I accomplish some of my resolutions maybe half the time.

"Making resolutions helps keep you motivated, and they are a good idea, but very hard to keep.

"This year I'm going to try to be a better person and not get upset at someone, even though he may rub me the wrong way."

Mrs. Mildred Doran, 9517 E. Maplewood Ave., Bellflower, said her resolution is to avoid traffic accidents, having been involved in one during each of the past two years.

"Our goal is to be around and healthy for next New Year's Eve," said Mrs. Doran, who also celebrated her fifth wedding anniversary Friday night.

Cancer find

"Genetically stable, nonmalignant transformed cells someday might also prove useful in immunotherapeutic agents to stimulate the body's immune system to reject a tumor," he added.

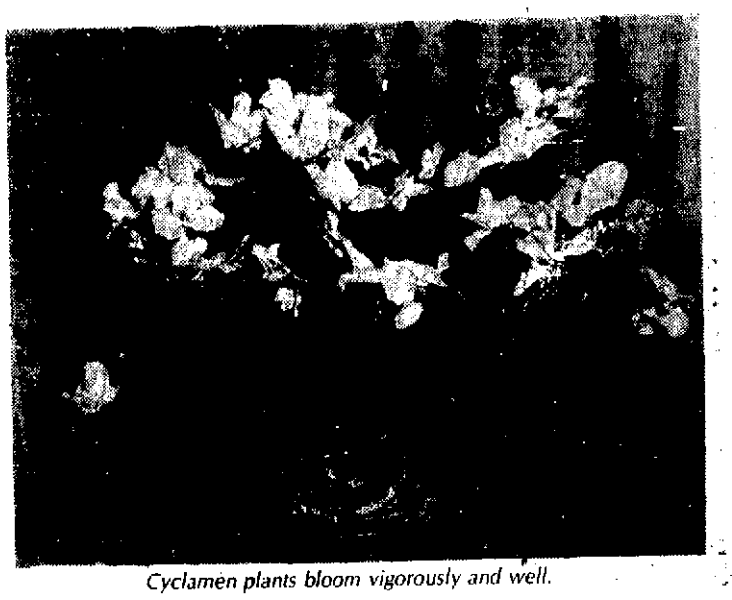

IN HUMANS, the key to the lack of malignancy in a transformed cell is contained in the physical expression of the cell's genetic code, the researcher said.

"If physical traits inherited through gene expression are dominant or co-dominant, they show up in the cell. Recessive traits, however, are suppressed."

Working with human cells, the UCI professor has created several relatively stable hybrid systems by fusing normal cells and single or combined malignant cells from three types of tumors — carcinoma, sarcoma and leukemia.

Sound gear, cash, TV set are stolen

Cash, sound equipment and a television set with a total value of $2,350 were taken from the home of Daniel Hickok, 5954 Atlantic Ave., by burglars who kicked in a rear door to enter, Long Beach police said Friday.

Cyclamen plants bloom vigorously and well.

Plant cyclamen outdoors after holiday season

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Christmas gift plants such as cyclamen, azalea, heather and poinsettia are outdoor growing plants that were kept indoors during the Holidays Season. They should then be planted outdoors. First set them under spreading branched bushes to protect them from excess cold in order to harden them off for several weeks before setting them out in the garden.

The cyclamen should be planted out at a north east or a north west corner where they'll get several hours of sun. We've seen a row of them in Paramount growing near a garage wall, east exposure, where there's lots of night dew.

The cyclamen bulb tops must be above the soil area, because the leaves and flowers grow out from the bulb top surface. Soil must never cover the top.

Watered regularly and lightly fed several times throughout the years, encourages the plants to grow actively the year round, instead of going dormant. Unpicked blooms ripen the seeds which drop on the ground and eventually sprout. It takes about 18 months for a cyclamen plant to mature and bloom.

AZALEAS that are growing in peat moss should be planted in pre-moistened sphagnum peat moss, or in an azalea special planting mix.

Heathers were popular years ago, but didn't live long, because it wasn't known they must have a sponge-like medium to grow in, like the azaleas to grow in. One nursery, no longer in operation, discovered that heather grew happily in a mixture of half soil and half sphagnum peat moss.

Now don't confuse sphagnum peat moss with sphagnum moss. Sphagnum moss is a stringy moss partly still green color as well as brown. It must be thoroughly soaked then moisture squeezed out before use. It is used for lining hanging baskets to set plants into.

EARLIER planted annuals and perennials that are growing actively to bloom later, should be fertilized with a balanced plant feed of which the nitrogen content is less than the phosphorus.

Some gardeners are sometimes late in setting out annuals for spring flowers. Some snapdragon plants set out last September, or later, may have small rich brown color pustule-like swellings on the under side of leaves. This problem is a fungus called rust. Those plants should be carefully pulled up and thrown into the rubbish so it can be hauled away. Replant with new plants.

Snapdragons planted now grow much faster, but not quite as tall as they would if planted in the fall season. Luckily all fall planted snapdragons don't rust. Don't assume that the wording "rust resistant snapdragons" are rust proof. They're not, because occasionally some fewer might.

STOCKS can also be planted out, but be sure to purchase the small plants, not the largest ones in a pot or in flat. The very small plants are likely to be the newest in the nursery, therefore will grow more robustly.

Gladiolus can be planted now, they'll grow faster later. Plant the bulbs (called corms) at least five inches deep, not two. The mature plants are likely to topple over due to rain, or when watered overhead, if they are planted shallowly. Plant more a month later for a longer extended period of more lovely spikes of colorful blossoms.

GARDENING

Prominent (Plant patent #3380): A grandiflora from the breeding skills of Reimer Kordes of Germany, and his third AARS award winner in the last two years.

Prominent is a brilliant, hot-orange, exquisitely shaped rose, shaded yellow at the base of the petals, but overall an orange of great intensity. The flowers are comparatively small, thereby offering living proof that a rose flower of great beauty does not necessarily have to attain a 6" diameter. Prominent reaches just about half of that, or 3", but its classic, high centered blooms make fine cut flowers, which, with their heavy texture, often last for ten days at normal room temperatures.

Each petal of this 1977 award winner forms a sharp point, as may be seen in the illustration, giving the flower a distinctive, solid star effect. The blossoms maintain their bright color without fading throughout their life on the bush, and are produced continuously in large quantities from one end to the other of the flowering season.

Although rated as a grandiflora in this country, due to its tendency to produce candelabra-like clusters of blooms on a stem, in Europe, where it is known as "Korp," it often throws many single stem, hybrid tea type roses, and so is rated as a hybrid tea.

Domino effect

When a vehicular object in motion comes to a sudden halt against an obstruction on a surface recently moistened by precipitation, other vehicular objects following the first tend to do likewise. This is known as the law of rainertia, as illustrated by this non-injury four-car pileup at Pacific Coast Highway and Pacific Avenue at 1 p.m. Thursday.

By DICK EMERY
Staff Writer

Take any barber shop, on the year's last day.

It is the day for airing political views.

Take this little shop on Long Beach Boulevard in North Long Beach.

"It's a hardship," the big fellow in the barber chair was saying.

"Taxes on booze," he said.

"And on cigarettes."

The barber steered clippers around the big man's neck. On a shelf with bottles of dandruff-killer a sign said "God Bless Our Happy Home." The big man was addressing two waiting customers sitting on a bench.

The barber nodded and never missed a clip.

The men waiting to get shorn went right on waiting, poker-faced, the way waiting people look.

"Say the usual bottle of booze costs him $5. Half the five, or more, goes to taxes.

The barber dusted the big man's neck with talcum, but the man offered a few more words:

"End of the year, you have to think of government, like taxes," he said.

"Take a guy who is a good citizen. He improves his house, builds a swimming pool and everything. What do they do?

"They increase his taxes!"

The barber ran a midget vacuum cleaner around the big man's neck and whisked away the hair-catching apron like a bullfighter whisking a cape, saying politely, "Next, please!"

People and ideas

MARK CLUTTER
RELIGION EDITOR

Many months ago my mother, Dr. May Clutter, wrote an autobiographical article for these pages.

It was quite a success. People are still asking, "How is your mother? She is such an interesting person."

When I talked to her by telephone Christmas morning she was filled with the joy of the day. She was going to dinner at the home of a second cousin.

Last summer she celebrated her 90th birthday in the home of my brother, Ray, in Lytle Creek Canyon. She traveled alone with only an assist on and off the plane. She enjoyed it. "I like my apartment but I do need a change now and then." I think she would ride any flying machine to any place in the world.

She recently had a bit of luck. Her second cataract was removed and she now has glasses that permit her to read as much as ever. She was always a bookworm. In her busy younger years she would settle down with a book about the time other people were going to bed.

There is no way of guessing how many times she has read every page of the Bible. She could be described as a sophisticated Fundamentalist. The Bible is the revealed Word of God, but it is not to be understood easily or superficially. Much study is required.

She is still very much a working minister. The door of her apartment in a retirement hotel is always unlocked in the day time. When there is a knock she calls, "Come in!" Her "parish" is, of course, mostly people in the hotel, but many young people are also in her "flock."

On Sundays she goes to a Christian Church in a newish suburb where there are many young and youngish people. She doesn't want to be a member of an age group. She is fond of her grandchildren and great grandchildren, whom she sees too infrequently because they are scattered across America.

Anyone who wants to can drop her a note or a card. The address is:

CHRIST'S FRONTIERSMAN

Much of my mother's personality reflects the influence of my father, Dr. Edward Clutter, who died in 1941.

Like many sons, I did not fully understand or appreciate my father until I had some maturity. As a boy I didn't realize that he belonged to a dying period of American history. He was a frontiersman.

His parents, who as children remembered the ugly Civil War in Missouri, rode westward across the river. He was born in a white-washed dugout on the "Lone Prairie." Grandfather later became foreman of a gang of ignorant, drunken, half-slave Irishmen building a railroad across Nebraska. (Some of those Irishmen later became officials of the railroad.)

Dad by the age of nine was a "mule skinner." He loved those smart, tough hybrids all his life. And they loved him. Ferocious brutes who could be handled only with whips would come to him and let him whisper in their ears.

He got to school three or four years late in Tecumseh, Neb. Boyhood in those days was rough and muscular. He became a boxer and football player. Football today looks dangerous; then it was dangerous. In one game between towns he was one of three starters who came through without injury.

In Cotner College, a Christian Church school, he distinguished himself in football. But he had got the message. He would be a preacher.

He was an ideal preacher for the people he ministered to. He was a big, handsome man with a mane of blond hair. He was a good orator. He knew how to speak softly with sweet reason, and he knew how to thunder.

Mostly he was an evangelist. He was not the kind who could sit placidly in a pastorate while he led people slowly to better lives. He tried to take towns by storm — and often did. Some of the churches he founded are still flourishing.

One must remember the world he lived in, the small towns and farms of a not entirely tamed frontier. He was a kind of Matt Dillon, bringing peace and law and order. His weapon was not a six-gun but a Bible.

An evangelist brought excitement to towns in which usually nothing much happened. There was a touch of circus. People turned out to enjoy the music and hear the sermon and sometimes with tears to hit the Glory Trail.

He always preached to his kind of people — farmers, cowboys, laborers, small-town merchants and their families. I suppose some of his sermons might sound "simplistic" today in some city churches. He intended to be simple, putting the hard truths of the Bible in words his hearers could understand.

His ministry was personal. He was always interested in helping individuals. On a few occasions I found out by accident of good works he had never mentioned.

His era has past — was passing while he lived. He would probably admire Billy Graham, who is a direct descendant of his kind of preacher. But no one would think of taking his personal problems to Billy.

He was for "women's liberation." He always encouraged women. My mother, ordained in 1917, was his equal partner in ministry. He was a good father, a friend and playmate of little boys and a good counselor of teenagers who, alas, did not always heed him.

ARE VETERANS DANGEROUS?

When a nation trains its young men in the arts of manslaughter do they come home from their stint on the battlefields to commit violent crimes?

Many people throughout history have asked this question. Even the ancient Romans worried about it.

Psychology Today magazine calls it "the myth of the violent veteran." It quotes many studies of the problems of veterans and comes to the conclusion that they are very much like civilian men of their ages as far as violence goes. There does seem to be a rise in domestic violence after a war — but the veterans are not to blame.

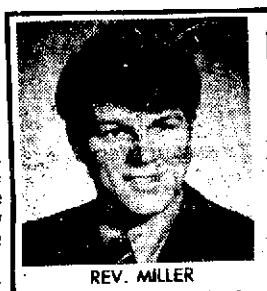

It may be true that a few men have a taste for homicide and find a legal outlet for their twisted emotions in war. Once out of uniform they may find illegal outlets. The military can scarcely be blamed for such behavior.

Those of us who served know that veterans are no more violent than their civilian peers. In fact, many are less so. Many who have waded thigh-deep in blood lose their

Military service promotes a kind of brotherly love. A man learns to value his buddies, sometimes at risk of his own life. Any sensitive man in war learns the meaning of loyalty.

After a war most men go through a period of emotional confusion. But most make out all right. I lived for a year in "Veterans Village" at Oklahoma State University. My neighbors were keen young men with families determined to make careers for themselves. "The best students we have ever had," many professors remarked.

No man ever comes home from a war the same man who went — but many of them are better men than those who didn't go.

'Confrontation with faith'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most young people today are not antagonistic toward organized religion, but are inclined to evaluate it on their own, rather than accept it automatically, a new study finds.

The study, commissioned by the U.S. Catholic Conference Education Department's office of research, says that a "confrontation with faith" now occurs earlier in life than before, that it usually has come at college age, but it's now hitting at the high school level.

Many youths, concerned for values of autonomy, are "confused" by the very freedoms they demand, the study says. It adds that organized religion, along with other support systems of family and peer groups, "can be a major force but today's adolescent will assess it more critically than in the past."

Rice to Viets

NEW YORK (AP) — A Christmas-week shipment of 1,325 tons of rice to Vietnam was arranged by three agencies, Lutheran World Relief, Church World Service and Friendshipment. The rice was purchased for $349,000 in Thailand and was scheduled to reach Haiphong, Vietnam, on Jan. 10, to help those suffering from severe weather, flooding and still heavy war damage.

LETTERS

Korean Church

At our Session meeting last week an action was taken that I think will be of general interest to the City of Long Beach. At the request of the Synod of Southern California of our denomination, our Session has agreed that Covenant Church will serve as the host church to a young Korean Presbyterian congregation. As you perhaps know, there has been a tremendous influx of the Koreans, especially from North Korea, in the years since the Korean conflict. In the Los Angeles area alone, the number of native-born Koreans has increased, so we were informed, from some 1,000 in the year of 1955 to over 30,000 now. In view of the fact that the Presbyterian Church for a century or more has had a strong missionary program in Korea, many of these new immigrants to Southern California have had Presbyterian background.

The congregation of Koreans (now approximately 50 members) begins worshiping regularly in the facilities of Covenant Presbyterian Church on the first Sunday in February, 1977. The name of the congregation is the Korean Messiah Presbyterian Church. The pastor is the Rev. Young Hwan Choi, a fully ordained clergyman of the national Korean Presbyterian Church. He, himself, is one of the immigrants.

The congregation is made up mainly of folk for whom the English language is still quite strange, and so the services will be conducted in Korean. However, it is expected that children, especially, will soon begin to have at least part of their Sunday School instruction in English, for they will be exposed, of course, to the English language in their school situations. At present, this congregation is not a part of the United Presbyterian Church in the USA, although it is a part of the Presbyterian Church of Korea which is in full communion with our Church. The intention is that as soon as this infant congregation becomes a bit more settled and stabilized, that it will apply for admission to the United Presbyterian Church in the USA as one of our regular congregations.

The plan for the Korean Church is to hold its meetings in our Chapel on Sunday afternoons at 2:00 and also to use rooms and facilities of our plant on Sunday afternoons for Sunday School and Fellowship purposes. We will, of course, seek to develop the closest kind of fraternal relationship between Covenant Church itself, and this new congregation.

Arab menace

While you are devoting time, attention and space to the Jewish and Christian religions in your Saturday column, it is unfortunate that you are neglecting the sinister menace that confronts both the Jewish and Christian religions. I am referring to the Arab use of their economic power to accomplish their ultimate goal of replacing the Judeo-Christian ethic with Moslem totalitarianism. The history of Moslem intolerance to the Jewish and Christian religions extends back into many centuries. The Koran considers Judaism and Christianity heathen religions and considers Jews and Christians infidels. Moslem persection of Christians and Jews is an ongoing tragedy.

The most recent example of the Moslem intolerance to Christians was seen in its severe form in Lebanon when the civil war erupted as a result of Moslem efforts to destroy the Christian institutions, culture and democracy that prevailed in Lebanon for the past 40 years. Is it not ironic that the Jews who have suffered so much at the hands of the Christians for centuries were the ones to show compassion for the Christians in Lebanon, a Israel provided medical, social and economic benefits to thousands of Christians uprooted as a result of the civil war? Under the guise of "peace" Syria sent in troops to Lebanon, and Christian Lebanon is no longer an independent democracy, but a satellite of Moslem Syria. It appears that a major step has been achieved by the Moslems in the Middle East as they have eliminated the strongest Christian bastion of the Middle East.

In their pursuit to rid the Middle East of all non-Moslem religions, Moslem intolerance to other religions in the Middle East is the rule of the day. The Christian Kopts in Egypt, the Christian Berbers in Algeria, both have been reduced to second class status through steady persecution over centuries. The Moslems of North Sudan slaughtered hundreds of thousands of Black Christians in Southern Sudan in crushing the Black Christian revolution against their Northern Sudanese Moslem oppressors. The Iraqui Moslems have been committing genocide against the Kurds for decades and were able to finally crush the dream of an independent Kurdish state when Moslem Iran joined with Moslem Iraq to crush the Kurdish revolution.

The Jewish State of Israel had to defend itself in five major wars started by the Arab Moslems in an effort to destroy the Jewish State. Arab intolerance to the Jews and persecution of the Jews has no equal: The birthplace of the humiliating yellow armband was under Moslem rule as the Caliph Haroun al Rashid forced the yellow badge of shame upon Jews in 807 A.D. In 1066 more than 5,000 Jews were murdered by Moslem mobs in Granada. More than 6,000 Jews of Fez were massacred in 1033. Before the birth of the State of Israel, centuries of persecution and pogroms had reduced the Jews to a second class status in the Arab countries while today Jews in other Arab lands, especially Syria and Iraq, are imprisoned without trial, tortured and murdered. Who can forget the wild public celebration at the public hangings of Jews in Baghdad Central Square? And shortly after the Yom Kippur War, four young Jewish girls were savagely attacked and murdered by Moslem Syrians. During the Yom Kippur War, Israeli prisoners of war were decapitated by the Syrian Moslems, and those responsible were awarded a medal for decapitating and eating the flesh of Jewish prisoners. It was for the decapitation of Jews, not Zionists or Israelis, for which the award was granted by the Syrian government.

The economic power of the Moslem Arab countries extends beyond the inflation and unemployment caused by the four-fold increase in prices of oil. It extends beyond the influence these countries exert on foreign policies of the Western countries, the United States, included. As can be seen from the hostile and nefarious acts committed by the Moslems against the Christians in Lebanon, Jews in Israel, and other minorities in the Middle East, the Moslems are exerting their efforts in order to dominate the Judeo-Christian ethic and replace it with Moslem totalitarianism. With the example of Moslem massacres of Christians and Jews fresh in our mind from their recent actions and the absence of freedom of speech, religion or press, and the suppression of basic human rights in each and every one of the Arab countries, the thought of the subservience of the Judeo-Christian ethic and Western civilization to Moslem domination and influence is the "impossible thought."

POSITIVE THINKING
by Norman Vincent Peale

A satisfying life

I had an interesting conference with a man and his wife on a problem of great importance to them. The wife was very troubled; she did most of the talking. The husband, though concerned, was quiet and restrained.

Finally, commenting upon his quietness in contrast to her tension, the wife said, "You'll never get any expression out of Jack. Nothing troubles him. I fuss and fuss, but he keeps on being quiet and peaceful, no matter what."

I was impressed by his dignity, gentility, and above all, his profound calm. He was a much stronger personality than his wife. Finally I asked him how, in the face of a problem such as his, he could manifest such a spirit of imperturbability.

His answer was direct. "There's no secret about it," he said. "I have discovered the science of a satisfying life."

The phrase caught my interest. This man knew what so many of us do not seem to realize, that living is a science. In a scientific age, all too few of us recognize the fact. We all know what science can do to bring a television picture out of the sky into our living rooms, to increase the egg production of hens by special feeds and culture, to move us from place to place with increasing speed. These accomplishments result from the application of certain scientific laws.

And there are laws in the spiritual realm governing living, which are so exact, so precise, that if you learn to apply them to yourself you will develop powers you did not know you had. You will develop a peace you never dreamed you could possess. You can have insights far beyond anything you ever conceived. And you can solve your problems with an ease and skill which will astonish you.

It is amazing what a human being can do with himself when he learns to live scientifically. And, strangely enough, one of the greatest tools for doing this is the Bible, a book written before the word "science" was coined. For the Bible is crammed with workable procedures for meeting the problems of life.

What did this quiet and composed man apply in his crisis? It was the law of keeping calm and not getting excited, and of practicing faith in the outcome. "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." (Isaiah 30:15)

Obviously a quiet mind is essential to a rational approach to a problem. One cannot think efficiently when the mind is in a tumult of emotional reactions. The first principle of clear thinking is quiet thinking. There is enough brain power in us to solve any problem when quietly and confidently we call upon our strength and intelligence.

So the two things this man did was to practice quietness and affirm confidence.

In assuming an attitude of quiet confidence, regardless of how upsetting a situation may be, you set correcting forces in motion. Excitedly tell yourself that a matter is going badly, and you actually encourage that result. But keep calm and tell yourself that with God's help and your own powers things are going to turn out all right, and you definitely stimulate such an outcome.

The reason for this is simple. You are thinking and believing, and no forces are more powerful than thought and faith. By thought you apply your own inner powers to the situation, and by faith you bring to bear the vast powers of God.

Try this method for yourself, and see if it isn't "the science of a satisfying life."

Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. Acts 8:5.

"We should especially res dve to do something about crime in Long Beach," Father Byrne added. "The fear that old people live in is a scandal in this city."

In an effort to do something about the city's crime problem, the Rev. Michael Dixon, of the First Christian Church, 125 E. 5th St., said his congregation would saturate the downtown area with Gospel booklets, with special emphasis toward pornography dealers and tavern owners.

"It is up to Christians, not just the police, to upgrade morality and reduce crime," he said.

NO SERVICES were scheduled today at his church, he said, adding that he would deliver his regular sermons Sunday at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

The Jewish calendar is in the year 5737, which began Sept. 25. The calendar is dated from what the faithful believe is the creation of the world instead of from the birth of Christ.

But Conservative, Reform and Liberal Jews celebrate both New Year days. Rabbi Klein expects light attendance for prayers and Bible studies from 9-11:30 a.m. today at his synagogue.

Rev. Gough's Sunday sermons at 9 and 11 a.m. will launch his New Year series on "Jesus' Parables on New Beginnings."

Masses at Father Byrne's church are at 8 a.m., 10:30 a.m., 12 noon, 5 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Lawbreakers make it a hectic New Year's

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

The long arm of the law in Long Beach and other Southland cities taxed its muscles Friday night as police coped with a hectic New Year's Eve.

Burglars, bandits, petty thieves and punks; shooters, stabbers, car clouters and drunks: They were out in force as the Southland gave birth to 1977.

"GET TO a place of safety!"

According to Lt. Richard Roberts, some trigger-happy citizens insist on shooting their weapons at midnight, and wary policemen take cover. Some patrol cars have found themselves moving targets, Roberts said.

"Happens every New Year's Eve," he sighed. "Tell you something else that happens. I've gotten five calls in the last couple of hours from out-of-state residents inquiring about loved ones."

"If they don't get an answer, they become fearful and ask us to check," he said. "There's not much we can do."

Drunk drivers were the easiest to apprehend, though their instant gaiety was quickly tarnished by the fatal threat they posed to pedestrians and other motorists.

By 9 p.m. Friday, Long Beach police had booked just one man on suspicion of drunk driving, but others were beginning to stagger in.

Patrol cars and the "eye-in-the-sky" helicopter scurried from one reported burglary to the next. Patrolmen said burglars were apparently taking advantage of so many celebrants and weekend vacationers being away from home.

A QUICK ripping of a window screen, a pipe wrench slapped on a doorknob — there wouldn't be much to celebrate today as citizens sobered up to the sight of their ransacked homes.

Firestone sheriff's deputies said they booked four Compton men on suspicion of auto theft and receiving stolen property.

Deputies said they stopped Gregory Steward on suspicion of speeding and found an engine reported stolen in the rear of the truck he was driving.

STEWARD reportedly led deputies to 135th and Main Streets in Los Angeles, where the other men and 24 stolen autos were found.

Some Southland liquor stores became the focus of activity Friday night as owners called police to investigate suspicious persons loitering in parking lots or near cash registers.

Most of the time, police said, it was a crowd of teen-agers trying to persuade an adult to buy them a case of beer.

Midway through the swing shift, Long Beach police were investigating one strong-armed robbery, one armed robbery, 13 burglaries, six cases of grand theft, a battery, four stolen autos, a stolen motorcycle, four missing bikes, 12 traffic accidents and one assault with a deadly weapon.

NUMEROUS shots were heard throughout the evening and, while police believed that some gun owners were firing weapons into walls and ceilings, most of the noise was probably caused by firecrackers.

In Huntington Beach, 28-year-old Robert Cole held police at bay with a .45-caliber pistol for 45 minutes after barricading himself inside his parents' home at 17392 Avalon St., police said.

"He apparently went berserk," explained Sgt. Monty McKennon. "After being talked into surrendering, Cole was booked for suspicion of remaining in a dwelling as an unwanted guest and displaying a weapon in a rude and threatening manner."

No shots or injuries were reported.

The end of the patrolmen's and detectives' watches early today didn't spell the end of the weekend's violence and destruction, however.

There was still tonight and Sunday.

New year resolutions

Phil Munson, an employe at McCoy's Market in Long Beach, is hopeful he can accomplish his goal to stop smoking — all the time.

"One time I did stop for about six months, then went back at it," he said. "I accomplish some of my resolutions maybe half the time.

"Making resolutions helps keep you motivated, and they are a good idea, but very hard to keep.

"This year I'm going to try to be a better person and not get upset at someone, even though he may rub me the wrong way."

Mrs. Mildred Doran, 9517 E. Maplewood Ave., Bellflower, said her resolution is to avoid traffic accidents, having been involved in one during each of the past two years.

"Our goal is to be around and healthy for next New Year's Eve," said Mrs. Doran, who also celebrated her fifth wedding anniversary Friday night.

"Genetically stable, nonmalignant transformed cells someday might also prove useful in immunotherapeutic agents to stimulate the body's immune system to reject a tumor," he added.

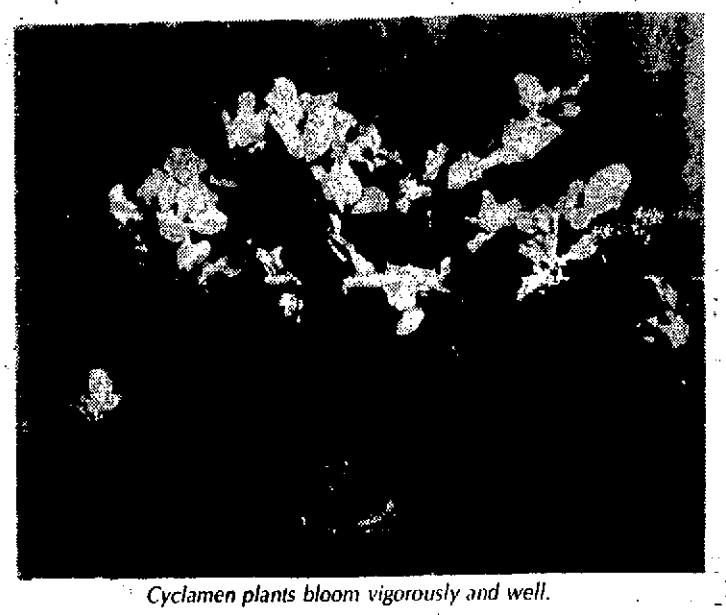

IN HUMANS, the key to the lack of malignancy in a transformed cell is contained in the physical expression of the cell's genetic code, the researcher said.

"If physical traits inherited through gene expression are dominant or co-dominant, they show up in the cell. Recessive traits, however, are suppressed."

Working with human cells, the UCI professor has created several relatively stable hybrid systems by fusing normal cells and single or combined malignant cells from three types of tumors — carcinoma, sarcoma and leukemia.

Sound gear, cash, TV set are stolen

Cash, sound equipment and a television set with a total value of $2,350 were taken from the home of Daniel Hickok, 5954 Atlantic Ave., by burglars who kicked in a rear door to enter, Long Beach police said Friday.

Cyclamen plants bloom vigorously and well.

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Christmas gift plants such as cyclamen, azalea, heather and poinsettia are outdoor growing plants that were kept indoors during the Holidays Season. They should then be planted outdoors. First set them under spreading branched bushes to protect them from excess cold in order to harden them off for several weeks before setting them out in the garden.

The cyclamen should be planted out at a north east or a north west corner where they'll get several hours of sun. We've seen a row of them in Paramount growing near a garage wall, east exposure, where there's lots of night dew.

The cyclamen bulb tops must be above the soil area, because the leaves and flowers grow out from the bulb top surface. Soil must never cover the top.

Watered regularly and lightly fed several times throughout the years, encourages the plants to grow actively the year round, instead of going dormant. Unpicked blooms ripen the seeds which drop on the ground and eventually sprout. It takes about 18 months for a cyclamen plant to mature and bloom.

AZALEAS that are growing in peat moss should be planted in pre-moistened sphagnum peat moss, or in an azalea special planting mix.

Heathers were popular years ago, but didn't live long, because it wasn't known they must have a sponge-like medium to grow in, like the azaleas to grow in. One nursery, no longer in operation, discovered that heather grew happily in a mixture of half soil and half sphagnum peat moss.

Now don't confuse sphagnum peat moss with sphagnum moss. Sphagnum moss is a stringy moss partly still green color as well as brown. It must be thoroughly soaked then moisture squeezed out before use. It is used for lining hanging baskets to set plants into.

EARLIER planted annuals and perennials that are growing actively to bloom later, should be fertilized with a balanced plant food of which the nitrogen content is less than the phosphorus.

Some gardeners are sometimes late in setting out annuals for spring flowers. Some snapdragon plants set out last September, or later, may have small rich brown color pustule-like swellings on the under side of leaves. This problem is a fungus called rust. Those plants should be carefully pulled up and thrown into the rubbish so it can be hauled away. Replant with new plants.

Snapdragons planted now grow much faster; but not quite as tall as they would if planted in the fall season. Luckily all fall planted snapdragons don't rust. Don't assume that the wording "rust resistant snapdragons" are rust proof. They're not, because occasionally some fewer might.

STOCKS can also be planted out, but be sure to purchase the small plants; not the largest ones in a pot or in flat. The very small plants are likely to be the newest in the nursery, therefore will grow more robustly.

Gladiolus can be planted now, they'll grow faster later. Plant the bulbs (called corms) at least five inches deep, not two. The mature plants are likely to topple over due to rain, or when watered overhead, if they are planted shallowly. Plant more a month later for a longer extended period of more lovely spikes of colorful blossoms.

GARDENING

Prominent (Plant patent #3380): A grandiflora from the breeding skills of Reimer Kordes of Germany, and his third AARS award winner in the last two years.

Prominent is a brilliant, hot-orange, exquisitely shaped rose, shaded yellow at the base of the petals, but overall an orange of great intensity. The flowers are comparatively small, thereby offering living proof that a rose flower of great beauty does not necessarily have to attain a 6" diameter. Prominent reaches just about half of that, or 3", but its classic, high centered blooms make fine cut flowers, which, with their heavy texture, often last for ten days at normal room temperatures.

Each petal of this 1977 award winner forms a sharp point, as may be seen in the illustration, giving the flower a distinctive, solid star effect. The blossoms maintain their bright color without fading throughout their life on the bush, and are produced continuously in large quantities from one end to the other of the flowering season.

Although rated as a grandiflora in this country, due to its tendency to produce candelabra-like clusters of blooms on a stem, in Europe, where it is known as "Korp," it often throws many single stem, hybrid tea type roses, and so is rated as a hybrid tea.

Happy experience

Lama blesses L.B. hiker

By RAY GISE

I had an experience several years ago which is somewhat unusual to most of us. I received a personal blessing from the Abbot representing all the Lama Buddhists.

He fills in for the Dali Lama who has been in exile in India for many years. This took place at Thyangboche Monastery in Nepal and not too many air miles from Mt. Everest. In fact Everest (Chomolungma, Tibetan name for Everest: "Goddess Mother of the World of Snows") is visible from here on clear days.

When the Communist Chinese invaded Tibet thousands of Tibetans came over the high passes into Nepal, the Nangpa La, Lo La, and Shangri La, all over 19,000 feet. The Tibetan word for a mountain pass is "La." They brought all the Buddhist artifacts they could rescue from Rongbuk monastery in Tibet to Thangboche. This is pronounced "Thang-Bochee."

We were a group of 23 heading for Everest, not to climb it, just to look at the highest mountain in our world. It involved 200 miles of trekking on foot from Kathmandu as there are no roads in the back country of Nepal, only trails, and it is a continuous up and down and eventually always up. We 17 men and 6 women made a small army what with seven Sherpa guides and almost 50 porters carrying our food and equipment. Sherpas are of Tibetan origin although Nepalese by birth.

When we arrived at Thangboche our Sirdar, Ang Temba, had arranged for our group to receive a tour of the monastery and also to receive the Abbot's blessing. The Abbot speaks no English but his brother does and we had a guided tour through the monastery where we saw the huge hand-written books from Tibet, the devil masks and other items used in seasonal festivals. We signed our names in the great register along with all the famous climbers heading for Everest since 1953. Last, but not least we all contributed to the monastery fund. And now it is time to receive the personal blessing.

We were ushered into the Abbot's private quarters. He was in his late 30s when I met him, a handsome face, shaved head, very intelligent and he wore a russet red robe. Some of the monks wear saffron robes. The present

Lama comes from a Sherpa family in Nanche Bazaar (a large village of almost 100 houses;. I was told that the age of four he picked out clothes of a previous dead monk and said they were his. He is considered to be the reincarnation of the old Lama. At 16 he was sent to Tibet to study and returned to Nepal as the leader of the Lama Buddhists some years later.

The blessing ritual: our Sherpas gave each of us a raw silk white scarf and we sort of lined up approaching the Abbot, one at a time. The scarf was draped over our outstreached arms held waist high. We then approached the holy man. He took the scarf and picked up another (this is trading scarves), touching it to his forehead as he gave his blessing. Then he draped the scarf around the neck. Each of us bowed and then stepped out of the way for the next. His prayer to Buddah was for our safety. All were presented a large Buddhist scroll on rice paper.

After all had been blessed the Abbot served us tea, rice cakes, hard candies and excellent cheese made from Yak's milk. The Abbot loves flowers and people who know send him flower seeds of all kinds which he attempts to grow in small hot houses at an elevation of between 13,000 and 14,000 feet. On his window sill were geraniums about several inches in height. Also interesting were two large photographs, autographed, one of Winston Churchill, the other Mahatma Gandhi. When we returned to our camp nearby I asked my favorite Sherpa, Tenzing Gyalso, did we do all right, or words to that affect. He was beaming from ear to ear. He can speak a smattering of five languages but sometimes has difficulty in getting his words and languages together. I recall he said: "Lama like you ... See you long time, say you kind man."

The Abbot did say another prayer over me and I wondered at the time if I had done something wrong with the protocol. If I could piece this together Tenzing was trying to tell me I was a reincarnation of what? I do not look like a Tibetan or Sherpa but after some weeks on the trail I possibly could have.

Lama Buddhism is a mysterious religion. They are animists, believe in reincarnation, astrology and considerable superstition. One standard prayer is: "Om Mani Padme Hum." A literal translation: "Hail to the jewel in the lotus." What it means I do not know. The lotus flower is sacred in Nepal as in India. This prayer is printed over and over on small slips of paper, put into prayer wheels and revolved clock-wise. Each revolution says as many prayers as are in the wheel. I have seen monks spinning these wheels by the hour. Some villages have huge prayer wheels containing thousands of prayers and run by water power from a glacial stream. This is to protect the entire village from harm.

The Sherpa tribes live in the Solu-Khumbu region near Mt. Everest. They are high mountain people and are good mountain companions. Over the centuries Nepal has had many internal bloody wars but none over religion. Both Hindus and Buddhists use each others' temples and "borrow" whatever rituals from each other that may appeal. Nepal is about 90 per cent Hindu extraction and the balance Buddhist.

To sum it all up, this blessing ceremony is something I will never forget. Regardless of one's religion, I am certain it is good to have someone bless you.

Top growth

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — The West Side Assemblies of God Church here has the fastest growing Sunday school in the nation, says Christian Life Magazine in its comparison of 1976 statistics from local churches. The Westside classes grew by 71 per cent to a total attendance of 3,116, up from 1825.

Church decline

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Membership in the United Methodist Church, slipping for the past five years, fell again in the last year, down 96,682 to 9.8 million, but the drop was the smallest since the downtrend started.

Top news stories of year

GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Call it a toss-up, since any of three major religious events of 1976 could be tagged the No. 1 religious story of the year. In fact, depending on who's doing the evaluating, each has received that nod.

The three top-ranked religious developments were:

—The surge of interest in evangelical faith, highlighted by the "born-again" Southern Baptist commitment of President-elect Jimmy Carter.

—The Episcopal Church's decision to start ordaining women to the priesthood, a step still generating struggle and tension in the denomination.

—The Roman Catholic "Call to Action" conference last fall in Detroit in which representatives of the church from across the country urged major church reforms concerning birth control, divorce and women's rights in the ministry.

In the annual poll of the Religion Newswriters Association, religion reporters for the nation's secular newspapers, magazines and wire services cited the Episcopal decision for women's ordination as the top story.

Rated a close second was the stir about evangelical beliefs and Carter, with the Detroit Catholic conference ranked third.

Varying a bit, a poll of Catholic diocesan weekly newspapers picked the Detroit conference as No. 1, while the ecumenical weekly, Christian Century, ranked as first the religious issues generated by the presidential campaign and the awakened public interest in evangelicalism.

"1976 was unmistakably the year of the Evangelical," the weekly said, adding that Carter's candid confirmation of born-again Christianity "made the public aware of the vast religious subculture of the evangelical movement."

In the Religion Newswriters Association poll, other stories ranked in the Top 10 included:

—The deepening schism in the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod that has led more than 10 congregations to leave that denomination so far.

—The Roman Catholic International Eucharistic Congress held in Philadelphia, focusing new attention on the central Christian rite of Holy Communion.

—The continuing conflict over abortion and its emergence as an issue in the presidential election.

—The growing movement to allow divorce and remarriage in the Catholic Church.

The Christian Century list included these additional stories:

—Liberation struggles in southern Africa, including the role of two black clergy leaders in Rhodesia, Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa and United Church of Christ minister Nda-baningi Sithole.

—Torture and imprisonment of church workers in South Korea, Argentina, Brazil, the Philippines and other countries.

—The peace movement in Northern Ireland, led by two Roman Catholic women, joined by countless Protestants from many lands.

—Increased church attention to human sexuality.

Greeks to honor senator

State Sen. Nicholas C. Petris of the San Francisco area will receive the 1977 Hellenic Civic and Humanitarian Award of the Greek American Community of Long Beach and San Pedro next Saturday at the annual Epiphany Honor Award Banquet at the Golden Sails Inn.

The event is sponsored by the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church of Long Beach. The pastor, the Very Rev. Nicholas T. Billiris, and Thomas Soupos, community president, will list many of the senator's activities in philanthropy, politics and religion.

On the following Sunday morning there will be the traditional Long Beach "Blessing of the Waters," conducted by Bishop Meletio of San Francisco, spiritual leader of the Western states.

Little cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Only one-third to one-half as many Seventh-day Adventists die of cancer as their fellow Americans, Atlas World Press Review says.

The periodical adds that diet apparently plays a key role in the comparatively lower death rate, noting that Adventists do not smoke or drink alcohol or coffee.

More students

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Concordia Seminary, hit by a 1974 walkout of most of its students and faculty in a dispute with leadership of the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod, has built its enrollment back to 356 students this year, it reports.

Domino effect

When a vehicular object in motion comes to a sudden halt against an obstruction on a surface recently moistened by precipitation, other vehicular objects following the first tend to do likewise. This is known as the law of rainertia, as illustrated by this non-injury four-car pileup at Pacific Coast Highway and Pacific Avenue at 1 p.m. Thursday.

Barber's chair a seat of wisdom

By DICK EMERY
Staff Writer

Take any barber shop, on the year's last day.

It is the day for airing political views.

"It's a hardship," the big fellow in the barber chair was saying.

"Taxes on booze," he said.

"And on cigarettes."

The barber steered clippers around the big man's neck. On a shelf with bottles of dandruff-killer a sign said "God Bless Our Happy Home." The big man was addressing two waiting customers sitting on a bench.

The barber nodded and never missed a clip.

The men waiting to get shorn went right on waiting, poker-faced, the way waiting people look.

"Say the usual bottle of booze costs him $5. Half the five, or more, goes to taxes.

The barber dusted the big man's neck with talcum, but the man offered a few more words:

"End of the year, you have to think of government, like taxes," he said.

"Take a guy who is a good citizen. He improves his house, builds a swimming pool and everything. What do they do?

"They increase his taxes!"

The barber ran a midget vacuum cleaner around the big man's neck and whisked away the hair-catching apron like a bullfighter whisking a cape, saying politely, "Next, please!"

Police groups list officers for '77

Two Long Beach police groups, the Police Officers Association and the Motor Patrol Association, Friday listed new officers for 1977.

The MPA, composed of current and former police motorcyclists and citizen members, listed Michael McDonald, president; Robert Wilson, vice president; Virgil Woods, secretary; Michael Peters, treasurer; William Snow, director, and Robert Calhoun, James Kennedy and Al Haft, citizen members.

Camping gear in parked car taken

While Timothy Hoss's car was parked outside his home at 4745 Pacific Ave., burglars pried open a windwing to enter and took camping equipment, tools and a tape deck valued together at $600, Long Beach police said Friday.

A personal kind of column

MARK CLUTTER
RELIGION EDITOR

Many months ago my mother, Dr. May Clutter, wrote an autobiographical article for these pages.

It was quite a success. People are still asking, "How is your mother? She is such an interesting person."

When I talked to her by telephone Christmas morning she was filled with the joy of the day. She was going to dinner at the home of a second cousin.

Last summer she celebrated her 90th birthday in the home of my brother, Ray, in Lytle Creek Canyon. She traveled alone with only an assist on and off the plane. She enjoyed it. "I like my apartment but I do need a change now and then." I think she would ride any flying machine to any place in the world.

She recently had a bit of luck. Her second cataract was removed and she now has glasses that permit her to read as much as ever. She was always a bookworm. In her busy younger years she would settle down with a book about the time other people were going to bed.

There is no way of guessing how many times she has read every page of the Bible. She could be described as a sophisticated Fundamentalist. The Bible is the revealed Word of God, but it is not to be understood easily or superficially. Much study is required.

She is still very much a working minister. The door of her apartment in a retirement hotel is always unlocked in the day time. When there is a knock she calls, "Come in!" Her "parish" is, of course, mostly people in the hotel, but many young people are also in her "flock."

On Sundays she goes to a Christian Church in a newish suburb where there are many young and youngish people. She doesn't want to be a member of an age group. She is fond of her grandchildren and great grandchildren, whom she sees too infrequently because they are scattered across America.

Anyone who wants to can drop her a note or a card. The address is:

CHRIST'S FRONTIERSMAN

Much of my mother's personality reflects the influence of my father, Dr. Edward Clutter, who died in 1941.

Like many sons, I did not fully understand or appreciate my father until I had some maturity. As a boy I didn't realize that he belonged to a dying period of American history. He was a frontiersman.

His parents, who as children remembered the ugly Civil War in Missouri, rode westward across the river. He was born in a white-washed dugout on the "Lone Prairie." Grandfather later became foreman of a gang of ignorant, drunken, half-slave Irishmen building a railroad across Nebraska. (Some of those Irishmen later became officials of the railroad.)

Dad by the age of nine was a "mule skinner." He loved those smart, tough hybrids all his life. And they loved him. Ferocious brutes who could be handled only with whips would come to him and let him whisper in their ears.

He got to school three or four years late in Tecumseh, Neb. Boyhood in those days was rough and muscular. He became a boxer and football player. Football today looks dangerous; then it was dangerous. In one game between towns he was one of three starters who came through without injury.

In Cotner College, a Christian Church school, he distinguished himself in football. But he had got the message. He would be a preacher.

He was an ideal preacher for the people he ministered to. He was a big, handsome man with a mane of blond hair. He was a good orator. He knew how to speak softly with sweet reason, and he knew how to thunder.

Mostly he was an evangelist. He was not the kind who could sit placidly in a pastorate while he led people slowly to better lives. He tried to take towns by storm — and often did. Some of the churches he founded are still flourishing.

One must remember the world he lived in, the small towns and farms of a not entirely tamed frontier. He was a kind of Matt Dillon, bringing peace and law and order. His weapon was not a six-gun but a Bible.

An evangelist brought excitement to towns in which usually nothing much happened. There was a touch of circus. People turned out to enjoy the music and and hear the sermon and sometimes with tears to hit the Glory Trail.

He always preached to his kind of people — farmers, cowboys, laborers, small-town merchants and their families. I suppose some of his sermons might sound "simplistic" today in some city churches. He intended to be simple, putting the hard truths of the Bible in words his hearers could understand.

His ministry was personal. He was always interested in helping individuals. On a few occasions I found out by accident of good works he had never mentioned.

His era has past — was passing while he lived. He would probably admire Billy Graham, who is a direct descendant of his kind of preacher. But no one would think of taking his personal problems to Billy.

He was for "women's liberation." He always encouraged women. My mother, ordained in 1917, was his equal partner in ministry. He was a good father, a friend and playmate of little boys and a good counselor of teenagers who, alas, did not always heed him.

ARE VETERANS DANGEROUS?

When a nation trains its young men in the arts of manslaughter do they come home from their stint on the battlefields to commit violent crimes?

Many people throughout history have asked this question. Even the ancient Romans worried about it.

Psychology Today magazine calls it "the myth of the violent veteran." It quotes many studies of the problems of veterans and comes to the conclusion that they are very much like civilian men of their ages as far as violence goes. There does seem to be a rise in domestic violence after a war — but the veterans are not to blame.

It may be true that a few men have a taste for homicide and find a legal outlet for their twisted emotions in war. Once out of uniform they may find illegal outlets. The military can scarcely be blamed for such behavior.

Those of us who served know that veterans are no more violent than their civilian peers. In fact, many are less so. Many who have waded thigh-deep in blood lose their

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Finds you in a relatively quiet developmental phase while you become familiar with the ins and outs of a local system. Late in the year the tempo of daily living picks up as you simplify your approach, focus on whatever you value most. Relationships follow a similar pattern. Today's natives are noted for great and sustained power in politics once motivated to try. Those born this year are guided by intuition and a resolve to meet all challenges. Their education should be well rounded.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Renew acquaintances with those just back from journeys. Keep on the move, but be thrifty. What you hear provokes serious thought. Evening is for romance.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Remnants of holiday activities cause outlays beyond your current budget. Draw the line or else resolve to economize for some time to come.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Friends wait for you to set the pace or will let you modify what they're doing if you speak up. Youngsters need advise and protection. Take several breaks.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Today's influences favor solitary meditation. Later hours offer reconciliation with older people, as well as an inspiring view of an old problem.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Competitive instincts run strong. If you can afford to outspend neighbors, do so on projects that are constructive. If you lack cash, be innovative.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Intuition arrives belatedly. Follow it, contrary to advice you get from friends. It's okay to bend the rules temporarily.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do what comes naturally, within reason, to the limits of the present situation. Decisions make themselves within the context of current relationships.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Ask good questions, listen carefully to the answers. Experts base opinions on precedents set long ago. Translate them into contemporary terms.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The day goes smoothly as you conserve energy and take time to consolidate plans. Gather your resources for the greater task ahead.

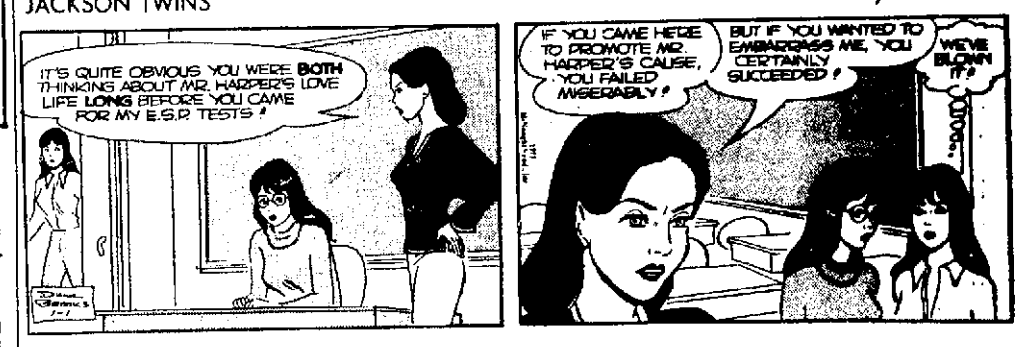

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pursue a leisurely course. If you've done your work, luxuriate in the preview of what's coming. If you fell down on the job, don't dawdle.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19): Enjoy vicarious participation at public or sports events. Lean by example. Use a chance to set somebody straight on a story mixup.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep life simple. Once you fulfill your usual Sunday responsibilities, enjoy watching the passing scene. Try to improve your perspective.

Military service promotes a kind of brotherly love: A man learns to value his buddies, sometimes at risk of his own life. Any sensitive man in war learns the meaning of loyalty.

After a war most men go through a period of emotional confusion. But most make out all right. I lived for a year in "Veterans Village" at Oklahoma State University. My neighbors were keen young men with families determined to make careers for themselves. "The best students we have ever had," many professors remarked.

No man ever comes home from a war the same man who went — but many of them are better men than those who didn't go.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most young people today are not antagonistic toward organized religion, but are inclined to evaluate it on their own, rather than accept it automatically, a new study finds.

The study, commissioned by the U.S. Catholic Conference Education Department's office of research, says that a "confrontation with faith" now occurs earlier in life than before, that it usually has come at college age, but it's now hitting at the high school level.

Many youths, concerned for values of autonomy, are "confused" by the very freedoms they demand, the study says. It adds that organized religion, along with other support systems of family and peer groups, "can be a major force but today's adolescent will assess it more critically than in the past."

Rice to Viets

NEW YORK (AP) — A Christmas-week shipment of 1,325 tons of rice to Vietnam was arranged by three agencies, Lutheran World Relief, Church World Service and Friendshipment. The rice was purchased for $349,000 in Thailand and was scheduled to reach Haiphong, Vietnam, on Jan. 10, to help those suffering from severe weather, flooding and still heavy war damage.

LETTERS

Korean Church

At our Session meeting last week an action was taken that I think will be of general interest to the City of Long Beach. At the request of the Synod of Southern California of our denomination, our Session has agreed that Covenant Church will serve as the host church to a young Korean Presbyterian congregation. As you perhaps know, there has been a tremendous influx of the Koreans, especially from North Korea, in the years since the Korean conflict. In the Los Angeles area alone, the number of native-born Koreans has increased, so we were informed, from some 1,000 in the year of 1955 to over 30,000 now. In view of the fact that the Presbyterian Church for a century or more has had a strong missionary program in Korea, many of these new immigrants to Southern California have had Presbyterian background.

The congregation of Koreans (now approximately 50 members) begins worshiping regularly in the facilities of Covenant Presbyterian Church on the first Sunday in February, 1977. The name of the congregation is the Korean Messiah Presbyterian Church. The pastor is the Rev. Young Hwan Choi, a fully ordained clergyman of the national Korean Presbyterian Church. He, himself, is one of the immigrants.

The congregation is made up mainly of folk for whom the English language is still quite strange, and so the services will be conducted in Korean. However, it is expected that children, especially, will soon begin to have at least part of their Sunday School instruction in English, for they will be exposed, of course, to the English language in their school situations. At present, this congregation is not a part of the United Presbyterian Church in the USA, although it is a part of the Presbyterian Church of Korea which is in full communion with our Church. The intention is that as soon as this infant congregation becomes a bit more settled and stabilized, that it will apply for admission to the United Presbyterian Church in the USA as one of our regular congregations.

The plan for the Korean Church is to hold its meetings in our Chapel on Sunday afternoons at 2:00 and also to use rooms and facilities of our plant on Sunday afternoons for Sunday School and Fellowship purposes. We will, of course, seek to develop the closest kind of fraternal relationship between Covenant Church itself, and this new congregation.

Arab menace

While you are devoting time, attention and space to the Jewish and Christian religions in your Saturday column, it is unfortunate that you are neglecting the sinister menace that confronts both the Jewish and Christian religions. I am referring to the Arab use of their economic power to accomplish their ultimate goal of replacing the Judeo-Christian ethic with Moslem totalitarianism. The history of Moslem intolerance to the Jewish and Christian religions extends back into many centuries. The Koran considers Judaism and Christianity heathen religions and considers Jews and Christians infidels. Moslem persection of Christians and Jews is an ongoing tragedy.

The most recent example of the Moslem intolerance to Christians was seen in its severe form in Lebanon when the civil war erupted as a result of Moslem efforts to destroy the Christian institutions, culture and democracy that prevailed in Lebanon for the past 40 years. Is it not ironic that the Jews who have suffered so much at the hands of the Christians for centuries were the ones to show compassion for the Christians in Lebanon, a Israel provided medical, social and economic benefits to thousands of Christians uprooted as a result of the civil war? Under the guise of "peace" Syria sent in troops to Lebanon, and Christian Lebanon is no longer an independent democracy, but a satellite of Moslem Syria. It appears that a major step has been achieved by the Moslems in the Middle East as they have eliminated the strongest Christian bastion of the Middle East.

In their pursuit to rid the Middle East of all non-Moslem religions, Moslem intolerance to other religions in the Middle East is the rule of the day. The Christian Kopts in Egypt, the Christian Berbers in Algeria, both have been reduced to second class status through steady persecution over centuries. The Moslems of North Sudan slaughtered hundreds of thousands of Black Christians in Southern Sudan in crushing the Black Christian revolution against their Northern Sudanese Moslem oppressors. The Iraqui Moslems have been committing genocide against the Kurds for decades and were able to finally crush the dream of an independent Kurdish state when Moslem Iran joined with Moslem Iraq to crush the Kurdish revolution.

The Jewish State of Israel had to defend itself in five major wars started by the Arab Moslems in an effort to destroy the Jewish State. Arab intolerance to the Jews and persecution of the Jews has no equal. The birthplace of the humiliating yellow armband was under Moslem rule as the Caliph Haroun al Rashid forced the yellow badge of shame upon Jews in 807 A.D. In 1066 more than 5,000 Jews were murdered by Moslem mobs in Granada. More than 6,000 Jews of Fez were massacred in 1033. Before the birth of the State of Israel, centuries of persecution and pogroms had reduced the Jews to a second class status in the Arab countries while today Jews in other Arab lands, especially Syria and Iraq, are imprisoned without trial, tortured and murdered. Who can forget the wild public celebration at the public hangings of Jews in Baghdad Central Square? And shortly after the Yom Kippur War, four young Jewish girls were savagely attacked and murdered by Moslem Syrians. During the Yom Kippur War, Israeli prisoners of war were decapitated by the Syrian Moslems, and those responsible were awarded a medal for decapitating and eating the flesh of Jewish prisoners. It was for the decapitation of Jews, not Zionists or Israelis, for which the award was granted by the Syrian government.

The economic power of the Moslem Arab countries extends beyond the inflation and unemployment caused by the fourfold increase in prices of oil. It extends beyond the influence these countries exert on foreign policies of the Western countries, the United States, included. As can be seen from the hostile and nefarious acts committed by the Moslems against the Christians in Lebanon, Jews in Israel, and other minorities in the Middle East, the Moslems are exerting their efforts in order to dominate the Judeo-Christian ethic and replace it with Moslem totalitarianism. With the example of Moslem massacres of Christians and Jews fresh in our mind from their recent actions and the absence of freedom of speech, religion or press, and the suppression of basic human rights in each and every one of the Arab countries, the thought of the subservience of the Judeo-Christian ethic and Western civilization to Moslem domination and influence is the "impossible thought."

POSITIVE THINKING

A satisfying life

I had an interesting conference with a man and his wife on a problem of great importance to them. The wife was very troubled; she did most of the talking. The husband, though concerned, was quiet and restrained.

Finally, commenting upon his quietness in contrast to her tension, the wife said, "You'll never get any expression out of Jack. Nothing troubles him. I fuss and fuss, but he keeps on being quiet and peaceful, no matter what."

I was impressed by his dignity, gentility, and above all, his profound calm. He was a much stronger personality than his wife. Finally I asked him how, in the face of a problem such as his, he could manifest such a spirit of imperturbability.

His answer was direct. "There's no secret about it," he said. "I have discovered the science of a satisfying life."

The phrase caught my interest. This man knew what so many of us do not seem to realize, that living is a science. In a scientific age, all too few of us recognize the fact. We all know what science can do to bring a television picture out of the sky into our living rooms, to increase the egg production of hens by special feeds and culture, to move us from place to place with increasing speed. These accomplishments result from the application of certain scientific laws.

And there are laws in the spiritual realm governing living, which are so exact, so precise, that if you learn to apply them to yourself you will develop powers you did not know you had. You will develop a peace you never dreamed you could possess. You can have insights far beyond anything you ever conceived. And you can solve your problems with an ease and skill which will astonish you.

It is amazing what a human being can do with himself when he learns to live scientifically. And, strangely enough, one of the greatest tools for doing this is the Bible, a book written before the word "science" was coined. For the Bible is crammed with workable procedures for meeting the problems of life.

What did this quiet and composed man apply in his crisis? It was the law of keeping calm and not getting excited, and of practicing faith in the outcome. "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." (Isaiah 30:15)

Obviously a quiet mind is essential to a rational approach to a problem. One cannot think efficiently when the mind is in a tumult of emotional reactions. The first principle of clear thinking is quiet thinking. There is enough brain power in us to solve any problem when quietly and confidently we call upon our strength and intelligence.

So the two things this man did was to practice quietness and affirm confidence.

In assuming an attitude of quiet confidence, regardless of how upsetting a situation may be, you set correcting forces in motion. Excitedly tell yourself that a matter is going badly, and you actually encourage that result. But keep calm and tell yourself that with God's help and your own powers things are going to turn out all right, and you definitely stimulate such an outcome.

The reason for this is simple. You are thinking and believing, and no forces are more powerful than thought and faith. By thought you apply your own inner powers to the situation, and by faith you bring to bear the vast powers of God.

Try this method for yourself, and see if it isn't "the science of a satisfying life."

Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. Acts 8:5.

1976 called epochal, schizophrenic period

Steady growth trend failed to materialize

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In what was certainly a gross understatement, one of the nation's top industrialists have described 1976 as a "mixed-up year" for the American economy.

That was an accurate assessment up to a point, but it doesn't delve deeply enough. Economic events and political developments of the last 12 months have made 1976 even more dramatic and traumatic than such a relatively mild characterization suggests. In many ways, the year now ending has been a truly epochal and schizophrenic period.

Contrary to the expectations of most forecasters, the year's economic scenario followed an up-and-down pattern both here and abroad, instead of the steady growth trend generally envisioned.

The analysts were right on target in foreseeing the year's real growth in the neighborhood of 6 per cent, but that was achieved only because the first quarter had been so robust with its 9.2 per cent gain. Few economists anticipated the steady erosion of the advance in the subsequent three quarters — a vital development responsible for much of the recent concern about the current state of the economy, its prospects, and how best to deal with the attendant problems.

The forecasters were wrong, too, in their pessimistic evaluation of the inflation outlook, when most of them were looking for an inflation rate in the area of 6 per cent or more. By virtue of the moderating trend in wage settlements and the decline in food prices, the year's overall price level has increased around 5 per cent — much greater progress in that area than everyone predicted or hoped, though hardly a reason for any great elation.

Those were the principal developments that made 1976 such an unusual year. They were supplemented by unforeseen political upheavals, currency turmoil and international confrontations of various sorts as the world continued the search for new directions in the pursuit of an elusive prosperity and stability.

As in all years, 1976 contained a full quota of excitement and surprises, concluding with the baffling two-tiered pricing increase decided by the oil-producing nations two weeks ago and with the cabinet choices just announced by President-elect Jimmy Carter.

Before that, the outstanding development of the last year was the sudden and significent slowing of the economies of the United States and the major Western nations. That reality changed the economic complexion internally and externally for many nations, and it will no doubt exert a profound influence on future economic policies on many lands.

Other noteworthy developements of the last year included:

— The widespread corporate bribery and payoff scandals that toppled business managements and created tensions in several foreign governments.

— The big boom in the auto business and the late-year resurgence in housing activity.

— The delay in business capital-spending programs.

— The great crop harvest in the United States, the Soviet Union and some other countries.

— New York City's moratorium on $1 billion of debt, and the subsequent court finding that it was unconstitutional.

— The banner year for the financial markets of the United States.

— The election of new governments in the United States and such other nations as Japan, Australia, Sweden, Italy, Spain, Mexico and Finland.

In the international area, the year's major developments involved changes in currency values in several leading nations as they went through adjustments related to internal inflationary conditions, the impact of high oil prices and their adverse trade performance.

The British pound was thus in the spotlight throughout the year as it fell from the $2 level to a point below $1.60. The Italian lira was also weak; the Canadian dollar fell below parity with the United States dollar for the first time in years; the Mexican peso was devalued by almost 50 per cent and was allowed to float for the first time in 22 years and, conversely, the German mark and the Japanese yen remained strong.

Even though many nations turned more restrictive in their trade policies, world trade grew sharply — by 10 per cent — to a new record above $1,000 billion. The United States, however, slipped back into a deficit of about $5 billion as its oil import bill rose substantially, while its huge surplus from agricultural trade diminished somewhat.

The U. S. economic picture, of course, was affected in various ways by the trade and currency problems of its partners, as well as by the more pronounced slowing of so many Western economies.

Despite the well publicized "pause" last summer and fall in the American economy, total business activity increased for the year to a degree — 6 per cent in real terms — that by historical standards was highly impressive. Some 3 million new jobs were created, and yet unemployment rose to 8.1 per cent by yearend as the labor force continued its substantial growth.

Even though personal income advanced sharply to new peaks and corporate profits jumped by some 30 per cent to a new record of $85 billion after taxes, there prevailed a highly cautious mood among the American public and in the business world. The profit performance was mixed among companies and industries, however.

Although bank lending suffered in the process, 1976 was a big year for the stock and bond markets. It was a record year for private debt financing and a peak for municipal borrowing, too. Except for a six-week period in the spring, when inflation briefly flared up strongly, the bond market performed well all year.

And the New York Stock Exchange, though erratic in its price movement, chalked up a record volume, with trading exceeding 5 billion shares for the first time. Amex and over-the-counter activity also increased sharply above 1975 levels. And yet many brokerage houses failed to participate in the prosperity because of rising costs and the impact of negotiated commission rates.

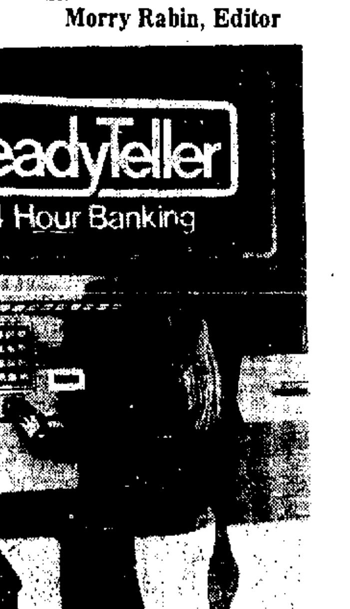

The sharp decline in business activity was clearly a nightmare of the past as 1976 moved along, and yet, in a recent poll, a high percentage of the respondents indicated they still believed the United States was mired in a recession. At the same time, it was reported that the number of poor persons in the country had increased by 2.5 million in 1975, when the current recovery was starting.

The highly erratic course of events over the last 12 months emphasized again the difficulties of the forecasters, but one American analyst who was right a year ago was Walter E. Hoadley, senior economist for the Bank of America, when he commented:

"The year 1976 promises to satisfy few people in the United States or around the world. Recovery from the deep global recession will be real — but too slow to solve the most pressing economic problems."

That's exactly the kind of year that 1976 has been. Its one saving grace is the fact that it is ending on an upbeat that promises to grow stronger as its own economic momentum builds. The promise of some pump-priming from the new Carter administration should add to the momentum.

AN AUTOMATIC BANKING MACHINE

Automatic tellers at Security Bank

Security Pacific Bank will activate 13 on-line automated teller machines (ATMs) known as ReadyTeller in the immediate future on a test basis at 11 key bank offices and convenience centers in Long Beach, Los Angeles, Torrance, Hawthorne and Palos Verdes Estates.

Manufactured by the Docutel Corp., Dallas, the ReadyTeller machines make cash withdrawals from $25 to $100, accept deposits, make loan payments and transfer funds between accounts.

Some 76,000 Master Charge and SecurityService cardholders in the area will be mailed personal identification numbers and invited to come into the bank and use the ReadyTeller machine.

"Objective of the ReadyTeller-ATM installations is to enhance customer service by offering a convenient alternative to waiting in long lines at 'live' teller windows," said Donald A. Oie, vice president in Security Pacific Bank's Marketing Department.

FIVE OF THE ReadyTeller machines will be installed on the outside walls of existing bank offices to allow 24-hour service for routine banking transactions. Five other units will be available in three bank lobbies during regular banking hours while a driveup ReadyTeller machine will provide round the clock service for motorists at the Palos Verdes Center office. One unit each will be installed at convenience centers in a neighborhood and a regional shopping center.

The five bank offices with outside wall-type ReadyTeller units will be the Marina del Rey office, 4754 Admiralty Way, Marina del Rey; Vermont & Hollywood office, 1715 North Vermont Ave., Los Angeles; Westwood Village office, 930 Westwood Blvd.; Wilshire & Harvard office, 3620 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles and 190th & Anza office, 5108 190th St., Torrance.

The five indoor ReadyTeller machines will be at the Bixby Knolls office, 4436 Atlantic Ave., Long Beach (two machines); West Civic Center office, 111 N. Hope St., Los Angeles (two machines in the Department of Water and Power building); and University & Jefferson office, 821 Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles.

6 pct. capital-outlays growth seen stimulant to recovery

By JACK HOUSTON
Knight News Service

A survey of American business spending plans for 1977 reveals an expected 6 per cent real growth in capital expenditures for the new year. The increase would provide much-needed stimulus to the nation's economic recovery.

The survey, conducted yearly since 1953 by the economics department of McGraw-Hill Inc.'s, Publications Co., was taken in October and shows only preliminary plans by the participating companies.

Standard & Poor's, however, says that while the survey notes the direction of change, it tends "to overestimate the extent of change in periods of contraction and fall short of the degree of change in expansion years."

ACCORDING TO THE survey, new plant and equipment expenditures in the United States will total $139.55 billion next year, a 13 per cent increase from this year's estimated $123.55 billion. Real growth will amount to only 6 per cent, however, because prices of the new facilities are expected to increase 7 per cent.

"The survey's optimism is fortified by the unanimity of 25 industry groups' planned investment increases, and a greater degree of certainty by respondents about 1977 plans than was noted in the year-earlier survey," S&P states in its latest analysis of the machinery sector.

S&P says outlays this year nearly will reach its expected total but will fall short of an estimate later revised upward. Last spring, outlays were predicted to reach $127.34 by year's end, but nearly $4 billion of that has been deferred until next year.

S&P REPORTS capital spending will be strongest in the manufacturing sector, where a 15 per cent gain is expected. Durable goods producers will account for a larger share of spending, up 23 per cent against only 9 per cent for nondurable goods.

Major segments of the durable goods sector that anticipate large capital outlays include the automobile industry, up 61 per cent; nonferrous metals, up 28 per cent; and nonelectrical machinery, up 20 per cent.

Among nondurable industries, big spenders will include the rubber industry, up 56 per cent; and the petroleum industry, up 10 per cent.

"Fulfillment of these spending plans, or a fairly close approximation, would provide a healthy operating environment for many segments of the mahinery industry," the S&P report states.

S&P's analysis also reports increased demand in the machine tool industry and says demand for construction and material handling equipment looks "promising."

Gains also are expected for producers of agricultural machinery and industrial machinery, pollution control equipment, and railway equipment.

The auto industry will be the major influence on machine tool demand. Many producers of construction equipment were able to shift production to machinery for energy-related projects. Now the domestic construction market appears ready to take up slack in this area, S&P reports.

Happy experience

Lama blesses L.B. hiker

By RAY GISE

I had an experience several years ago which is somewhat unusual to most of us. I received a personal blessing from the Abbot representing all the Lama Buddhists.

He fills in for the Dali Lama who has been in exile in India for many years. This took place at Thyangboche Monastery in Nepal and not too many air miles from Mt. Everest. In fact Everest (Chomolungma, Tibetan name for Everest: "Goddess Mother of the World of Snows") is visible from here on clear days.

When the Communist Chinese invaded Tibet thousands of Tibetans came over the high passes into Nepal, the Nangpa La, Lo La, and Shangri La, all over 19,000 feet. The Tibetan word for a mountain pass is "La." They brought all the Buddhist artifacts they could rescue from Rongbuk monastery in Tibet to Thangboche. This is pronounced "Thang-Bochee."

We were a group of 23 heading for Everest, not to climb it, just to look at the highest mountain in our world. It involved 200 miles of trekking on foot from Kathmandu as there are no roads in the back country of Nepal, only trails, and it is a continuous up and down and eventually always up. We 17 men and 6 women made a small army what with seven Sherpa guides and almost 50 porters carrying our food and equipment. Sherpas are of Tibetan origin although Nepalese by birth.

When we arrived at Thangboche our Sirdar, Ang Temba, had arranged for our group to receive a tour of the monastery and also to receive the Abbot's blessing. The Abbot speaks no English but his brother does and we had a guided tour through the monastery where we saw the huge hand-written books from Tibet, the devil masks and other items used in seasonal festivals. We signed our names in the great register along with all the famous climbers heading for Everest since 1953. Last, but not least we all contributed to the monastery fund. And now it is time to receive the personal blessing.

We were ushered into the Abbot's private quarters. He was in his late 30s when I met him, a handsome face, shaved head, very intelligent and he wore a russet red robe. Some of the monks wear saffron robes. The present

Lama comes from a Sherpa family in Nanche Bazaar (a large village of almost 100 houses;. I was told that the age of four he picked out clothes of a previous dead monk and said they were his. He is considered to be the reincarnation of the old Lama. At 16 he was sent to Tibet to study and returned to Nepal as the leader of the Lama Buddhists some years later.

The blessing ritual: our Sherpas gave each of us a raw silk white scarf and we sort of lined up approaching the Abbot, one at a time. The scarf was draped over our outstreached arms held waist high. We then approached the holy man. He took the scarf and picked up another (this is trading scarves), touching it to his forehead as he gave his blessing. Then he draped the scarf around the neck. Each of us bowed and then stepped out of the way for the next. His prayer to Buddah was for our safety. All were presented a large Buddhist scroll on rice paper.

After all had been blessed the Abbot served us tea, rice cakes, hard candies and excellent cheese made from Yak's milk. The Abbot loves flowers and people who know send him flower seeds of all kinds which he attempts to grow in small hot houses at an elevation of between 13,000 and 14,000 feet. On his window sill were geraniums about several inches in height. Also interesting were two large photographs, autographed, one of Winston Churchill, the other Mahatma Gandhi. When we returned to our camp nearby I asked my favorite Sherpa, Tenzing Gyalso, did we do all right, or words to that affect. He was beaming from ear to ear. He can speak a smattering of five languages but sometimes has difficulty in getting his words and languages together. I recall he said: "Lama like you ... See you long time, say you kind man."

The Abbot did say another prayer over me and I wondered at the time if I had done something wrong with the protocol. If I could piece this together Tenzing was trying to tell me I was a reincarnation of what? I do not look like a Tibetan or Sherpa but after some weeks on the trail I possibly could have.

Lama Buddhism is a mysterious religion. They are animists, believe in reincarnation, astrology and considerable superstition. One standard prayer is: "Om Mani Padme Hum." A literal translation: "Hail to the jewel in the lotus." What it means I do not know. The lotus flower is sacred in Nepal as in India. This prayer is printed over and over on small slips of paper, put into prayer wheels and revolved clock-wise. Each revolution says as many prayers as are in the wheel. I have seen monks spinning these wheels by the hour. Some villages have huge prayer wheels containing thousands of prayers and run by water power from a glacial stream. This is to protect the entire village from harm.

The Sherpa tribes live in the Solu-Khumbu region near Mt. Everest. They are high mountain people and are good mountain companions. Over the centuries Nepal has had many internal bloody wars but none over religion. Both Hindus and Buddhists use each others' temples and "borrow" whatever rituals from each other that may appeal. Nepal is about 90 per cent Hindu extraction and the balance Buddhist.

To sum it all up, this blessing ceremony is something I will never forget. Regardless of one's religion, I am certain it is good to have someone bless you.

GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Call it a toss-up, since any of three major religious events of 1976 could be tagged the No. 1 religious story of the year. In fact, depending on who's doing the evaluating, each has received that nod.

The three top-ranked religious developments were:

—The surge of interest in evangelical faith, highlighted by the "born-again" Southern Baptist commitment of President-elect Jimmy Carter.

—The Episcopal Church's decision to start ordaining women to the priesthood, a step still generating struggle and tension in the denomination.

—The Roman Catholic "Call to Action" conference last fall in Detroit in which representatives of the church from across the country urged major church reforms concerning birth control, divorce and women's rights in the ministry.

In the annual poll of the Religion Newswriters Association, religion reporters for the nation's secular newspapers, magazines and wire services cited the Episcopal decision for women's ordination as the top story.

Rated a close second was the stir about evangelical beliefs and Carter, with the Detroit Catholic conference ranked third.

Varying a bit, a poll of Catholic diocesan weekly newspapers picked the Detroit conference as No. 1, while the ecumenical weekly, Christian Century, ranked as first the religious issues generated by the presidential campaign and the awakened public interest in evangelicalism.

"1976 was unmistakably the year of the Evangelical," the weekly said, adding that Carter's candid confirmation of born-again Christianity "made the public aware of the vast religious subculture of the evangelical movement."

In the Religion Newswriters Association poll, other stories ranked in the Top 10 included:

—The deepening schism in the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod that has led more than 10 congregations to leave that denomination so far.

—The Roman Catholic International Eucharistic Congress held in Philadelphia, focusing new attention on the central Christian rite of Holy Communion.

—The continuing conflict over abortion and its emergence as an issue in the presidential election.

—The growing movement to allow divorce and remarriage in the Catholic Church.

The Christian Century list included these additional stories:

—Liberation struggles in southern Africa, including the role of two black clergy leaders in Rhodesia, Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa and United Church of Christ minister Nda-baningi Sithole.

—Torture and imprisonment of church workers in South Korea, Argentina, Brazil, the Philippines and other countries.

—The peace movement in Northern Ireland, led by two Roman Catholic women, joined by countless Protestants from many lands.

—Increased church attention to human sexuality.

Courses on rearing children

Four-week courses on how to rear children will be conducted at Lakewood Village Community Church, Centralia Street and Sunfield Avenue. The first course, which begins Tuesday, Jan. 11, at 7 p.m. is for single parents.

The second course is for couples. It begins on Feb. 8. There is no charge.

Top growth

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — The West Side Assemblies of God Church here has the fastest growing Sunday school in the nation, says Christian Life Magazine in its comparison of 1976 statistics from local churches. The Westside classes grew by 71 per cent to a total attendance of 3,116, up from 1825.

Church decline

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Membership in the United Methodist Church, slipping for the past five years, fell again in the last year, down 96,682 to 9.8 million, but the drop was the smallest since the downtrend started.

Greeks to honor senator

State Sen. Nicholas C. Petris of the San Francisco area will receive the 1977 Hellenic Civic and Humanitarian Award of the Greek American Community of Long Beach and San Pedro next Saturday at the annual Epiphany Honor Award Banquet at the Golden Sails Inn.

The event is sponsored by the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church of Long Beach. The pastor, the Very Rev. Nicholas T. Billiris, and Thomas Soupos, community president, will list many of the senator's activities in philanthropy, politics and religion.

On the following Sunday morning there will be the traditional Long Beach "Blessing of the Waters," conducted by Bishop Meletio of San Francisco, spiritual leader of the Western states.

Little cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Only one-third to one-half as many Seventh-day Adventists die of cancer as their fellow Americans, Atlas World Press Review says.

The periodical adds that diet apparently plays a key role in the comparatively lower death rate, noting that Adventists do not smoke or drink alcohol or coffee.

More students

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Concordia Seminary, hit by a 1974 walkout of most of its students and faculty in a dispute with leadership of the Lutheran Church Missouri Synod, has built its enrollment back to 356 students this year, it reports.

Actor priest

Harry Townes, who will appear Sunday, 11 a.m., in "A Christmas Triptych," a chancel drama, at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Seventh Street and Atlantic Avenue, leads a double life.

He has had more than 300 roles in television and his credits include ten Broadway shows and 15 movies. But he is also Father Townes, a priest on the staff of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Los Angeles.

Others in the play are also professionals: Edward Andrews, Peter Hansen and Natalie Core.

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Finds you in a relatively quiet developmental phase while you become familiar with the ins and outs of a local system. Late in the year the tempo of daily living picks up as you simplify your approach, focus on whatever you value most. Relationships follow a similar pattern. Today's natives are noted for great and sustained power in politics once motivated to try. Those born this year are guided by intuition and a resolve to meet all challenge. Their education should be well rounded.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Renew acquaintances with those just back from journeys. Keep on the move, but be thrifty. What you hear provokes serious thought. Evening is for romance.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Remnants of holiday activities cause outlays beyond your current budget. Draw the line or else resolve to economize for some time to come.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Friends wait for you to set the pace or will let you modify what they're doing if you speak up. Youngsters need advise and protection. Take several breaks.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Today's influences favor solitary meditation. Later hours offer reconciliation with older people, as well as an inspiring view of an old problem.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Competitive instincts run strong. If you can afford to outspend neighbors, do so on projects that are constructive. If you lack cash, be innovative.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Intuition arrives belatedly. Follow it, contrary to advice you get from friends. It's okay to bend the rules temporarily.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do what comes naturally, within reason, to the limits of the present situation. Decisions make themselves within the context of current relationships.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Ask good questions, listen carefully to the answers. Experts base opinions on precedents set long ago. Translate them into contemporary terms.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The day goes smoothly, as you conserve energy and take time to consolidate plans. Gather your resources for the greater task ahead.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pursue a leisurely course. If you've done your work, luxuriate in the preview of what's coming. If you fell down on the job, don't dawdle.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Enjoy vicarious participation at public or sports events. Lean by example. Use a chance to set somebody straight on a story mixup.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep life simple. Once you fulfill your usual Sunday responsibilities, enjoy watching the passing scene. Try to improve your perspective.

WEEK'S TRANSACTIONS

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market, registering some high hopes for 1977, finished off its second strong year in a row with a broad gain Friday.

The closely followed average of 30 blue chips climbed 5.56 to 1,004.65, stretching its gain for the last week of the year to 19.03 points.

For 1976 the average chalked up an advance of 152.24 points, or 17.9 per cent, after a 38.3 per cent jump in 1975.

THE DOW'S only previous year-end close above 1,000 came four years ago, when it finished at 1,020.02 on the way to its all-time high of 1,051.70 on Jan. 11, 1973.

Big Board volume in the preholiday session dropped off to 19.17 million shares, down from 23.70 million Thursday and the lightest total since a 17.03 million-share day on Nov. 30.

It was a quiet day for economic news. But analysts noted a spreading belief that business activity was gathering momentum after several sluggish months since last summer.

They also said investors seemed hopeful for a replay of the booming rallies in stock prices in the past two Januarys, with year-end tax selling completed.

THE DOW'S rise to its highest level since September, when it hit its 1976 peak of 1,014.79, was by no means the whole story. The broad range of secondary stocks continued their recent pattern of running well ahead of the blue chips.

The market value index at the American Stock Exchange—traditional home of many lower-priced issues— jumped 1.18 to 109.84, the highest close for the index since it was inaugurated Sept. 4, 1973.

The NYSE's composite index gained .32 to 57.88.

By STEVEN RATTNER
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Indonesia announced Friday that it would increase the price of its most common crude oil by about 6 per cent, substantially below the 10 per cent that Indonesia and 10 other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries voted two weeks ago.

Analysts quickly cautioned that the Indonesian move does not signify a break with OPEC, but instead represents a continuing effort by OPEC members to bring the selling price of various grades of crude oil into economic balance.

YET, some experts suggested that the Indonesian move may have been influenced by the expected presence of lower-priced Saudi Arabian oil. Japan imports about a third of Indonesia's output and officials in Japan, which must import virtually all of its oil, have already said clearly that they will pursue tha less expensive grades of oil.

At the OPEC meeting in Doha, Qatar, two members — Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates — voted to increase their oil prices by only 5 per cent. The others, who agreed on 10 per cent effective Jan. 1, also voted to add an additional 5 per cent increase next July 1.

1976 called epochal, schizophrenic period

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Steady growth trend failed to materialize

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — In what was certainly a gross understatement, one of the nation's top industrialists have described 1976 as a "mixed-up year" for the American economy.

That was an accurate assessment up to a point, but it doesn't delve deeply enough. Economic events and political developments of the last 12 months have made 1976 even more dramatic and traumatic than such a relatively mild characterization suggests. In many ways, the year now ending has been a truly epochal and schizophrenic period.

Contrary to the expectations of most forecasters, the year's economic scenario followed an up-and-down pattern both here and abroad, instead of the steady growth trend generally envisioned.

The analysts were right on target in foreseeing the year's real growth in the neighborhood of 6 per cent, but that was achieved only because the first quarter had been so robust with its 9.2 per cent gain. Few economists anticipated the steady erosion of the advance in the subsequent three quarters — a vital development responsible for much of the recent concern about the current state of the economy, its prospects, and how best to deal with the attendant problems.

The forecasters were wrong, too, in their pessimistic evaluation of the inflation outlook, when most of them were looking for an inflation rate in the area of 6 per cent or more. By virtue of the moderating trend in wage settlements and the decline in food prices, the year's overall price level has increased around 5 per cent — much greater progress in that area than everyone predicted or hoped, though hardly a reason for any great elation.

Those were the principal developments that made 1976 such an unusual year. They were supplemented by unforeseen political upheavals, currency turmoil and international confrontations of various sorts as the world continued the search for new directions in the pursuit of an elusive prosperity and stability.

As in all years, 1976 contained a full quota of excitement and surprises, concluding with the baffling two-tiered pricing increase decided by the oil-producing nations two weeks ago and with the cabinet choices just announced by President-elect Jimmy Carter.

Before that, the outstanding development of the last year was the sudden and significent slowing of the economies of the United States and the major Western nations. That reality changed the economic complexion internally and externally for many nations, and it will no doubt exert a profound influence on future economic policies on many lands.

Other noteworthy developements of the last year included:

— The widespread corporate bribery and payoff scandals that toppled business managements and created tensions in several foreign governments.

— The big boom in the auto business and the late-year resurgence in housing activity.

— The delay in business capital-spending programs.

— The great crop harvest in the United States, the Soviet Union and some other countries.

— New York City's moratorium on $1 billion of debt, and the subsequent court finding that it was unconstitutional.

— The banner year for the financial markets of the United States.

— The election of new governments in the United States and such other nations as Japan, Australia, Sweden, Italy, Spain, Mexico and Finland.

In the international area, the year's major developments involved changes in currency values in several leading nations as they went through adjustments related to internal inflationary conditions, the impact of high oil prices and their adverse trade performance.

The British pound was thus in the spotlight throughout the year as it fell from the $2 level to a point below $1.60. The Italian lira was also weak; the Canadian dollar fell below parity with the United States dollar for the first time in years; the Mexican peso was devalued by almost 50 per cent and was allowed to float for the first time in 22 years and, conversely, the German mark and the Japanese yen remained strong.

Even though many nations turned more restrictive in their trade policies, world trade grew sharply — by 10 per cent — to a new record above $1,000 billion. The United States, however, slipped back into a deficit of about $5 billion as its oil import bill rose substantially, while its huge surplus from agricultural trade diminished somewhat.

The U. S. economic picture, of course, was affected in various ways by the trade and currency problems of its partners, as well as by the more pronounced slowing of so many Western economies.

Despite the well publicized "pause" last summer and fall in the American economy, total business activity increased for the year to a degree — 6 per cent in real terms — that by historical standards was highly impressive. Some 3 million new jobs were created, and yet unemployment rose to 8.1 per cent by yearend as the labor force continued its substantial growth.

Even though personal income advanced sharply to new peaks and corporate profits jumped by some 30 per cent to a new record of $85 billion after taxes, there prevailed a highly cautious mood among the American public and in the business world. The profit performance was mixed among companies and industries, however.

Although bank lending suffered in the process, 1976 was a big year for the stock and bond markets. It was a record year for private debt financing and a peak for municipal borrowing, too. Except for a six-week period in the spring, when inflation briefly flared up strongly, the bond market performed well all year.

And the New York Stock Exchange, though erratic in its price movement, chalked up a record volume, with trading exceeding 5 billion shares for the first time. Amex and over-the-counter activity also increased sharply above 1975 levels. And yet many brokerage houses failed to participate in the prosperity because of rising costs and the impact of negotiated commission rates.

The sharp decline in business activity was clearly a nightmare of the past as 1976 moved along, and yet, in a recent poll, a high percentage of the respondents indicated they still believed the United States was mired in a recession. At the same time, it was reported that the number of poor persons in the country had increased by 2.5 million in 1975, when the current recovery was starting.

The highly erratic course of events over the last 12 months emphasized again the difficulties of the forecasters, but one American analyst who was right a year ago was Walter E. Hoadley, senior economist for the Bank of America, when he commented:

"The year 1976 promises to satisfy few people in the United States or around the world. Recovery from the deep global recession will be real — but too slow to solve the most pressing economic problems."

That's exactly the kind of year that 1976 has been. Its one saving grace is the fact that it is ending on an upbeat that promises to grow stronger as its own economic momentum builds. The promise of some pump-priming from the new Carter administration should add to the momentum.

6 pct. capital-outlays growth seen stimulant to recovery

By JACK HOUSTON
Knight News Service

A survey of American business spending plans for 1977 reveals an expected 6 per cent real growth in capital expenditures for the new year. The increase would provide much-needed stimulus to the nation's economic recovery.

The survey, conducted yearly since 1953 by the economics department of McGraw-Hill Inc.'s, Publications Co., was taken in October and shows only preliminary plans by the participating companies.

Standard & Poor's, however, says that while the survey notes the direction of change, it tends "to overestimate the extent of change in periods of contraction and fall short of the degree of change in expansion years."

ACCORDING TO THE survey, new plant and equipment expenditures in the United States will total $139.55 billion next year, a 13 per cent increase from this year's estimated $123.55 billion. Real growth will amount to only 6 per cent, however, because prices of the new facilities are expected to increase 7 per cent.

"The survey's optimism is fortified by the unanimity of 25 industry groups' planned investment increases, and a greater degree of certainty by respondents about 1977 plans than was noted in the year-earlier survey," S&P states in its latest analysis of the machinery sector.

S&P says outlays this year nearly will reach its expected total but will fall short of an estimate later revised upward. Last spring, outlays were predicted to reach $127.34 by year's end, but nearly $4 billion of that has been deferred until next year.

S&P REPORTS capital spending will be strongest in the manufacturing sector, where a 15 per cent gain is expected. Durable goods producers will account for a larger share of spending, up 23 per cent against only 9 per cent for nondurable goods.

Major segments of the durable goods sector that anticipate large capital outlays include the automobile industry, up 61 per cent; nonferrous metals, up 28 per cent; and nonelectrical machinery, up 20 per cent.

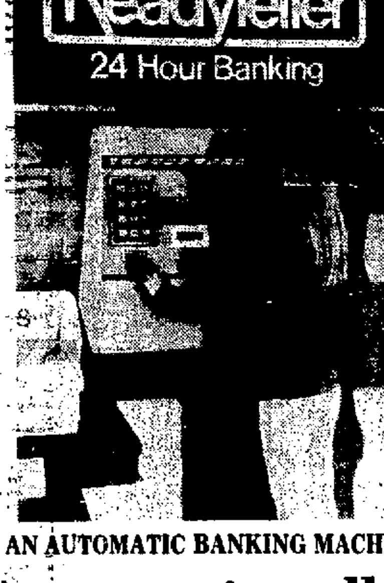

Among nondurable industries, big spenders will include the rubber industry, up 56 per cent; and the petroleum industry, up 10 per cent.

"Fulfillment of these spending plans, or a fairly close approximation, would provide a healthy operating environment for many segments of the mahinery industry," the S&P report states.

S&P's analysis also reports increased demand in the machine tool industry and says demand for construction and material handling equipment looks "promising."

Gains also are expected for producers of agricultural machinery and industrial machinery, pollution control equipment, and railway equipment.

The auto industry will be the major influence on machine tool demand. Many producers of construction equipment were able to shift production to machinery for energy-related projects. Now the domestic construction market appears ready to take up slack in this area, S&P reports.

AN AUTOMATIC BANKING MACHINE

Automatic tellers at Security Bank

Security Pacific Bank will activate 13 on-line automated teller machines (ATMs) known as ReadyTeller in the immediate future on a test basis at 11 key bank offices and convenience centers in Long Beach, Los Angeles, Torrance, Hawthorne and Palos Verdes Estates.

Manufactured by the Docutel Corp., Dallas, the ReadyTeller machines make cash withdrawals from $25 to $100, accept deposits, make loan payments and transfer funds between accounts.

Some 76,000 Master Charge and SecurityService cardholders in the area will be mailed personal identification numbers and invited to come into the bank and use the ReadyTeller machine.

"Objective of the ReadyTeller-ATM installations is to enhance customer service by offering a convenient alternative to waiting in long lines at 'live' teller windows," said Donald A. Oie, vice president in Security Pacific Bank's Marketing Department.

FIVE OF THE ReadyTeller machines will be installed on the outside walls of existing bank offices to allow 24-hour service for routine banking transactions. Five other units will be available in three bank lobbies during regular banking hours while a driveup ReadyTeller machine will provide round the clock service for motorists at the Palos Verdes Center office. One unit each will be installed at convenience centers in a neighborhood and a regional shopping center.

The five bank offices with outside wall-type ReadyTeller units will be the Marina del Rey office, 4754 Admiralty Way, Marina del Rey; Vermont & Hollywood office, 1715 North Vermont Ave., Los Angeles; Westwood Village office, 930 Westwood Blvd.; Wilshire & Harvard office, 3620 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles and 190th & Anza office, 5108 190th St., Torrance.

The five indoor ReadyTeller machines will be at the Bixby Knolls office, 4438 Atlantic Ave., Long Beach (two machines); West Civic Center office, 111 N. Hope St., Los Angeles (two machines in the Department of Water and Power building); and University & Jefferson office, 821 Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles.

Jack Kerouac's life and times

Jack Kerouac: Prophet of the New Romanticism. By Robert A. Hipkiss. University Press of Kansas, $10.50.

If one asked almost any serious student of American literature to list the five most important and influential novels published in America since World War II, the list would probably include Jack Kerouac's On the Road (1957). Along with Catcher in the Rye, A Separate Peace, and One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Kerouac's On the Road is one of those books that everyone seems to have on his "must read" list.

Like Hemingway's The Sun Also Rises, On the Road reflected the lifestyle of a generation of Americans: the Lost Generation in the case of the latter, the Beat Generation (a term Kerouac coined) in the case of the former.

It seems strange then that the first full-length study of Kerouac's work (by a member of the Long Beach State English Department) should come at this late date, seven years after Kerouac died — a lonely, run-down man — of cirrhosis of the liver at the age of 47. That death, as Professor Hipkiss says in his seminal study, Jack Kerouac: Prophet of the New Romanticism, "brought the desperate vision of the Beats to its inevitable end."

Kerouac responded to the alienation he and other Beats felt as part of the post-war generation in basically two ways: by taking drugs and by turning to mysticism. The mysticism was Eastern: it denied the reality of evil in the world, though toward the end of his life, as Hipkiss points out, "Kerouac claimed that he was really an old-fashioned Catholic mystic."

Hipkiss studies closely Kerouac's work, his novels and poems, and finds that Kerouac clung to the visionary world of childhood innocence, that Kerouac feared the image of the father but found in the mother "the symbol of life's certitude and durability."

Beat philosophy is traced to its disillusionment with the contemporary world and the academic "establishment" (one wonders what Kerouac would think of Hipkiss's scholarly study of his work) and to its roots in Eastern religion. Hipkiss devotes an entire chapter to what Kerouac called "Spontaneous Prose," with its roots in drugs and jazz.

Finally, he compares Kerouac's romantic views to those of J.D. Salinger, James Purdy, John Knowles, and Ken Kesey and finds that Kerouac's vision is the dimmest of all "because he has set his sights the highest and fallen the farthest short and because he has steadfastly refused to compromise with the world's imperfection."

While Jack Kerouac is a solid, scholarly and critical study, it is not marred by the stodgy rhetoric that often makes such studies unreadable to the general reader. The prose is readable, informative, and quite often interesting. Jack Kerouac is, as I have said, a seminal work, one which future studies of the Beats will have to take into account. Cremated remains of 12 stolen

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A $1,000 reward was offered Friday for information concerning the theft of the cremated remains of 12 persons.

The Telophase Society told police that the ashes were in 12 boxes weighing four to six pounds each and stolen from a shelf sometime Wednesday. On each box with the ashes ready to be disposed at sea was a nametag.

"It's a big, almost-empty room which they broke a door lock to get into," said Ron Macdonald, who supervises the Telophase operation.

Macdonald said there were no known survivors of two of the 12 persons, and he planned to wait a few days before notifying survivors of the others. He said, "I'd hate to panic anyone."

Mexico protests tourist warnings

Associated Press

Mexico's minister of tourism said Friday that it was an injustice for the American Automobile Club to call two Mexican states unsafe for tourists.

Guillermo Rossel de la Lama said during a meeting in Los Angeles with Mayor Tom Bradley that an advisory by the American Automobile Association to its members that Americans were being beaten, robbed and murdered on Mexican highways "was a little too bold, implying that all Mexican highways were unsafe.

"This is certainly not the case," he said, adding that thousands of Americans visit Mexico every day without being harmed or robbed.

He also met with officials of the AAA, just one day after the U.S. State Department, at the request of the auto club, warned tourists that travel in the state of Sinaloa and parts of Baja California entailed substantial risks.

Rossel de la Lama said he also felt the American press had overrated the problems of banditry against tourists.

He said federal and local law enforcement agencies had stepped up patrols along Mexican Highway 15 in Sinaloa.

The State Department said there had been 18 incidents involving Americans since May, mostly on Highway 15 near Culiacan. Three Americans have been shot to death, two of them on Christmas.

The State Department said that in most of the incidents, armed bandits set up roadblocks in isolated areas to stop motorists to steal their cars and belongings.

Rose Bowl: Battle for No. 1?

BOWL WEATHER

There is a 40 per cent chance of rain for the Tournament of Roses Parade today, dropping off to a 20 per cent chance of light showers by the 2 p.m. kickoff of the Rose Bowl game. Temperature at game time is forecast in the low 60s.

Midwest run vs. Coast balance

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

A few years ago, Bo Schembechler explained his football philosophy.

"My thinking is—strong defense, strong running and passing third," said the Michigan coach. "You can't develop a good running game if you are dropping back, chicken-fighting some guy in pass blocking."

Whether Schembechler's brand of football will yield a victory over a more-balanced USC team in the Rose Bowl today at 2 p.m. is a matter of conjecture.

A crowd of more than 106,000 and a national TV audience of 73,000,000 on NBC (Ch. 4 locally) is expected to view the 63rd Rose Bowl game.

Oddsmakers have made the second-ranked Wolverines six-point favorites over No. 3 USC. Both teams have 10-1 records.

Michigan will be trying to reverse a trend in which the Pacific-8 Conference has won six of the last seven games from Big Ten opponents.

Schembechler will be seeking his first Rose Bowl victory in three attempts. He sustained a heart attack prior to the 1970 game, which USC won, 10-3. Two years later, Don Bunce's passing rallied Stanford to a 13-12 triumph over the Wolverines.

"I'd say we're a little bigger and maybe they're a little quicker," he says.

"This is the first time since we played Oklahoma early in the 1973 season that an offensive team has been able to match our defensive quickness," a Trojan assistant said early in the week.

One thing seems certain—both teams are going to bang away on the ground until they are forced to put the ball into the air.

But there is a strong possibility neither team will be able to sustain attacks without mixing in some passing.

Both teams are strong defensively, each registering five shutouts. Michigan yielded only 114 yards on the ground per game, fifth in the nation, and USC gave up 129.6.

If rushing defenses dominate and are able to contain fullback Rob Lytle and tailback Harlan Huckleby of Michigan and tailback Ricky Bell of USC, the Trojans appear better equipped to pass.

Quarterbacks Vince Evans and Rob Hertel combined for 18 touchdown passes and the Trojans gained 1,745 yards through the air in 11 games, an average of 158.6.

But split end Randy Simmrin, one of their favorite targets, sustained a knee injury last week and is not figured to be in top condition for today's game.

Following Schembechler's philosophy, Michigan threw only 99 passes for 940 yards in 11 regular-season games, but 13 of quarterback Rick Leach's tosses went for touchdowns.

Texas two-step

'Big play' carries Nebraska to win

HOUSTON (AP) — Nebraska, smitten by the big play during the regular season, finally made it work for them Friday night, rallying behind quarterback Vince Ferragamo to whip Texas Tech, 27-24, in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl.

Trailing 24-14 in the third quarter, Nebraska used two game breaking plays to set up touchdowns against the eighth-ranked Red Raiders.

Wingback Curtis Craig completed a 49-yard pass to Chuck Malito to set up one touchdown. Two minutes later, Kent Smith blocked a Tech punt on the Raider 23 and on the first play Ferragamo hit Malito with the game-winning touchdown.

After losing by the big play during the regular season, including a loss in the final 38 seconds to Oklahoma that kept Nebraska out of the Orange Bowl, it was like a bad dream turned good for the Cornhuskers.

"This game followed the same lines of others we have lost," Ferragamo, a graduate of Banning High, said. "That's why it feels so good to win one like this now. We had a couple of bad plays (during the regular season) or we'd be No. 1 right now. It's great to go out like this."

Ferragamo led Nebraska from 10-point deficits with 23 and 22-yard touchdown passes to pace the victory.

Tech led 17-7 in the second quarter and 24-14 in the third quarter.

But each time Ferragamo uncorked the big play. He hit Mark Dufresnes with a 22-yard touchdown pass with 33 seconds remaining in the first half to cut Tech's lead to 17-14 at intermission.

Tech's Billy Taylor ran eight yards in the third quarter for his third touchdown to give the Raiders another 10-point lead. But a 49-yard halfback pass from Curtis Craig to Chuck Malito set up an 18-yard touchdown run by Richard Berns.

SC coach rare bowl 'rookie'

John Robinson took over from a veritable coaching legend at USC this year and for the first time in 25 years a Pac-8 rookie has guided his club to the Rose Bowl.

Robinson, 41, succeeded John McKay, whose teams won three national championships and went to the Rose Bowl eight times in his 16 seasons at the helm.

McKay quit to go with the new Tampa Bay club of the National Football League. Robinson had been his offensive coordinator three seasons before going on the Oakland Raiders pro staff in 1975.

"I think I've been asked that 1,500 times," Robinson said on the eve of the Rose Bowl game against Michigan. "When you're dealing with the team there is no pressure. When you're dealing with the press and the alumni, you just do the best you can.

"The fact that we've been successful certainly has helped."

Like McKay, Robinson is an alumnus of Oregon, and he holds the greatest respect for his former

Balanced diet: 49ers vs. Illinois

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

It is the perfect nightcap for sports fans.

"It" is tonight's Long Beach Arena encounter between host Long Beach State and Big Ten power Illinois.

The intersectional contest begins at 8 o'clock and will be broadcast on KFOX-AM (1280) and KKOP-FM (93.5). There is no preliminary game.

Anyone who has survived the day-long deluge of televised football and is in the Arena when the teams collide will see quite a collection of basketball talent.

"Illinois will be one of the best teams we play this season," 49er coach Dwight Jones says of a team that was 7-1 before dropping two of three games in the University of Hawaii's Rainbow Classic this week.

The Illini lost to St. John's, 56-52, for fifth place Thursday night. They flew back to the Southland Friday.

Jones' 49er team is 8-3 after rapping Loyola and Portland State earlier this week to win the sixth Long Beach Classic. The 49ers beat Portland State, 101-90, in the title game, surviving a 43-point performance by Freeman Williams, the nation's leading scorer.

Entering the Rainbow Classic, the Illini had four starters averaging in double figures: Audie Matthews (14.4), Ken Ferdinand (14.0), Rich Adams (11.0) and Levi Cobb (10.9). Matthews and Adams are juniors, Ferdinand a sophomore and Cobb a freshman.

The 49ers are led in scoring by senior Richard Johnson, who scored 25 points in the title game and earned MVP honors in the Long Beach Classic.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market, registering some high hopes for 1977, finished off its second strong year in a row with a broad gain Friday.

The closely followed average of 30 blue chips climbed 5.56 to 1,004.65, stretching its gain for the last week of the year to 19.03 points.

For 1976 the average chalked up an advance of 152.24 points, or 17.9 per cent, after a 38.3 per cent jump in 1975.

THE DOW'S only previous year-end close above 1,000 came four years ago, when it finished at 1,020.02 on the way to its all-time high of 1,051.70 on Jan. 11, 1973.

Big Board volume in the preholiday session dropped off to 19.17 million shares, down from 23.70 million Thursday and the lightest total since a 17.03 million-share day on Nov. 30.

It was a quiet day for economic news. But analysts noted a spreading belief that business activity was gathering momentum after several sluggish months since last summer.

They also said investors seemed hopeful for a replay of the booming rallies in stock prices in the past two Januarys, with year-end tax selling completed.

THE DOW'S rise to its highest level since September, when it hit its 1976 peak of 1,014.79, was by no means the whole story. The broad range of secondary stocks continued their recent pattern of running well ahead of the blue chips.

The market value index at the American Stock Exchange—traditional home of many lower-priced issues— jumped 1.18 to 109.84, the highest close for the index since it was inaugurated Sept. 4, 1973.

The NYSE's composite index gained .32 to 57.88.

By STEVEN RATTNER
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Indonesia announced Friday that it would increase the price of its most common crude oil by about 6 per cent, substantially below the 10 per cent that Indonesia and 10 other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries voted two weeks ago.

Analysts quickly cautioned that the Indonesian move does not signify a break with OPEC, but instead represents a continuing effort by OPEC members to bring the selling price of various grades of crude oil into economic balance.

YET, some experts suggested that the Indonesian move may have been influenced by the expected presence of lower-priced Saudi Arabian oil. Japan imports about a third of Indonesia's output and officials in Japan, which must import virtually all of its oil, have already said clearly that they will pursue tha less expensive grades of oil.

At the OPEC meeting in Doha, Qatar, two members — Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates — voted to increase their oil prices by only 5 per cent. The others, who agreed on 10 per cent effective Jan. 1, also voted to add an additional 5 per cent increase next July 1.

Weather may decide Cotton Bowl winner

DALLAS (AP) — Sixth-ranked Houston matches its speed and offense against fourth-ranked Maryland's strength and defense in today's Cotton Bowl, with foul weather threatening to hamper the hosts from the Southwest Conference.

Several thousand tickets remained unsold on the eve of the 41st annual extravaganza, and with a forecast of possible snow and temperatures in the 20s, there could be additional gaping no-shows in the 73,000-seat stadium. (Channel 2, 11 a.m.)

Houston's Cougars, running the Veer offense invented by coach Bill Yeoman in 1966, scored 313 points while posting a 9-2 regular season record and ranked No. 8 in the nation with an offense which averaged 414 yards a game.

THE COUGARS, after going 2-8 in their final year as an independent, astounded the Southwest Conference by winning the league championship in their inaugural season.

Sophomore quarterback Danny Davis had a lot to do with the turnaround, developing steadily throughout the season as he adapted to the triple option.

He was ably supported by talent and depth at the skill positions, headed by running backs Alois Blackwell and two receivers averaging better than 20 yards per pass reception — Don Bass and Eddie Foster.

Houston fumbled the ball 43 times during the season, and the frequent ball exchanges of the Veer would be even more dangerous in cold and/or wet weather.

Maryland's more conservative Slot-I formation, which features slashes up the middle by the tailback, is more geared to foul weather and turnovers against the Terps could prove disastrous.

Maryland, which extended its winning steak to 15 in a row by going 11-0 this season and took its third consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference title, has developed into a defensive power under Jerry Claiborne.

THE TERPS ranked No. 2 nationally in total defense and No. 3 in scoring defense, allowing just 85 points, only 29 in the second half.

Steve Atkins, Maryland's explosive tailback who was injured in the fifth game of the season, is not expected to play. His replacement, Alvin (Preacher) Maddox and fullback Tim Wilson, both 600-yard gainers, will be in the backfield with Manges.

Both teams, making their first appearances in the Cotton Bowl, boast outstanding defensive tackles—Wilson Whitely, a first-team all-America for Houston and Joe Campbell, a second-team choice from Maryland.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The University of Pittsburgh and all-time rushing king Tony Dorsett put their No. 1 ranking on the line in the Sugar Bowl today against fifth-ranked Georgia in a dramatic rags-to-riches bid for college football's national championship.

It will end an era since a dozen starters, including Dorsett, will be playing their final game, and miracle-worker coach Johnny Majors is leaving for the University of Tennessee.

In the four years since they arrived, Dorsett and Majors revived Pitt from a 1-10 record in 1972 to a 11-0 mark this year. The Panthers are one step from their first national title in 39 years and their first perfect campaign since 1918.

"We have the right to claim the No. 1 ranking at this stage and a final chance to prove it or not to prove it," Majors said Friday after canceling Pitt's final scheduled workout because of windy conditions.

The weather, however, will have no effect today on the second Sugar Bowl game inside the gigantic New Orleans Superdome, and a strike by the stadium's service employes has been limited by law to an area where it won't threaten the nationally televised (Channel 7, 9:45 a.m.) game.

Dorsett, Majors and the cinderella Panthers have commanded most of the headlines, but Majors said he doesn't plan to make his imminent departure "a big emotional deal. That's not my cup of tea, although I'm a naturally enthusiastic guy. Whether I go out on a winning note is not important. The national championship is the most important thing."

GEORGIa coach Vince Dooley thinks his club should be considered for the national championship if it knocks off Pitt. The Bulldogs, 10-1 and champions of the Southeastern Conference, have plenty of weapons of their own.

"We're very similar to Pitt from the standpoint that we're both extremely well-balanced," Dooley said. "We're very close in scoring offense and scoring defense and we both have excellent kicking games.

"The one difference is that they have a Superman and we don't. That's the only description I can find for Dorsett because he's super in every respect."

In setting a single-season NCAA record of 1,948 rushing yards this fall and a career mark of 6,082, Dorsett set or tied 18 NCAA standards. He also won the Heisman Trophy in a landslide.

In the national rushing statistics, Pitt is seventh with 290.7 yards a game while Georgia is 11th at 279.5. Pitt is sixth in scoring with a 32.2-point average and Georgia is 11th at 29.5.

Both have solid defense, with Pitt among the top 10 in total defense and rushing defense and Georgia listed among those teams allowing the fewest points.

"Georgia's defense team comes up with a lot of big plays," Majors said, "and that's our biggest concern right now. I think the winner will have to score at least three touchdowns."

GEORGIA has at least one problem besides trying to stop Dorsett, even though the Bulldogs held him to 101 yards in 1973—his collegiate debut—and 104 in a 1975 meeting. Dooley is concerned about the Superdome's artifical turf.

"The turf will be a help to Pitt because it tends to make fast backs even faster," he said. "Why doesn't it makes the pursuing defenses faster, too? I don't know. We've only played one game on artificial turf all season (it was Georgia's only loss, 21-17 to Mississippi) and there's a difference in the way the ball bounces. You've also got to learn how to fall on the turf because it's different if you're not used to it."

Pitt, on the other hand, played all but three games on artificial turf and practiced on it almost every day.

"We've played well on all surfaces," Majors said, a remark to which an 11-0 coach is entitled. "We try to make as little a deal as possible out of different conditions."

THE SHOT at the national championship caps a rebuilding program Majors began when he brought more than 70 newcomers to Pitt for the 1973 campaign.

"We talked about a national championship, but I don't know if I really believed it," he recalled. "But you've got to have something to shoot for. Pitt had been there before, and that was a base to build on, or I wouldn't have taken the job. But I didn't really start to believe it until last year."

Meanwhile, Majors put in a plug for Georgia and Dooley, an old friend. "Georgia should get due consideration for the No. 1 ranking if they win," he said.

"Pittsburgh has every claim to be No. 1...right now," Dooley replied.

Orange Bowl: Is it really Nothing Bowl?

MIAMI (AP) — Ohio State, ranked 11th nationally and holding a share of the Big Ten championship, makes its first post-season appearance away from the Rose Bowl tonight when the Buckeyes tangle with No. 12 Colorado in the Orange Bowl football game.

The 43rd annual event has lost some of its prestige since neither team is in the running for the national championship, but both coaches—Bill Mallory of Colorado and Woody Hayes of Ohio State—contend that aspect has been overplayed.

"We look at it with a lot of respect," Mallory said. "You are going to always find some people downgrading something. We are both co-champions (Ohio State in the Big Ten, Colorado in the Big Eight). I think that's a pretty darn good accomplishment in two excellent leagues."

"I second what Bill said," Hayes added.

THE BUCKEYES (8-2-1) are a one-touchdown favorite to win the nationally televised battle (Channel 4, 5 p.m.) before an expected sellout crowd of 79,000.

Mallory, a former assistant under Hayes at Ohio State, reported the only casualty. Both teams enter at virtually full strength. Reserve tailback Howard Ballage underwent surgery Thursday and won't be available to relieve Tony Reed, the All-Big Eight tailback who rambled for 1,210 yards in the Buffaloes' 8-3 campaign.

Pacenta passed for 400 yards in Ohio State's run-oriented attack. The other quarterback under consideration, Rod Gerald, was the team's No. 3 rusher with 384 yards behind Jeff Logan's 1,169 and injury-plagued Pete Johnson's 698.

Johnson, having scored a school-record 57 career touchdowns, is reported to be back in form after being slowed throughout the year, spraining both ankles in the Missouri game.

BOTH COACHES said the key will be stopping the other team's running game. Hayes added that Colorado was more versatile than his team because of the passing of Jeff Knapple, who threw for just over 900 yards.

Mallory said his team would have to be ready for anything, however, and Hayes quickly quipped, "You may be right, Bill. We may pass you right off the field."

Hayes was in a jovial mood, often smiling as he and Mallory held their final news conference Friday. No one expects a passing show from the man who has won 221 games primarily with a strong running game.

"We've gotten to the place now where neither Bill nor I will tell you much," Hayes said.

WOODY: 'PITT PLAYED IT SAFE'

MIAMI (AP) — Ohio State's Woody Hayes said Friday No. 1-ranked Pittsburgh "played it safe" in accepting a Sugar Bowl matchup with Georgia rather than an Orange Bowl bid to meet Big-Eight co-champion Colorado.

"Pittsburgh had a chance to come here but they backed off," Hayes said at a joint news conference with Colorado Coach Bill Mallory. "That's the reason we're here. We're the second choice. The only question I have is, why?"

Hayes refused to elaborate on his statement. When asked for an opinion on the poll ratings, he said, "I have feelings about everything. But sometimes I find it better if I keep them to myself."

Mallory didn't comment on the poll argument, which heated up Thursday when Bo Schembechler of No. 2 Michigan and John Robinson of No. 3 Southern California claimed that the winner of their Rose Bowl game should be the national champion.

Mallory did defend the Orange Bowl matchup which will draw a capacity crowd, but he has been criticized because of the low ratings of the teams. Big Eight co-champion Colorado (8-3) is rated 12th, Big Ten co-champion Ohio State (8-2-1) is 11th.

Peach-y New Year for Kentucky, 21-0

ATLANTA (AP) — The Kentucky defense, which helped the Wildcats gain a bowl bid for the first time in a decade, and sophomore running back Rod Stewart were most responsible for Kentucky's 21-0 victory over North Carolina Friday in the ninth Peach Bowl, according to coach Fran Curci.

"The defense kept us in the game as it has all season," said Curci. "In the first half, we were jumping around and trying to find something. In the second, we decided to do what we do best—run right at people."

The Wildcats handed North Carolina its first shutout in five years while limiting the Tar Heels to five first downs and 108 yards total offense.

The Kentucky defenders, led by linebackers Mike Martin and Jim Kovach and defense end Art Still, forced five turnovers including one which led to Kentucky's first touchdown.

Stewart, a sophomore who was the second leading rusher on the team, scored that one from one yard out and added two others on runs of 13 and three yards. His running earned him most valuable player honors as he gained 104 yards in 19 carries.

"It's the biggest award I've ever won, but our offensive line deserves the credit. They were moving people and all I had to do was run," said Stewart.

Mike Voight, North Carolina's running back who gained 1,407 yards this year and was voted the Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year, missed the contest after spraining an ankle in practice Wednesday.

Without Voight, 19th-ranked North Carolina, 8-3, could generate little offense. The Tar Heels gained only 76 yards and three first downs in the first half.

North Carolina Quarterback Matt Kupec, harassed all day by the aroused Wildcast defenders, was intercepted three times and fumbled once.

Kupec's fumble led to Kentucky's first touchdown.

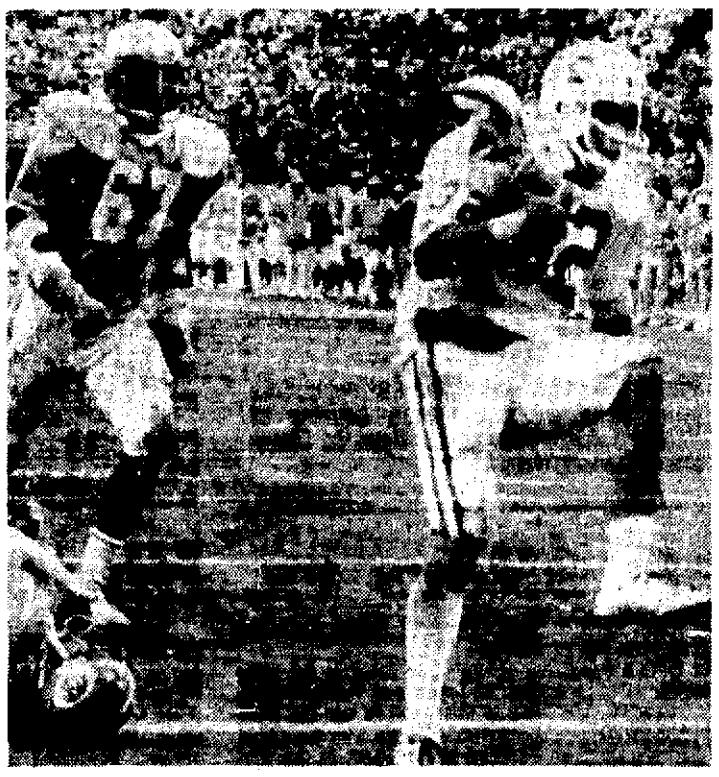

Early in the third period the freshman quarterback fumbled while attempting to pass and defensive tackle James Ramey recovered for the Wildcats on the North Carolina 21.

Just two minutes later, after a partially-deflected punt gave Nebraska a first down at Tech's 23, Ferragamo lofted a perfect pass to Malito in the corner of the end zone for the winning TD.

The Red Raiders jumped to a 17-7 lead in the second period on touchdown passes of 14 and 11 yards from Rodney Allison to Taylor and a 28-yard field goal by Brian Hall, who missed a 37-yard field goal with 4:27 left in the game that would have tied the score.

Berns scored on a one-yard run for the Huskers on the game's first drive.

Nebraska closed out its season with a 9-3-1 record and Tech, Southwest Conference co-champion, finished at 10-2.

Nebraska appeared heading for its fourth defeat in the second quarter when the Raiders turned two Cornhusker fumbles into touchdowns.

Jack Kerouac: Prophet of the New Romanticism. By Robert A. Hipkiss. University Press of Kansas, $10.50.

If one asked almost any serious student of American literature to list the five most important and influential novels published in America since World War II, the list would probably include Jack Kerouac's On the Road (1957). Along with Catcher in the Rye, A Separate Peace, and One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Kerouac's On the Road is one of those books that everyone seems to have on his "must read" list.

Like Hemingway's The Sun Also Rises, On the Road reflected the lifestyle of a generation of Americans: the Lost Generation in the case of the latter, the Beat Generation (a term Kerouac coined) in the case of the former.

It seems strange then that the first full-length study of Kerouac's work (by a member of the Long Beach State English Department) should come at this late date, seven years after Kerouac died — a lonely, run-down man — of cirrhosis of the liver at the age of 47. That death, as Professor Hipkiss says in his seminal study, Jack Kerouac: Prophet of the New Romanticism, "brought the desperate vision of the Beats to its inevitable end."

Kerouac responded to the alienation he and other Beats felt as part of the post-war generation in basically two ways: by taking drugs and by turning to myticism. The mysticism was Eastern: it denied the reality of evil in the world, though toward the end of his life, as Hipkiss points out, "Kerouac claimed that he was really an old-fashioned Catholic mystic."

Hipkiss studies closely Kerouac's work, his novels and poems, and finds that Kerouac clung to the visionary world of childhood innocence, that Kerouac feared the image of the father but found in the mother "the symbol of life's certitude and durability."

Beat philosophy is traced to its disillusionment with the contemporary world and the academic "establishment" (one wonders what Kerouac would think of Hipkiss's scholarly study of his work) and to its roots in Eastern religion. Hipkiss devotes an entire chapter to what Kerouac called "Spontaneous Prose," with its roots in drugs and jazz.

Finally, he compares Kerouac's romantic views to those of J.D. Salinger, James Purdy, John Knowles, and Ken Kesey and finds that Kerouac's vision is the dimmest of all "because he has set his sights the highest and fallen the farthest short and because he has steadfastly refused to compromise with the world's imperfection."

While Jack Kerouac is a solid, scholarly and critical study, it is not marred by the stodgy rhetoric that often makes such studies unreadable to the general reader. The prose is readable, informative, and quite often interesting. Jack Kerouac is, as I have said, a seminal work, one which future studies of the Beats will have to take into account. Cremated remains of 12 stolen

SAN DIEGO (AP)—A $1,000 reward was offered Friday for information concerning the theft of the cremated remains of 12 persons.

The Telophase Society told police that the ashes were in 12 boxes weighing four to six pounds each and stolen from a shelf sometime Wednesday. On each box with the ashes ready to be disposed at sea was a nametag.

"It's a big, almost-empty room which they broke a door lock to get into," said Ron Macdonald, who supervises the Telophase operation.

Macdonald said there were no known survivors of two of the 12 persons, and he planned to wait a few days before notifying survivors of the others. He said, "I'd hate to panic anyone."

Mexico protests tourist warnings

Associated Press

Mexico's minister of tourism said Friday that it was an injustice for the American Automobile Club to call two Mexican states unsafe for tourists.

Guillermo Rossel de la Lama said during a meeting in Los Angeles with Mayor Tom Bradley that an advisory by the American Automobile Association to its members that Americans were being beaten, robbed and murdered on Mexican highways "was a little too bold, implying that all Mexican highways were unsafe.

"This is certainly not the case," he said, adding that thousands of Americans visit Mexico every day without being harmed or robbed.

He also met with officials of the AAA, just one day after the U.S. State Department, at the request of the auto club, warned tourists that travel in the state of Sinaloa and parts of Baja California entailed substantial risks.

Rossel de la Lama said he also felt the American press had overrated the problems of banditry against tourists.

He said federal and local law enforcement agencies had stepped up patrols along Mexican Highway 15 in Sinaloa.

The State Department said there had been 18 incidents involving Americans since May, mostly on Highway 15 near Culiacan. Three Americans have been shot to death, two of them on Christmas.

The State Department said that in most of the incidents, armed bandits set up roadblocks in isolated areas to stop motorists to steal their cars and belongings.

Medick dies of cancer

Charles (Chuck) Medick, a member of the Independent, Press-Telegram sports department for 14 years, died of cancer Friday morning at Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Medick is survived by his wife, Gail, of 259½ Grand Ave., Long Beach. Arrangements are being handled by Mottell's Mortuary, Long Beach. There will be no funeral service.

CHUCK MEDICK
Mr. Softball

Blind since infancy, Mr. Medick, 54, joined the sports staff of the Independent, Press-Telegram in 1960.

Mr. Medick's varied assignments included coverage of the Long Beach Nitehawks softball team, International Softball Congress tournaments, high school competition, and youth baseball. He wrote a column, Junior Baseball Corner.

Born in Columbus, Ohio, on Aug. 12, 1922, Mr. Medick attended Ohio State University and Western Reserve and was instrumental in advancing the techniques of instruction to the blind at both schools.

After graduation, he taught other blind students at the Braille Institute and at Western Reserve. For several years he served as an X-ray darkroom technician, developing film at hospitals in the Cleveland area.

He continued to work in the medical field after moving to California in 1957.

Mr. Medick was the first blind referee certified by the United States Table Tennis Association.

For several years he hosted a morning radio program, "Sports on Toast," for a Lakewood FM station.

He worked a suicide "hot line" phone at Memorial Hospital and received a commendation for his contributions.

He was the public address announcer for all softball games at Park Ave. Field (Joe Rodgers Field), and at many baseball games at Blair Field.

BUD TUCKER

Gone are the laughs and the lampshades

William Clay Ford, proprietor of the Detroit Lions, the other day went on record as wishing to dispatch overtures of employment to Rams coach Chuck Knox.

This Knox is one and the same who blew the National Football Conference title to Minnesota by failing to go for a touchdown on forth down with the ball on the Vikings' one-inch line. At least, this is the dialogue on the boulevard in the wake of still another Ram departure from the Super Bowl tournament.

Presumably, it is the view of the general public that Knox should have known his field goal attempt would be blocked and the ball sucked up by a Minnesota guy who would run it for 90 yards and a touchdown to create a disaster from which the Rams would not recover.

If you are a regular here, you have read a passage Knox quotes from Sir Winston Churchill:

"Among the deficiencies of hindsight is that while we know the consequences of what was done, we do not know the consequences of some other course that was not followed."

An eventuality getting very little mention is that of the field goal being good. The Rams would then have led by three points and the consequences of that course would have changed the entire pattern and complexion of the game.

Still, you get the hindsight which demands the only sane decision would have been to go for the six points.

Among those who agree that this is hogwash is William Clay Ford. The Lions will take Knox and forget all about Minnesota.

PERSONALLY, there is reason to be annoyed with Knox and his football team even though it is only indirectly connected with the decision in Minnesota. Some three days later, it is obvious something besides the field goal was called for but that pure hindsight and neither here nor there.

The dispute here involving the Rams is what they have done to the Super Bowl social calendar. Traditionally, Super Bowl week is the highlight of the cocktail season and an event to be remembered from one year and anticipated to the next.

By falling on their snow suits in Minnesota, the Rams reduced the Super Bowl party to something resembling a Sunday morning rehearsal of the Budapest String Quartet.

Imagine the laughs we will have with the arrival of Bud Grant, the Minnesota coach. It was Grant who ran off the women at his last Super Bowl camp on the theory sex is undesirable on the eve of a big game.

Those are grounds for land-locked mutiny.

Then there is the hilarious and delightful Fran Tarkenton. Francis Asbury is as funny as athritis. He can brighten up a room just by walking out of it.

Then you consider the other old codgers who complete the travelling roster of the Vikings. This crowd's idea of a big night is extra lemon in the iced tea.

NEITHER will lampshades be worn by the guys at the other hotel.

The only thing funny about Oakland Raider coach John Madden is his clothes. If big John looks like he slept in his suit, it is because he did. Madden looks like a permanent contestant in a sack race.

This, then, is the reason this tourist is upset with the Rams, who could have insured a delightful Super Bowl week. However, the disappointment is not such that one would suggest Chuck Knox take a hike to Detroit.

Of course, it is not out of the question he might go on his own to eliminate certain problems. For instance, he was plagued by deciding on a starting quarterback because the Rams have three.

The Lions have none.

Neither will there ever be the distasteful postmortems about a play call on the one-inch line.

Jack Lambert: Assassin in cleats

By BILL LYON
Knight News Service

First, there is the position itself. Play there and you should have bolts sticking out of your neck and you should make clanking noises when you walk. Hello, Dr. Frankenstein? I need me a middle linebacker.

Dr. Arnold J. Mandel, a psychiatrist, asked NFL scouts: "Whom would you send behind the lines in wartime to assassinate an important enemy?" They all said "a linebacker."

Second, the image has been carefully cultivated by the folk-heroes who have played there. Sam Huff pioneered the word "violent" there. Ray Nitschke added to the less-than-human image when he had a steel tower fall on his head then calmly got up and asked if it was time for the defense to go in.

And then there was Dick Butkus, who grinned evilly, smacked his lips with relish and painted this grisly picture for an interviewer: "My dream? To hit a ball carrier so hard that the ball rolls one way and his head rolls the other."

Now for the finishing touch. It was supplied by Joe Greene, who has forever been inscribed in our consciousness as Mean Joe Greene, who said with just the proper malevolent pause and note of ominous awe: "Jack Lambert is so mean that he don't even like himself."

Now that's a testimonial even the new King Kong could envy.

But John Harold Lambert, alias "Mean Smilin' Jack" of the Pittsburgh Steelers, protests that he is the victim of a bum rap. Oh yes, he will own up to playing the game with a certain. . .ah, gusto.

"But I give away 20 pounds every time I step on the field. So I have to be 20 pounds more aggressive.

"But that stuff about being mean, that's strictly an image thing. You get labeled and it's gonna stick with you no matter what you do.

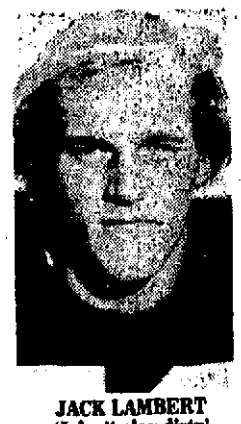

"Sure, I get carried away during a game. But no cheap shots, no late hits,. I bust guys, hard. But it's fair. And it's the name of the game."

But Lambert will admit that his style of play, if not his words, only perpetuates the image. You saw him devastate Cliff Harris in last year's Super Bowl, and on TV, in the Steelers' wasting of Baltimore, he filled your TV screen with a gap-toothed close-up screaming at an official to call offensive interference after a slow-mo replay clearly showed he had been the one doing the mugging.

Lambert does not look like a middle linebacker. He is tall, has a neck, an unusually long one at that, is bow-legged and reminds you more of a farm boy. Which he once was.

BUT AT 24, Jack Lambert has been Defensive Rookie of the Year, All-Pro, and in only his third season, the owner of two Super Bowl championship rings.

The Steelers coaching staff still relates how Lambert, after he was signed following his senior season at Kent State, would get up at 6 a.m. each Saturday, drive to Pittsburgh and spend eight hours watching films of pro linebacker formations and sets. Most rookies devote their preseason to studying no-cut clauses in their contracts.

JACK LAMBERT
'I don't play dirty'

But for all his dedication, for all his masochistic off-season training, the image of brutality, of pure meanness, persists.

"I have aggressions, sure," says Lambert. "So does everybody. I get rid of 'em playing football. Maybe if we could suit up the whole world in football uniforms we wouldn't have so many wars.

"See, I think there's a fine line between intimidating someone and just playing dirty," Lambert says. "Remember all the flack the Flyers used to get about fighting? You get that kind of rep and pretty soon people don't look at the skill and the hustle you have, they just wait for you to take a swing and then they say, see, what'd I tell ya about those guys? The Flyers won two championships playing their style. And so did we."

But before you nominate Jack Lambert for the Nobel Peace Prize, consider one more offering from mean Joe Greene:

"If I was ever in a barroom brawl and I needed someone to go back-to-back with me, I'd want Jack Lambert to be that man."

Walton is 'doubtful' vs. Lakers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Center Bill Walton of the Portland Trail Blazers, who suffered a bruised right knee against Mikwaukee Thursday night, is a doubtful starter in home games tonight and Sunday against Chicago and the Lakers, respectively.

Walton fell about five minutes into the first quarter of the Milwaukee game, which Portland lost, 127-107.

Two other Portland starters who have been out with injuries, Maurice Lucas and Dave Twardzik, are expected to see action this weekend.

Blazer officials said Friday they hoped Walton would be ready for a game with Boston Tuesday night, but that his playing status would be evaluated from day to day.

Rose Bowl: Battle for No. 1?

BOWL WEATHER

There is a 40 per cent chance of rain for the Tournament of Roses Parade today, dropping off to a 20 per cent chance of light showers by the 2 p.m. kickoff of the Rose Bowl game. Temperature at game time is forecast in the low 60s.

Midwest run vs. Coast balance

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

A few years ago, Bo Schembechler explained his football philosophy.

"My thinking is—strong defense, strong running and passing third," said the Michigan coach. "You can't develop a good running game if you are dropping back, chicken-fighting some guy in pass blocking."

Whether Schembechler's brand of football will yield a victory over a more-balanced USC team in the Rose Bowl today at 2 p.m. is a matter of conjecture.

A crowd of more than 106,000 and a national TV audience of 73,000,000 on NBC (Ch. 4 locally) is expected to view the 63rd Rose Bowl game.

Oddsmakers have made the second-ranked Wolverines six-point favorites over No. 3 USC. Both teams have 10-1 records.

Michigan will be trying to reverse a trend in which the Pacific-8 Conference has won six of the last seven games from Big Ten opponents.

Schembechler will be seeking his first Rose Bowl victory in three attempts. He sustained a heart attack prior to the 1970 game, which USC won, 10-3. Two years later, Don Bunce's passing rallied Stanford to a 13-12 triumph over the Wolverines.

"I'd say we're a little bigger and maybe they're a little quicker," he says.

"This is the first time since we played Oklahoma early in the 1973 season that an offensive team has been able to match our defensive quickness," a Trojan assistant said early in the week.

One thing seems certain—both teams are going to bang away on the ground until they are forced to put the ball into the air.

But there is a strong possibility neither team will be able to sustain attacks without mixing in some passing.

Both teams are strong defensively, each registering five shutouts. Michigan yielded only 114 yards on the ground per game, fifth in the nation, and USC gave up 129.6.

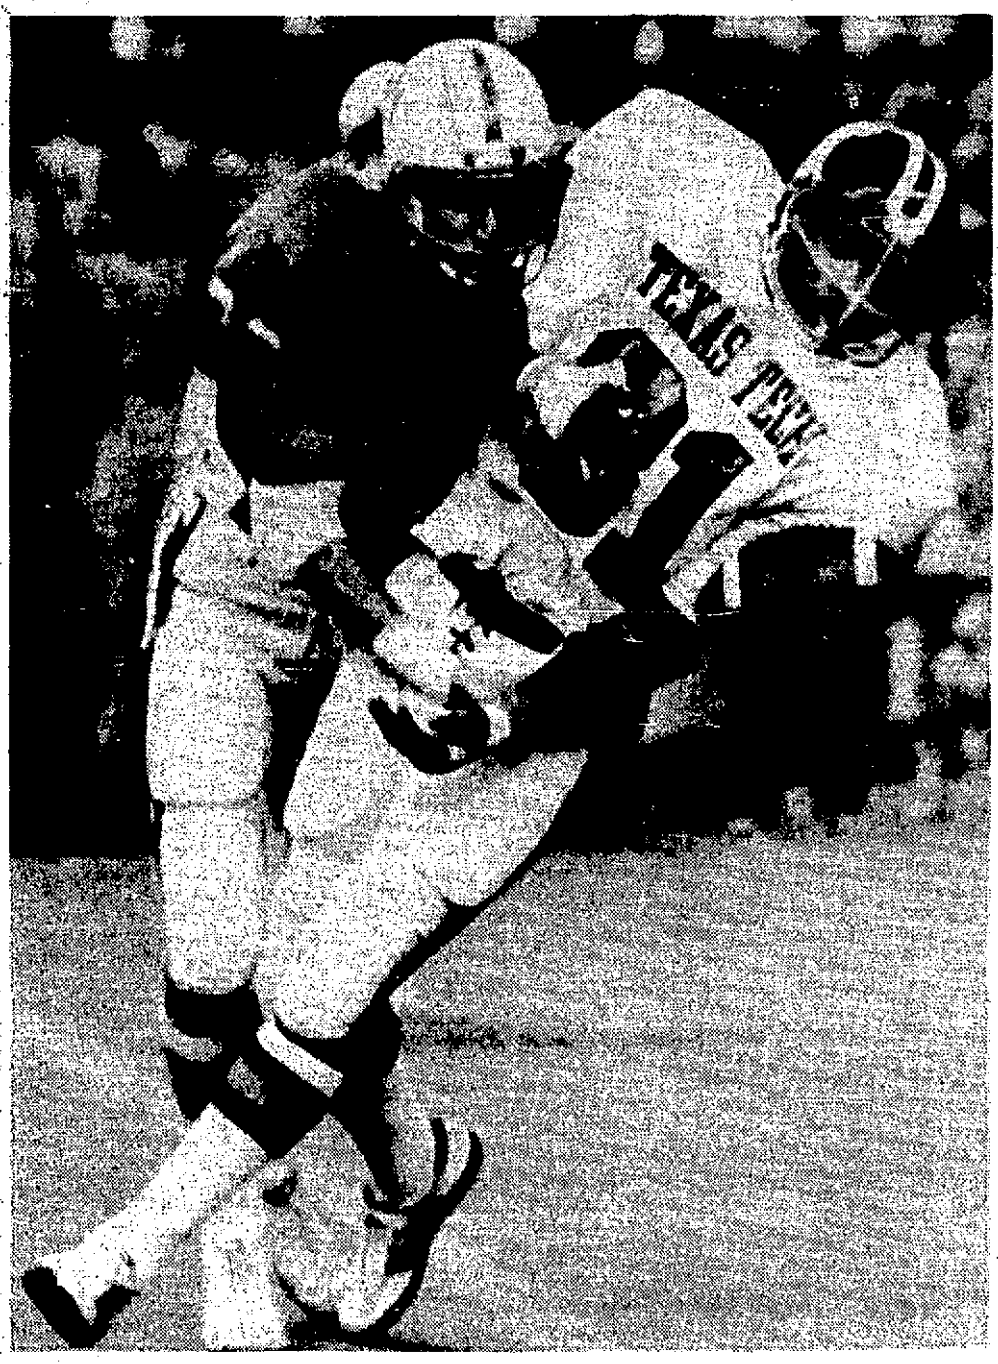

If rushing defenses dominate and are able to contain fullback Rob Lytle and tailback Harlan Huckleby of Michigan and tailback Ricky Bell of USC, the Trojans appear better equipped to pass.

Quarterbacks Vince Evans and Rob Hertel combined for 18 touchdown passes and the Trojans gained 1,745 yards through the air in 11 games, an average of 158.6.

But split end Randy Simmrin, one of their favorite targets, sustained a knee injury last week and is not figured to be in top condition for today's game.

Following Schembechler's philosophy, Michigan threw only 99 passes for 940 yards in 11 regular-season games, but 13 of quarterback Rick Leach's tosses went for touchdowns.

Texas two-step

'Big play' carries Nebraska to win

HOUSTON (AP) — Nebraska, smitten by the big play during the regular season, finally made it work for them Friday night, rallying behind quarterback Vince Ferragamo to whip Texas Tech, 27-24, in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl.

Trailing 24-14 in the third quarter, Nebraska used two game breaking plays to set up touchdowns against the eighth-ranked Red Raiders.

Wingback Curtis Craig completed a 49-yard pass to Chuck Malito to set up one touchdown. Two minutes later, Kent Smith blocked a Tech punt on the Raider 23 and on the first play Ferragamo hit Malito with the game-winning touchdown.

After losing by the big play during the regular season, including a loss in the final 38 seconds to Oklahoma that kept Nebraska out of the Orange Bowl, it was like a bad dream turned good for the Cornhuskers.

"This game followed the same lines of others we have lost," Ferragamo, a graduate of Banning High, said. "That's why it feels so good to win one like this now. We had a couple of bad plays (during the regular season) or we'd be No. 1 right now. It's great to go out like this."

Ferragamo led Nebraska from 10-point deficits with 23 and 22-yard touchdown passes to pace the victory.

Tech led 17-7 in the second quarter and 24-14 in the third quarter.

But each time Ferragamo uncorked the big play. He hit Mark Dufresnes with a 22-yard touchdown pass with 33 seconds remaining in the first half to cut Tech's lead to 17-14 at intermission.

Tech's Billy Taylor ran eight yards in the third quarter for his third touchdown to give the Raiders another 10-point lead. But a 49-yard halfback pass from Curtis Craig to Chuck Malito set up an 18-yard touchdown run by Richard Berns.

SC coach rare bowl 'rookie'

John Robinson took over from a veritable coaching legend at USC this year and for the first time in 25 years a Pac-8 rookie has guided his club to the Rose Bowl.

Robinson, 41, succeeded John McKay, whose teams won three national championships and went to the Rose Bowl eight times in his 16 seasons at the helm.

McKay quit to go with the new Tampa Bay club of the National Football League. Robinson had been his offensive coordinator three seasons before going on the Oakland Raiders pro staff in 1975.

"I think I've been asked that 1,500 times," Robinson said on the eve of the Rose Bowl game against Michigan. "When you're dealing with the team there is no pressure. When you're dealing with the press and the alumni, you just do the best you can.

"The fact that we've been successful certainly has helped."

Like McKay, Robinson is an alumnus of Oregon, and he holds the greatest respect for his former

Balanced diet: 49ers vs. Illinois

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

It is the perfect nightcap for sports fans.

"It" is tonight's Long Beach Arena encounter between host Long Beach State and Big Ten power Illinois.

The intersectional contest begins at 8 o'clock and will be broadcast on KFOX-AM (1280) and KKOP-FM (93.5). There is no preliminary game.

Anyone who has survived the day-long deluge of televised football and is in the Arena when the teams collide will see quite a collection of basketball talent.

"Illinois will be one of the best teams we play this season," 49er coach Dwight Jones says of a team that was 7-1 before dropping two of three games in the University of Hawaii's Rainbow Classic this week.

The Illini lost to St. John's, 56-52, for fifth place Thursday night. They flew back to the Southland Friday.

Jones' 49er team is 8-3 after rapping Loyola and Portland State earlier this week to win the sixth Long Beach Classic. The 49ers beat Portland State, 101-90, in the title game, surviving a 43-point performance by Freeman Williams, the nation's leading scorer.

Entering the Rainbow Classic, the Illini had four starters averaging in double figures: Audie Matthews (14.4), Ken Ferdinand (14.0), Rich Adams (11.0) and Levi Cobb (10.9). Matthews and Adams are juniors, Ferdinand a sophomore and Cobb a freshman.

The 49ers are led in scoring by senior Richard Johnson, who scored 25 points in the title game and earned MVP honors in the Long Beach Classic.

Kirby Lane scores easy victory in La Brea Stakes

Under a well judged ride by Laffit Pincay, Kirby Lane closed strongly on the stretch turn and drew off to a one and one-half length win over Tregillick in the $39,500 La Brea Stakes at Santa Anita Park Friday.

The gray son of Native Charger came from far back in the field of nine 3-year-olds. At the head of the stretch he drew alongside Missing Marbles, who had commanded the pace much of the way in the one mile and one-sixteenth test, and pulled away to a relatively easy win.

Tregillick, under Don Pierce, was in contention for the stretch run and finished two-and-a-half lengths in front of Missing Marbles, ridden by Marco Castaneda.

Kirby Lane, trained by Laz Barrera, carried 117 pounds to win in 1:45 1/5 on the muddy track, paying $5.40, $3.60 and $3.20 as the wagering favorite of the crowd of 25,793.

Tregillick returned $6.20 and $4.60, while show price on Missing Marbles was $3.60.

The victory by Kirby Lane was his fourth in 13 starts during 1976. The La Brea first money of $23,750 increased his 1976 earnings to $78,762.

ECLIPSE Award-winning My Juliet carries highweight of 128 pounds as she heads a field of eight older fillies and mares in today's $45,150 Las Flores Handicap. In the 24-year history of the 6-furlong event, no distaffer has ever carried more than 126 pounds to the winner's circle.

Voted the champion sprinter of 1976, My Juliet captured four stakes events at four different tracks in the east this season, her major victories coming in Belmont's Vagrancy and Aqueduct's Vosburgh Handicaps. In the latter, the 4-year-old daughter of Gallant Romeo distinguished herself with an impressive two-length score over 1976 Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner Bold Forbes. Trained by Gene Euster, she will be ridden by her regular rider, Tony Black.

Leading the opposition is Swingtime, an American-bred distaffer who won honors as champion filly in England. Returning to her native land this year, she was a divisional winner in Hollywood Park's Brentwood Stakes and Hawthorne Handicap and ran third to Miss Toshiba in the Wilshire Handicap in her last outing. Bill Shoemaker has the mount, at 122 pounds.

Also weighted at 122 pounds, with Jerry Lambert up, is B.J. Ridder's Modus Vivendi, making her initial outing since being injured in the fall of 1975. In that year the daughter of Rising Market scored in Hollywood Park's Milady and Del Mar's Palomar Handicaps.

Laffit Pincay accounts for most of the 121 pounds assigned to Just a Kick, defending champion of the Las Flores. In addition to winning last season's edition of today's contest, the 4-year-old daughter of Olympiad King captured Hollywood Park's Costa Mesa and Del Mar's Palomar Handicaps this year.

Mama Kali, with Angel Cordero, Jr. aboard, is coming off a win in Bay Meadows' California Jockey Club Handicap on Dec. 4. The Tom Rolfe mare also annexed Del Mar's Rancho Bernardo Handicap this summer. She will carry 119.

If all eight start, $27,150 will go to the winner.

Southern Gentleman tops Alamitos card

Southern Gentleman, a finalist in the 1976 Champion of Champions, will face a strong field of allowance speedsters as Los Alamitos Race Course gets 1977 under way with the featured Happy New Year Purse tonight.

One of the nominees to the prestigious Vessels Maturity next summer, Southern Gentleman will start his 4-year-old campaign against Cadillaking, Vidon, Rigadoon, Ed Dee, Triple Beat, Hyonijet, Lassie's Top Man, Dr. Twiehaus and Tita Mia. Breezing Man is on the also eligible list for the first feature event of the new year.

Southern Gentleman ran fifth to Dash for Cash in the Champion of Champions Dec. 19. Dash for Cash covered the 440 yards in 21.17, the fastest in Los Alamitos history, while the rest of the field was a length or more back. Southern Gentleman was one of several that came away with a 100-plus speed rating for the race.

The 4-year-old Savannah Jr. gelding closed out his sophomore season with seven wins and a dozen in-the-money finishes in 16 trips to the starting gate. His victories included the Sunland Fall Derby, which earned him the Champions' berth, and he was a finalist in both the Rainbow and All-American Derbies. Southern Gentleman earned $55,581 during the year to increase his lifetime bankroll to more than $75,000. Luke Myles will be in the saddle.

Hyjonijet, a 4-year-old daughter of Easy Jet, has run first and second in two previous Los Alamitos appearances. She earned nearly $50,000 by winning four of 15 races during her sophomore campaign and a win in this event would push her lifetime bankroll over the $100,000 level. Hyjonijet won her last race over 440 yards in the excellent time of 21.87 and will have James Brooks in the saddle.

Triple Beat, winner of the 1974 El Primero Del Ano Derby, has one win in three starts at the winter meeting and closed out 1976 with three triumphs in 17 starts.

FRIDAY NIGHT, A Zure Request, runner-up in the $75,000 Champion of Champions, closed out 1976 on a winning note by racing to a narrow head triumph in the featured $15,000 Auld Lang Syne Stakes.

A Zure Request overcame a heavy track and 8-5 favorite Native Creek, who finished second, to notch the victory. It was his ninth win in 15 starts for the year and pushed his 1976 earnings to more than $127,000.

Ridden by Kenneth Hart, A Zure Request ran the 350 yards in 18.20 seconds over the off track and paid $11.40, $4.40 and $3.80.

Deck A Bar finished third, but was disqualified for interference shortly after the start and placed last.

Weather may decide Cotton Bowl winner

DALLAS (AP) — Sixth-ranked Houston matches its speed and offense against fourth-ranked Maryland's strength and defense in today's Cotton Bowl, with foul weather threatening to hamper the hosts from the Southwest Conference.

Several thousand tickets remained unsold on the eve of the 41st annual extravaganza, and with a forecast of possible snow and temperatures in the 20s, there could be additional gaping no-shows in the 73,000-seat stadium. (Channel 2, 11 a.m.)

Houston's Cougars, running the Veer offense invented by coach Bill Yeoman in 1966, scored 313 points while posting a 9-2 regular season record and ranked No. 8 in the nation with an offense which averaged 414 yards a game.

THE COUGARS, after going 2-8 in their final year as an independent, astounded the Southwest Conference by winning the league championship in their inaugural season.

Sophomore quarterback Danny Davis had a lot to do with the turnaround, developing steadily throughout the season as he adapted to the triple option.

He was ably supported by talent and depth at the skill positions, headed by running backs Alois Blackwell and two receivers averaging better than 20 yards per pass reception — Don Bass and Eddie Foster.

Houston fumbled the ball 43 times during the season, and the frequent ball exchanges of the Veer would be even more dangerous in cold and/or wet weather.

Maryland's more conservative Slot-I formation, which features slashes up the middle by the tailback, is more geared to foul weather and turnovers against the Terps could prove disastrous.

Maryland, which extended its winning steak to 15 in a row by going 11-0 this season and took its third consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference title, has developed into a defensive power under Jerry Claiborne.

THE TERPS ranked No. 2 nationally in total defense and No. 3 in scoring defense, allowing just 85 points, only 29 in the second half.

Steve Atkins, Maryland's explosive tailback who was injured in the fifth game of the season, is not expected to play. His replacement, Alvin (Preacher) Maddox and fullback Tim Wilson, both 600-yard gainers, will be in the backfield with Manges.

Both teams, making their first appearances in the Cotton Bowl, boast outstanding defensive tackles—Wilson Whitely, a first-team all-America for Houston and Joe Campbell, a second-team choice from Maryland.

At home in the dome

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The University of Pittsburgh and all-time rushing king Tony Dorsett put their No. 1 ranking on the line in the Sugar Bowl today against fifth-ranked Georgia in a dramatic rags-to-riches bid for college football's national championship.

It will end an era since a dozen starters, including Dorsett, will be playing their final game, and miracle-worker coach Johnny Majors is leaving for the University of Tennessee.

In the four years since they arrived, Dorsett and Majors revived Pitt from a 1-10 record in 1972 to a 11-0 mark this year. The Panthers are one step from their first national title in 39 years and their first perfect campaign since 1918.

"We have the right to claim the No. 1 ranking at this stage and a final chance to prove it or not to prove it," Majors said Friday after canceling Pitt's final scheduled workout because of windy conditions.

The weather, however, will have no effect today on the second Sugar Bowl game inside the gigantic New Orleans Superdome, and a strike by the stadium's service employes has been limited by law to an area where it won't threaten the nationally televised (Channel 7, 9:45 a.m.) game.

Dorsett, Majors and the cinderella Panthers have commanded most of the headlines, but Majors said he doesn't plan to make his imminent departure "a big emotional deal. That's not my cup of tea, although I'm a naturally enthusiastic guy. Whether I go out on a winning note is not important. The national championship is the most important thing."

GEORGIa coach Vince Dooley thinks his club should be considered for the national championship if it knocks off Pitt. The Bulldogs, 10-1 and champions of the Southeastern Conference, have plenty of weapons of their own.

"We're very similar to Pitt from the standpoint that we're both extremely well-balanced," Dooley said. "We're very close in scoring offense and scoring defense and we both have excellent kicking games.

"The one difference is that they have a Superman and we don't. That's the only description I can find for Dorsett because he's super in every respect."

In setting a single-season NCAA record of 1,948 rushing yards this fall and a career mark of 6,082, Dorsett set or tied 18 NCAA standards. He also won the Heisman Trophy in a landslide.

In the national rushing statistics, Pitt is seventh with 290.7 yards a game while Georgia is 11th at 279.5. Pitt is sixth in scoring with a 32.2-point average and Georgia is 11th at 29.5.

Both have solid defense, with Pitt among the top 10 in total defense and rushing defense and Georgia listed among those teams allowing the fewest points.

"Georgia's defense team comes up with a lot of big plays," Majors said, "and that's our biggest concern right now. I think the winner will have to score at least three touchdowns."

GEORGIA has at least one problem besides trying to stop Dorsett, even though the Bulldogs held him to 101 yards in 1973—his collegiate debut—and 104 in a 1975 meeting. Dooley is concerned about the Superdome's artifical turf.

"The turf will be a help to Pitt because it tends to make fast backs even faster," he said. "Why doesn't it makes the pursuing defenses faster, too? I don't know. We've only played one game on artificial turf all season (it was Georgia's only loss, 21-17 to Mississippi) and there's a difference in the way the ball bounces. You've also got to learn how to fall on the turf because it's different if you're not used to it."

Pitt, on the other hand, played all but three games on artificial turf and practiced on it almost every day.

"We've played well on all surfaces," Majors said, a remark to which an 11-0 coach is entitled. "We try to make as little a deal as possible out of different conditions."

THE SHOT at the national championship caps a rebuilding program Majors began when he brought more than 70 newcomers to Pitt for the 1973 campaign.

"We talked about a national championship, but I don't know if I really believed it," he recalled. "But you've got to have something to shoot for. Pitt had been there before, and that was a base to build on, or I wouldn't have taken the job. But I didn't really start to believe it until last year."

Meanwhile, Majors put in a plug for Georgia and Dooley, an old friend. "Georgia should get due consideration for the No. 1 ranking if they win," he said.

"Pittsburgh has every claim to be No. 1...right now," Dooley replied.

Orange Bowl: Is it really Nothing Bowl?

MIAMI (AP) — Ohio State, ranked 11th nationally and holding a share of the Big Ten championship, makes its first post-season appearance away from the Rose Bowl tonight when the Buckeyes tangle with No. 12 Colorado in the Orange Bowl football game.

The 43rd annual event has lost some of its prestige since neither team is in the running for the national championship, but both coaches—Bill Mallory of Colorado and Woody Hayes of Ohio State—contend that aspect has been overplayed.

"We look at it with a lot of respect," Mallory said. "You are going to always find some people downgrading something. We are both co-champions (Ohio State in the Big Ten, Colorado in the Big Eight). I think that's a pretty darn good accomplishment in two excellent leagues."

"I second what Bill said," Hayes added.

THE BUCKEYES (8-2-1) are a one-touchdown favorite to win the nationally televised battle (Channel 4, 5 p.m.) before an expected sellout crowd of 79,000.

Mallory, a former assistant under Hayes at Ohio State, reported the only casualty. Both teams enter at virtually full strength. Reserve tailback Howard Ballage underwent surgery Thursday and won't be available to relieve Tony Reed, the All-Big Eight tailback who rambled for 1,210 yards in the Buffaloes' 8-3 campaign.

Season records

Pacenta passed for 400 yards in Ohio State's run-oriented attack. The other quarterback under consideration, Rod Gerald, was the team's No. 3 rusher with 384 yards behind Jeff Logan's 1,169 and injury-plagued Pete Johnson's 698.

Johnson, having scored a school-record 57 career touchdowns, is reported to be back in form after being slowed throughout the year, spraining both ankles in the Missouri game.

BOTH COACHES said the key will be stopping the other team's running game. Hayes added that Colorado was more versatile than his team because of the passing of Jeff Knapple, who threw for just over 900 yards.

Mallory said his team would have to be ready for anything, however, and Hayes quickly quipped, "You may be right, Bill. We may pass you right off the field."

Hayes was in a jovial mood, often smiling as he and Mallory held their final news conference Friday. No one expects a passing show from the man who has won 221 games primarily with a strong running game.

"We've gotten to the place now where neither Bill nor I will tell you much," Hayes said.

WOODY: 'PITT PLAYED IT SAFE'

MIAMI (AP) — Ohio State's Woody Hayes said Friday No. 1-ranked Pittsburgh "played it safe" in accepting a Sugar Bowl matchup with Georgia rather than an Orange Bowl bid to meet Big-Eight co-champion Colorado.

"Pittsburgh had a chance to come here but they backed off," Hayes said at a joint news conference with Colorado Coach Bill Mallory. "That's the reason we're here. We're the second choice. The only question I have is, why?"

Hayes refused to elaborate on his statement. When asked for an opinion on the poll ratings, he said, "I have feelings about everything. But sometimes I find it better if I keep them to myself."

Mallory didn't comment on the poll argument, which heated up Thursday when Bo Schembechler of No. 2 Michigan and John Robinson of No. 3 Southern California claimed that the winner of their Rose Bowl game should be the national champion.

Mallory did defend the Orange Bowl matchup which will draw a capacity crowd, but he has been criticized because of the low ratings of the teams. Big Eight co-champion Colorado (8-3) is rated 12th, Big Ten co-champion Ohio State (8-2-1) is 11th.

Peach-y New Year for Kentucky, 21-0

ATLANTA (AP) — The Kentucky defense, which helped the Wildcats gain a bowl bid for the first time in a decade, and sophomore running back Rod Stewart were most responsible for Kentucky's 21-0 victory over North Carolina Friday in the ninth Peach Bowl, according to coach Fran Curci.

"The defense kept us in the game as it has all season," said Curci. "In the first half, we were jumping around and trying to find something. In the second, we decided to do what we do best—run right at people."

The Wildcats handed North Carolina its first shutout in five years while limiting the Tar Heels to five first downs and 108 yards total offense.

The Kentucky defenders, led by linebackers Mike Martin and Jim Kovach and defense end Art Still, forced five turnovers including one which led to Kentucky's first touchdown.

Stewart, a sophomore who was the second leading rusher on the team, scored that one from one yard out and added two others on runs of 13 and three yards. His running earned him most valuable player honors as he gained 104 yards in 19 carries.

	Kentucky	No. Carolina
First downs	19	5
Rushes-yards	70-318	41-84
Passing yards	16	24
Return yards	54	18
Passes	2-9-1	3-15-3
Punts	8-25	7-34
Fumbles-lost	4-2	3-2
Penalties-yards	7-55	2-10

"It's the biggest award I've ever won, but our offensive line deserves the credit. They were moving people and all I had to do was run," said Stewart.

Mike Voight, North Carolina's running back who gained 1,407 yards this year and was voted the Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year, missed the contest after spraining an ankle in practice Wednesday.

Without Voight, 19th-ranked North Carolina, 8-3, could generate little offense. The Tar Heels gained only 76 yards and three first downs in the first half.

North Carolina Quarterback Matt Kupec, harassed all day by the aroused Wildcast defenders, was intercepted three times and fumbled once.

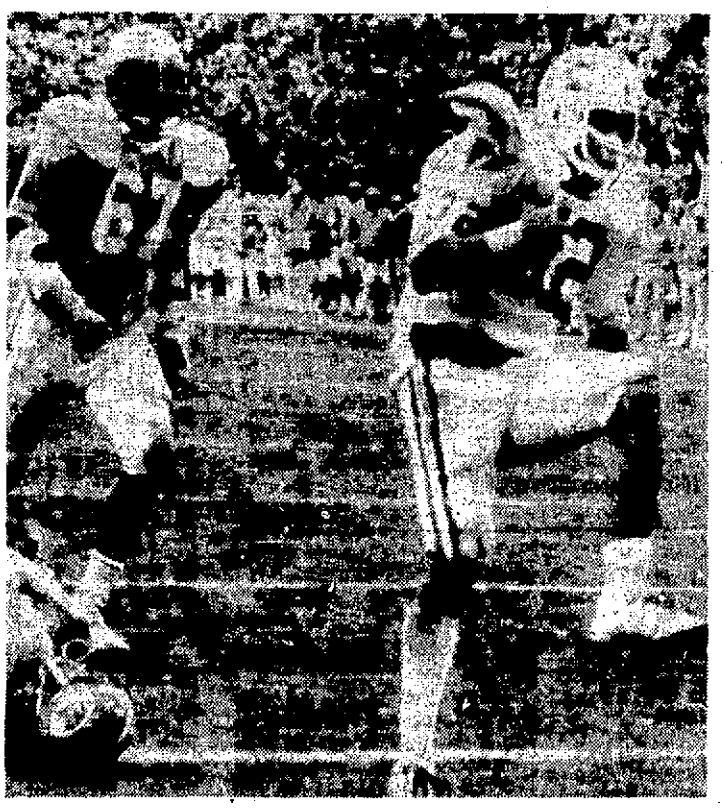

Kupec's fumble led to Kentucky's first touchdown.

Early in the third period the freshman quarterback fumbled while attempting to pass and defensive tackle James Ramey recovered for the Wildcats on the North Carolina 21.

NEBRASKA—

Just two minutes later, after a partially-deflected punt gave Nebraska a first down at Tech's 23, Ferragamo lofted a perfect pass to Malito in the corner of the end zone for the winning TD.

The Red Raiders jumped to a 17-7 lead in the second period on touchdown passes of 14 and 11 yards from Rodney Allison to Taylor and a 28-yard field goal by Brian Hall, who missed a 37-yard field goal with 4:27 left in the game that would have tied the score.

Berns scored on a one-yard run for the Huskers on the game's first drive.

Nebraska closed out its season with a 9-3-1 record and Tech, Southwest Conference co-champion, finished at 10-2.

Nebraska appeared heading for its fourth defeat in the second quarter when the Raiders turned two Cornhusker fumbles into touchdowns.

Trojan ballet

Shelton Diggs leaps high in air to catch pass thrown by Vince Evans against Washington. Diggs's dazzling two-point conversion reception in 1975 Rose Bowl led Trojans to 18-17 win over Ohio State.

ROSE BOWL—

"We go for the big play when we pass," says Schembechler.

Leach's favorite receiver is wingback Jim Smith, also a dangerous kick return man.

Today's Rose Bowl teams faced two common opponents, Stanford and Purdue, and USC gets an edge in that area. The Trojans defeated Purdue, 31-13, and Stanford, 48-24. Michigan routed Stanford, 51-0, but sustained its lone loss of the season to Purdue, 16-14.

"It's going to be one of the great bowl games," Robinson pledges. "I think we're going to win, but I always feel that way."

Schembechler says it's "a game you cannot predict."

"I wouldn't want to bet on how it's going to go," he says.

But several million people probably will.

boss. He made some changes on taking over, such as putting more emphasis on the quarterback position.

With runners such as O. J. Simpson, Clarence Davis and Anthony Davis, the USC attack had centered on the tailback. With Ricky Bell, another all-America, operating at tailback this season, the upgrading of the quarterback gave the Trojans a more diversified attack.

Robinson's debut as head coach proved dismal. Missouri whipped the Trojans, 45-23, in the opening game, but USC wasn't to lose again and posted a 10-1 record, the same as Michigan. Robinson never let his players forget the humiliation of the Missouri defeat.

The last time a rookie Pac-8 coach took a team to the Rose Bowl was in 1952 when Chuck Taylor was in his first year at Stanford. His club lost to Illinois, 40-7, in the bowl.

Getting back to the problems that succeeding McKay might have posed, Robinson summed up by saying, "The tradition at USC is involved with the school and not with a man. There have been a lot of good men coaching here."

Red Wings win, close in on Kings

Walt McKechnie scored one goal and assisted on two others as the Detroit Red Wings posted a 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Barons Friday night. The victory enabled Detroit to move within four points of third-place Kings for the final playoff berth in the NHL's Norris Division.

The Wings broke in front when Nick Libett scored the only goal of the first period. Then Dennis Hextall and Dennis Polonich scored on rebounds during a 20-shot, second-period barrage to give Detroit a 3-0 edge going into the final period.

Cleveland rallied early in the third period on goals by Greg Smith and Wayne Merrick just 59 seconds apart to cut the deficit to 3-2.

But Detroit took advantage of a lapse by Cleveland goalie Gary Simmons, who got caught behind his own net on a scramble with Libett for the puck, which bounced out to McKechnie for an easy opennet goal at 10:00 to clinch the victory.

Tom Lysiak drilled in a 20-footer with less than seven minutes to play to snap a 2-2 tie and lead the Atlanta Flames to a 4-2 victory over the New York Rangers.

The win boosted Atlanta's lead over the Rangers to three points in the chase for third place and the final playoff berth in the Patrick Divison.

Wilf Paiement's goal with 1:27 remaining in the game lifted the Colorado Rockies into a 2-2 tie with the Chicago Black Hawks.

Hopeful Kings LBSU—host Boston

The Kings, who found little to celebrate during 1976, hope to begin the new year on a brighter note tonight when they skate against the Boston Bruins at the Forum.

After winning five of their first six starts at home during October, the Kings entertained thoughts of making a strong run at Montreal for the Norris Division title. But coach Bob Pulford's club has gone sour the last two months, winning only one of its last 13 starts.

Tonight's match marks the second of five meetings with the Bruins. In their first encounter at the Forum the Kings turned 1-0 and 2-1 leads into a 4-2 defeat. The match was enlivened by two fights between Dave Schultz and the Bruins' Terry O'Reilly.

KINGS NOTES: Despite losing their last four games at home, the Kings remain two points behind second-place Pittsburgh. They've scored only 12 goals in their last five games and Marcel Dionne has accounted for five of these. Team captain Mike Murphy has gone 17 games without a goal. Boston's John Bucyk became the NHL's fourth all-time scorer when he notched his 545th goal last week, climbing past Rocket Richard. Bucyk is playing his 20th season with the Bruins and 22nd in NHL. At 41, Bucyk is the oldest active player in the league. The Kings are 4-6-1 in their last 11 home games vs. Bruins. Boston trails Buffalo's division leaders by two points. Dave Hutchison will rejoin the Kings tonight after sitting out an automatic two-game suspension for his game misconduct penalty against Detroit. After tonight the Kings embark on their longest trip of the season—seven games in 15 days starting Tuesday in St. Louis. The Kings return home to face Toronto on Jan. 18th.

Former I,P-T staffer

Medick dies of cancer

Charles (Chuck) Medick, a member of the Independent, Press-Telegram sports department for 14 years, died of cancer Friday morning at Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Medick is survived by his wife, Gail, of 259½ Grand Ave., Long Beach. Arrangements are being handled by Mottell's Mortuary, Long Beach. There will be no funeral service.

CHUCK MEDICK
Mr. Softball

Blind since infancy, Mr. Medick, 54, joined the sports staff of the Independent, Press-Telegram in 1960.

Mr. Medick's varied assignments included coverage of the Long Beach Nitehawks softball team, International Softball Congress tournaments, high school competition, and youth baseball. He wrote a column, Junior Baseball Corner.

Born in Columbus, Ohio, on Aug. 12, 1922, Mr. Medick attended Ohio State University and Western Reserve and was instrumental in advancing the techniques of instruction to the blind at both schools.

After graduation, he taught other blind students at the Braille Institute and at Western Reserve. For several years he served as an X-ray darkroom technician, developing film at hospitals in the Cleveland area.

He continued to work in the medical field after moving to California in 1957.

Mr. Medick was the first blind referee certified by the United States Table Tennis Association.

For several years he hosted a morning radio program, "Sports on Toast," for a Lakewood FM station.

He worked a suicide "hot line" phone at Memorial Hospital and received a commendation for his contributions.

He was the public address announcer for all softball games at Park Ave. Field (Joe Rodgers Field), and at many baseball games at Blair Field.

BUD TUCKER

Gone are the laughs and the lampshades

William Clay Ford, proprietor of the Detroit Lions, the other day went on record as wishing to dispatch overtures of employment to Rams coach Chuck Knox.

This Knox is one and the same who blew the National Football Conference title to Minnesota by failing to go for a touchdown on forth down with the ball on the Vikings' one-inch line. At least, this is the dialogue on the boulevard in the wake of still another Ram departure from the Super Bowl tournament.

Presumably, it is the view of the general public that Knox should have known his field goal attempt would be blocked and the ball sucked up by a Minnesota guy who would run it for 90 yards and a touchdown to create a disaster from which the Rams would not recover.

If you are a regular here, you have read a passage Knox quotes from Sir Winston Churchill:

"Among the deficiencies of hindsight is that while we know the consequences of what was done, we do not know the consequences of some other course that was not followed."

An eventuality getting very little mention is that of the field goal being good. The Rams would then have led by three points and the consequences of that course would have changed the entire pattern and complexion of the game.

Still, you get the hindsight which demands the only sane decision would have been to go for the six points.

Among those who agree that this is hogwash is William Clay Ford. The Lions will take Knox and forget all about Minnesota.

PERSONALLY, there is reason to be annoyed with Knox and his football team even though it is only indirectly connected with the decision in Minnesota. Some three days later, it is obvious something besides the field goal was called for but that pure hindsight and neither here nor there.

The dispute here involving the Rams is what they have done to the Super Bowl social calendar. Traditionally, Super Bowl week is the highlight of the cocktail season and an event to be remembered from one year and anticipated to the next.

By falling on their snow suits in Minnesota, the Rams reduced the Super Bowl party to something resembling a Sunday morning rehearsal of the Budapest String Quartet.

Imagine the laughs we will have with the arrival of Bud Grant, the Minnesota coach. It was Grant who ran off the women at his last Super Bowl camp on the theory sex is undesirable on the eve of a big game.

Those are grounds for land-locked mutiny.

Then there is the hilarious and delightful Fran Tarkenton. Francis Asbury is as funny as athritis. He can brighten up a room just by walking out of it.

Then you consider the other old codgers who complete the travelling roster of the Vikings. This crowd's idea of a big night is extra lemon in the iced tea.

The only thing funny about Oakland Raider coach John Madden is his clothes. If big John looks like he slept in his suit, it is because he did. Madden looks like a permanent contestant in a sack race.

This, then, is the reason this tourist is upset with the Rams, who could have insured a delightful Super Bowl week. However, the disappointment is not such that one would suggest Chuck Knox take a hike to Detroit.

Of course, it is not out of the question he might go on his own to eliminate certain problems. For instance, he was plagued by deciding on a starting quarterback because the Rams have three.

The Lions have none.

Neither will there ever be the distasteful postmortems about a play call on the one-inch line.

Jack Lambert: Assassin in cleats

By BILL LYON
Knight News Service

First, there is the position itself. Play there and you should have bolts sticking out of your neck and you should make clanking noises when you walk. Hello, Dr. Frankenstein? I need me a middle linebacker.

Dr. Arnold J. Mandel, a psychiatrist, asked NFL scouts: "Whom would you send behind the lines in wartime to assassinate an important enemy?" They all said "a linebacker."

Second, the image has been carefully cultivated by the folk-heroes who have played there. Sam Huff pioneered the word "violent" there. Ray Nitschke added to the less-than-human image when he had a steel tower fall on his head then calmly got up and asked if it was time for the defense to go in.

And then there was Dick Butkus, who grinned evilly, smacked his lips with relish and painted this grisly picture for an interviewer: "My dream? To hit a ball carrier so hard that the ball rolls one way and his head rolls the other."

Now for the finishing touch. It was supplied by Joe Greene, who has forever been inscribed in our consciousness as Mean Joe Greene, who said with just the proper malevolent pause and note of ominous awe: "Jack Lambert is so mean that he don't even like himself."

Now that's a testimonial even the new King Kong could envy.

But John Harold Lambert, alias "Mean Smilin' Jack" of the Pittsburgh Steelers, protests that he is the victim of a bum rap. Oh yes, he will own up to playing the game with a certain. . .ah, gusto.

"But I give away 20 pounds every time I step on the field. So I have to be 20 pounds more aggressive.

"But that stuff about being mean, that's strictly an image thing. You get labeled and it's gonna stick with you no matter what you do.

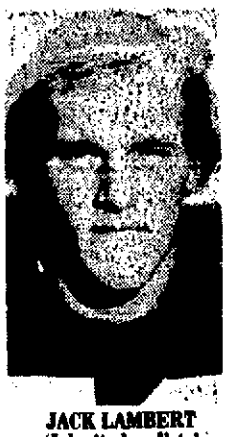

"Sure, I get carried away during a game. But no cheap shots, no late hits,. I bust guys, hard. But it's fair. And it's the name of the game."

But Lambert will admit that his style of play, if not his words, only perpetuates the image. You saw him devastate Cliff Harris in last year's Super Bowl, and on TV, in the Steelers' wasting of Baltimore, he filled your TV screen with a gap-toothed close-up screaming at an official to call offensive interference after a slow-mo replay clearly showed he had been the one doing the mugging.

Lambert does not look like a middle linebacker. He is tall, has a neck, an unusually long one at that, is bow-legged and reminds you more of a farm boy. Which he once was.

BUT AT 24, Jack Lambert has been Defensive Rookie of the Year, All-Pro, and in only his third season, the owner of two Super Bowl championship rings.

The Steelers coaching staff still relates how Lambert, after he was signed following his senior season at Kent State, would get up at 6 a.m. each Saturday, drive to Pittsburgh and spend eight hours watching films of pro linebacker formations and sets. Most rookies devote their preseason to studying no-cut clauses in their contracts.

JACK LAMBERT
'I don't play dirty'

But for all his dedication; for all his masochistic off-season training, the image of brutality, of pure meanness, persists.

"I have aggressions, sure," says Lambert. "So does everybody. I get rid of 'em playing football. Maybe if we could suit up the whole world in football uniforms we wouldn't have so many wars.

"See, I think there's a fine line between intimidating someone and just playing dirty," Lambert says. "Remember all the flack the Flyers used to get about fighting? You get that kind of rep and pretty soon people don't look at the skill and the hustle you have, they just wait for you to take a swing and then they say, see, what'd I tell ya about those guys? The Flyers won two championships playing their style. And so did we."

But before you nominate Jack Lambert for the Nobel Peace Prize, consider one more offering from mean Joe Greene:

"If I was ever in a barroom brawl and I needed someone to go back-to-back with me, I'd want Jack Lambert to be that man."

Walton is 'doubtful' vs. Lakers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Center Bill Walton of the Portland Trail Blazers, who suffered a bruised right knee against Mikwaukee Thursday night, is a doubtful starter in home games tonight and Sunday against Chicago and the Lakers, respectively.

Walton fell about five minutes into the first quarter of the Milwaukee game, which Portland lost, 127-107.

Two other Portland starters who have been out with injuries, Maurice Lucas and Dave Twardzik, are expected to see action this weekend.

Blazer officials said Friday they hoped Walton would be ready for a game with Boston Tuesday night, but that his playing status would be evaluated from day to day.

Earl Wilson

Tribute to an ailing Toots

NEW YORK — The closest friend I've ever had around Broadway is Toots Shor. He was once a nightclub bouncer and he has had many a fight, but he's having his biggest fight now.

After asking friends to get down on their knees and pray for him, he had surgery the other day at N.Y. University Hospital. It was brief. He was sent to Intensive Care for further treatment. He didn't know that Jackie Gleason was flying from Miami, hoping to see him.

He's fighting his battle in what he considers a "classy" way. "I don't want to know what I've got," he said in a roar considerably lower than the one he used to have. "I've got the best doctors!

"They examine me here stricter than I ever examined a bottle of whisky," he said. "I'm a lucky bum to get so many calls." A newspaper was spread out on his bed with Red Smith's column calling him "the world's greatest saloon keeper."

"That's what I am," he said, "the world's greatest saloon keeper. Name one other one. There's nobody left — just Toosie the pretty Jew."

I OWE Tootsie for a thousand favors. At his first "store" on W. 51st Street he introduced me to Harry Truman, then vice president, Chief Justice Earl Warren and gangster Frank Costello. "Early Curly's OK," he told them, and made it easy for me.

He invented words: "Crubbums," "intelligenerates." Just the other day he said a failing discotheque was a "a disconteck." At the intermission of a chic "Hamlet" opening, he said, "I'm the only bum here who's going back to see how it comes out.

His name's up on three restaurants. He visited the newest one for just an hour. The name Toots Shor will be up on marquees for several years to come.

Seventy-one now, he's been feisty as usual with friends Pete Rozelle, Eddie Arcaro, Frank Gifford and Jack Dempsey. He still believes as he once said during a wartime curfew, "Anybody that can't get drunk by midnight ain't tryin'."

He also said, "Whisky never hurt anybody." Friends say his serious illness wasn't brought on by drinking. Of course, the world's greatest saloon keeper is sure of it.

BOSSES of five Mafia families met till 6 a.m. in Greenwich Village and decided to shy out Atlantic City gambling ... Shirley MacLaine's a possible show-opener and M.C. at the pre-inaugural gala. Producers James Lipton and Bob Wynn conferred with her in Vegas ... Irving Fields wrote a catchy tune, "Spread the Word — Good Times Are Coming," which Emory Davis' band will play at the inaugural ball ... A movie about Roseland called "Roseland" will be filmed at Roseland with Don De Natale as a starring M.C.

Pretty Leslie Easterbrook, who doesn't speak a word in "California Suite" — playing a passed-out booker — finally gets to talk to the audience at intermission; she asks them to contribute to the Actors' Fund.

Sir Lew Grade wants George C. Scott to repeat his hilarious "Sly Fox" role on screen and star in the best-selling "Raise the Titanic!" ... At Dionysos: the Red Skeltons with Peter Falk ... Barry Manilow and his girl, Linda Allen, were at Ted Hook's crowded Backstage ... Jose Ferrer said at Gian Marino's he's starting a college tour, talking about theater.

EARL'S PEARLS: Ex-fighter Lou Nova once told why he switched to acting: "I found it was getting easier to go three acts than 15 rounds."

Music review

Mehta concert is at least in tune

By JUDITH MUSAFIA

For what was billed as a gala concert, Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic appeared Wednesday night at the Long Beach City College Auditorium. The orchestra was still full of adrenalin from a recent European tour.

The program opened with the Fourth Symphony by Brahms, which I hope they did not play in Germany. They played accurately and well in tune, but this is, of course, ground zero for a professional orchestra, and below mention in a great one. The Los Angeles Philharmonic lacks that telling cohesion of spirit, that oversoul which marks the greatest orchestras.

In the music of Brahms, dense and darkly dramatic moods alternate with a warm and expansive romanticism. Like an uncut stone, it requires careful shaping and polishing to reveal its genuine luster. In this postcard performance, the larger lines were lost, smaller ones unphrased. The acoustical balance between sections was precarious, and the dynamic range was narrow, leaning mostly on forte.

It is an indication of Debussy's monumental talent that De Falla praised "Iberia" above the works of many Spanish composers, although Debussy wrote it after having spent only a few hours in Spain. The kaleidescopic orchestration of this work allowed full exposure of every section of the orchestra. There was agile solo playing among the winds, especially the principal flute. Here, in contrast to Brahms, the music is so lush, the orchestration so stunning, that a creditable reading is sufficient for an effective performance.

The undying fame of the Bolero by Ravel must surely rest in part on the fact that by the end of the piece anyone can hum the tune. In this performance, Mehta advanced the choreographic art by conducting the three-beat measure in countless imaginative ways. He began with barely perceptible gestures to conform with the beginning pianissimo and advanced to furious lunging and slashing, leaping and contorting in every direction with the mounting crescendo. The feat was all the more amazing as he was observed chewing gum at the same time.

The concert ended with Mehta administering a triple-fortissimo coup de grace; and, if the audience was not moved to tears, it knew at least that the bull was dead and it was time to stand up and cheer.

Under a well judged ride by Laffit Pincay, Kirby Lane closed strongly on the stretch turn and drew off to a one and one-half length win over Tregillick in the $39,500 La Brea Stakes at Santa Anita Park Friday.

The gray son of Native Charger came from far back in the field of nine 3-year-olds. At the head of the stretch he drew alongside Missing Marbles, who had commanded the pace much of the way in the one mile and one-sixteenth test, and pulled away to a relatively easy win.

Tregillick, under Don Pierce, was in contention for the stretch run and finished two-and-a-half lengths in front of Missing Marbles, ridden by Marco Castaneda.

Kirby Lane, trained by Laz Barrera, carried 117 pounds to win in 1:45 1/5 on the muddy track, paying $5.40, $3.60 and $3.20 as the wagering favorite of the crowd of 25,793.

Tregillick returned $6.20 and $4.60, while show price on Missing Marbles was $3.60.

The victory by Kirby Lane was his fourth in 13 starts during 1976. The La Brea first money of $23,750 increased his 1976 earnings to $78,762.

ECLIPSE Award-winning My Juliet carries highweight of 128 pounds as she heads a field of eight older fillies and mares in today's $45,150 Las Flores Handicap. In the 24-year history of the 6-furlong event, no distaffer has ever carried more than 126 pounds to the winner's circle.

Voted the champion sprinter of 1976, My Juliet captured four stakes events at four different tracks in the east this season, her major victories coming in Belmont's Vagrancy and Aqueduct's Vosburgh Handicaps. In the latter, the 4-year-old daughter of Gallant Romeo distinguished herself with an impressive two-length score over 1976 Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner Bold Forbes. Trained by Gene Euster, she will be ridden by her regular rider, Tony Black.

Leading the opposition is Swingtime, an American-bred distaffer who won honors as champion filly in England. Returning to her native land this year, she was a divisional winner in Hollywood Park's Brentwood Stakes and Hawthorne Handicap and ran third to Miss Toshiba in the Wilshire Handicap in her last outing. Bill Shoemaker has the mount, at 122 pounds.

Also weighted at 122 pounds, with Jerry Lambert up, is B.J. Ridder's Modus Vivendi, making her initial outing since being injured in the fall of 1975. In that year the daughter of Rising Market scored in Hollywood Park's Milady and Del Mar's Palomar Handicaps.

Laffit Pincay accounts for most of the 121 pounds assigned to Just a Kick, defending champion of the Las Flores. In addition to winning last season's edition of today's contest, the 4-year-old daughter of Olympiad King captured Hollywood Park's Costa Mesa and Del Mar's Palomar Handicaps this year.

Mama Kali, with Angel Cordero, Jr. aboard, is coming off a win in Bay Meadows' California Jockey Club Handicap on Dec. 4. The Tom Rolfe mare also annexed Del Mar's Rancho Bernardo Handicap this summer. She will carry 119.

If all eight start, $27,150 will go to the winner.

Southern Gentleman tops Alamitos card

Southern Gentleman, a finalist in the 1976 Champion of Champions, will face a strong field of allowance speedsters as Los Alamitos Race Course gets 1977 under way with the featured Happy New Year Purse tonight.

One of the nominees to the prestigious Vessels Maturity next summer, Southern Gentleman will start his 4-year-old campaign against Cadillaking, Vidon, Rigadoon, Ed Dee, Triple Beat, Hyjonijet, Lassie's Top Man, Dr. Twiehaus and Tita Mia. Breezing Man is on the also eligible list for the first feature event of the new year.

Southern Gentleman ran fifth to Dash for Cash in the Champion of Champions Dec. 19. Dash for Cash covered the 440 yards in 21.17, the fastest in Los Alamitos history, while the rest of the field was a length or more back. Southern Gentleman was one of several that came away with a 100-plus speed rating for the race.

The 4-year-old Savannah Jr. gelding closed out his sophomore season with seven wins and a dozen in-the-money finishes in 16 trips to the starting gate. His victories included the Sunland Fall Derby, which earned him the Champions' berth, and he was a finalist in both the Rainbow and All-American Derbies. Southern Gentleman earned $55,581 during the year to increase his lifetime bankroll to more than $75,000. Luke Myles will be in the saddle.

Hyjonijet, a 4-year-old daughter of Easy Jet, has run first and second in two previous Los Alamitos appearances. She earned nearly $50,000 by winning four of 15 races during her sophomore campaign and a win in this event would push her lifetime bankroll over the $100,000 level. Hyjonijet won her last race over 440 yards in the excellent time of 21.87 and will have James Brooks in the saddle.

Triple Beat, winner of the 1974 El Primero Del Ano Derby, has one win in three starts at the winter meeting and closed out 1976 with three triumphs in 17 starts.

FRIDAY NIGHT, A Zure Request, runner-up in the $75,000 Champion of Champions, closed out 1976 on a winning note by racing to a narrow head triumph in the featured $15,000 Auld Lang Syne Stakes.

A Zure Request overcame a heavy track and 8-5 favorite Native Creek, who finished second, to notch the victory. It was his ninth win in 15 starts for the year and pushed his 1976 earnings to more than $127,000.

Ridden by Kenneth Hart, A Zure Request ran the 350 yards in 18.20 seconds over the off track and paid $11.40, $4.40 and $3.80.

Deck A Bar finished third, but was disqualified for interference shortly after the start and placed last.

Country group gropes for hit

By JOE EDWARDS

NASHVILLE (AP) — After singing professionally for only three months, the Four Guys accomplished a goal others spend a lifetime seeking: The group of versatile 6-footers joined the Grand Ole Opry.

That was about 10 years ago. Now they're concentrating on recording — which the four haven't done extensively.

The group have recorded two albums and a handful of singles, but none has been distributed nationally.

"Ninety per cent of our mail asks where to buy our records," said Gary Buck, a member of the group.

So they're working with independent producer Gary Paxton to come up with a country single.

"We want to emphasize recording now," said Sam Wellington, another group member and once a radio station manager in West Virginia.

"We have done well except for recording. We're going to put our efforts in the hands of Paxton and let him select the material and mold the voices and then let him take credit or blame or none of the above."

The quartet, finalists as top vocal group in the 1975 Country Music Association awards, came to Nashville from Steubenville, Ohio, on New Year's Day, 1967.

They sang on several local television shows and impressed Opry officials, who asked them to make a guest appearance on the revered country music show.

The group did, got an encore and were asked back. This continued for 33 straight encore appearances. They became Opry regulars that April without the benefit of a smash hit or national recognition.

"We still enjoy our affiliation with the Opry," Wellington said. "The Opry is still a very important part of country music. It's like home to us; once you get there, you've got 4,400 folks feeding your ego."

The group have noticed some changes at the Opry, which has been on the air 51 years — longer than any other radio show.

"In the last year or two, the Opry's made an effort to come into the mainstream of country music by signing people like Ronnie Milsap, Don Williams and Barbara Mandrell," Wellington said.

"When we joined, there was more bluegrass music and less electrified stuff. They use a full set of drums now, but I don't notice that.

"There used to be more comedy, too. And it's harder to get an encore.

The Four Guys are often compared to the Statler Brothers, the top country vocal group five straight years.

"We are the only two country music groups with four members who dress alike," Wellington said. "But about 18 hits separate us."

The Four have opened a Nashville supper club, where they show their musical versatility.

"We do a variety of music," Buck said. "We don't do any hard rock, but we do some Eagles things. The club is an outlet for us to do what we want — to develop new things and express our own individual talents."

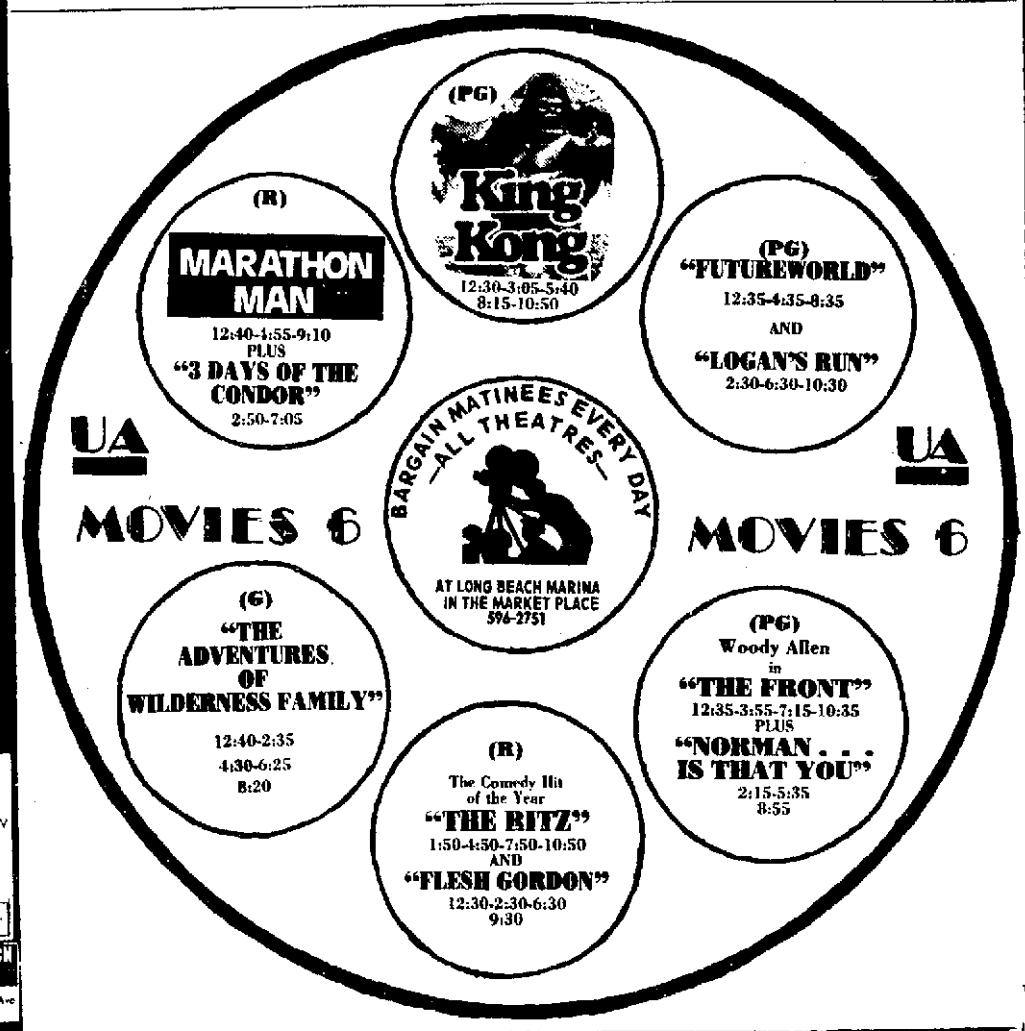

But Wellington emphasizes that the group's roots are in country music:

"It's the field where our ties are. There's no such thing as security in this business, but country music is the closest thing you can get. Once you get accepted, you're like a member of the family."

Robbins gives formal party

Harold and Grace Robbins scheduled their annual black-tie New Year's Eve soiree at Gatsby's Restaurant in Beverly Hills. Some of the invitees asked if it would be OK not to come in evening clothes if they were only dropping in for a short time. They were told: "So sorry. It's a black-tie-only party."

Among those who accepted invitations are the Tony Curtises, George Burns, Susan Blakely, Mae West, Barbara Eden, Valerie Perrine, the Jack Albertsons, the Robert Stacks, the Ed McMahons and Gen. Omar Bradley.

Trojan ballet

Shelton Diggs leaps high in air to catch pass thrown by Vince Evans against Washington. Diggs's dazzling two-point conversion reception in 1975 Rose Bowl led Trojans to 18-17 win over Ohio State.

ROSE BOWL—

"We go for the big play when we pass," says Schembechler.

Leach's favorite receiver is wingback Jim Smith, also a dangerous kick return man.

Today's Rose Bowl teams faced two common opponents, Stanford and Purdue, and USC gets an edge in that area. The Trojans defeated Purdue, 31-13, and Stanford, 48-24. Michigan routed Stanford, 51-0, but sustained its lone loss of the season to Purdue, 16-14.

"It's going to be one of the great bowl games," Robinson pledges. "I think we're going to win, but I always feel that way."

Schembechler says it's "a game you cannot predict."

"I wouldn't want to bet on how it's going to go," he says.

But several million people probably will.

Red Wings win, close in on Kings

Walt McKechnie scored one goal and assisted on two others as the Detroit Red Wings posted a 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Barons Friday night. The victory enabled Detroit to move within four points of third-place Kings for the final playoff berth in the NHL's Norris Division.

The Wings broke in front when Nick Libett scored the only goal of the first period. Then Dennis Hextall and Dennis Polonich scored on rebounds during a 20-shot, second-period barrage to give Detroit a 3-0 edge going into the final period.

Cleveland rallied early in the third period on goals by Greg Smith and Wayne Merrick just 59 seconds apart to cut the deficit to 3-2.

But Detroit took advantage of a lapse by Cleveland goalie Gary Simmons, who got caught behind his own net on a scramble with Libett for the puck, which bounced out to McKechnie for an easy opennet goal at 10:00 to clinch the victory.

Tom Lysiak drilled in a 20-footer with less than seven minutes to play to snap a 2-2 tie and lead the Atlanta Flames to a 4-2 victory over the New York Rangers.

The win boosted Atlanta's lead over the Rangers to three points in the chase for third place and the final playoff berth in the Patrick Divison.

Wilf Paiement's goal with 1:27 remaining in the game lifted the Colorado Rockies into a 2-2 tie with the Chicago Black Hawks.

boss. He made some changes on taking over, such as putting more emphasis on the quarterback position.

With runners such as O. J. Simpson, Clarence Davis and Anthony Davis, the USC attack had centered on the tailback. With Ricky Bell, another all-America, operating at tailback this season, the upgrading of the quarterback gave the Trojans a more diversified attack.

Robinson's debut as head coach proved dismal. Missouri whipped the Trojans, 45-23, in the opening game, but USC wasn't to lose again and posted a 10-1 record, the same as Michigan. Robinson never let his players forget the humiliation of the Missouri defeat.

The last time a rookie Pac-8 coach took a team to the Rose Bowl was in 1952 when Chuck Taylor was in his first year at Stanford. His club lost to Illinois, 40-7, in the bowl.

Getting back to the problems that succeeding McKay might have posed, Robinson summed up by saying, "The tradition at USC is involved with the school and not with a man. There have been a lot of good men coaching here."

Hopeful Kings host Boston LBSU—

The Kings, who found little to celebrate during 1976, hope to begin the new year on a brighter note tonight when they skate against the Boston Bruins at the Forum.

After winning five of their first six starts at home during October, the Kings entertained thoughts of making a strong run at Montreal for the Norris Division title. But coach Bob Pulford's club has gone sour the last two months, winning only one of its last 13 starts.

Tonight's match marks the second of five meetings with the Bruins. In their first encounter at the Forum the Kings turned 1-0 and 2-1 leads into a 4-2 defeat. The match was enlivened by two fights between Dave Schultz and the Bruins' Terry O'Reilly.

KINGS NOTES: Despite losing their last four games at home, the Kings remain two points behind second-place Pittsburgh. They've scored only 12 goals in their last five games and Marcel Dionne has accounted for five of these. Team captain Mike Murphy has gone 17 games without a goal. Boston's John Bucyk became the NHL's fourth all-time scorer when he notched his 545th goal last week, climbing past Rocket Richard. Bucyk is playing his 20th season with the Bruins and 22nd in NHL. At 41, Bucyk is the oldest active player in the league. The Kings are 4-6-1 in their last 11 home games vs. Bruins. Boston trails Buffalo's division leaders by two points. Dave Hutchison will rejoin the Kings tonight after sitting out an automatic two-game suspension for his game misconduct penalty against Detroit. After tonight the Kings embark on their longest trip of the season—seven games in 15 days starting Tuesday in St. Louis. The Kings return home to face Toronto on Jan. 18th.

U.S. collective chases Soviets

By VAL ADAMS
Knight News Service

NEW YORK — ABC, CBS and NBC are still working collectively to get TV rights to the 1980 Summer Olympic games in Moscow.

They are not writing off their chances just because of an announcement that the Satra Corp., a Soviet-American trading company, had signed a protocol with the Soviet Olympic Organizing Committee.

It's still not known just what the protocol means, but it's a good guess that Satra has not actually been awarded American TV rights to the Olympics. But the development was enough to cause the three U.S. networks to fret a bit and start moving to overcome any obstacles.

Wednesday the three networks held their first meeting to discuss ways of approaching the Department of Justice on their proposal to share rights and costs in coverage. A three-network deal with the Russians could violate antitrust laws, which is why the networks seek guidance from the Justice Department.

The network representatives met in a conference room at CBS headquarters that was supplied by Robert Wussler, president of the CBS-TV network. Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports, was there, and also executives of NBC. All networks brought along lawyers on staff and also outside legal counsel.

Since possible antitrust is a nightmare for the networks, did they violate antitrust laws in merely holding a meeting to discuss how to go about gaining collective TV rights to the Olympics without running afoul of antitrust? Apparently not. A network source said lawyers representing ABC, CBS and NBC met Tuesday in the office of Cravath, Swaine & Moore, a law firm. In the course of this meeting, they reportedly got an OK from the Justice Department for the networks to have a joint meeting, high executives and all, to talk about the Olympics.

It must be assumed that not everything was accomplished in Wednesday's meeting and there likely will be at least one more. But, in preparing to seek an antitrust waiver from the Justice Department, the networks had to present an exact plan of what they propose to do. How would TV coverage of the events, running from 12 to 14 days, be divided among ABC, CBS and NBC? Some events have more interest for the TV audience than others. Would a network that had the more interesting events pay more in sharing the TV rights than the other two networks?

And what about the Public Broadcasting Service, which represents more than 250 noncommercial public TV stations. If the three commercial networks collectively obtained rights, would they also have to make the events available to PBS? And, if they did not, could this be ruled restraint of trade?

All these questions are what ABC, CBS and NBC must answer for themselves before approaching the Justice Department. It is paramount for the networks to have a concrete plan to present to the Justice Department if they have any hope of winning approval.

Two weeks ago, network representatives who had gone to Moscow to bid competitively for TV rights suddenly asked for a suspension of negotiations, even before they got around to bidding. They were stunned by a Soviet demand of $50 million for TV production facilities to be supplied by the Russians — 40 per cent to be paid in 1977 and 60 per cent in 1978. As for a TV rights fee on top of $50 million for production facilities, there has been speculation this could run between $75 million and $100 million.

In suspending negotiations, the networks said they wanted time to review with the Justice Department "the desirability of the networks' assuming jointly the costs and risks."

Before leaving Moscow, one high executive of each of the three networks had a final meeting with Soviet authorities on Dec. 17 to discuss suspended negotiations. The networks were told then that the Russians would not deal with an American television pool. That stand may have been a ploy, a bargaining point, an effort to pressure the networks into action, but who knows for certain?

Four days later the announcement came that Satra and the Soviet Olympic Organizing Committee had a "cooperation agreement" relating to TV rights. In the weeks ahead, there may be lots of maneuvering by all concerned.

NBC announces more 'Laugh-In'

Is America ready for more "Laugh-In"? NBC thinks so, and the network has scheduled six new specials of the comedy show beginning next fall.

George Schlatter, who produced the original "Laugh-In," will be in charge of the new specials. He says he will assemble a new cast of regulars, replacing such originals as Lily Tomlin, Goldie Hawn, Henry Gibson, Arte Johnson, Gary Owens, Ruth Buzzi and Jo Anne Worley. No mention was made of whether Dan Rowan and Dick Martin will return as top bananas.

Tribute to an ailing Toots

NEW YORK — The closest friend I've ever had around Broadway is Toots Shor. He was once a nightclub bouncer and he has had many a fight, but he's having his biggest fight now.

After asking friends to get down on their knees and pray for him, he had surgery the other day at N.Y. University Hospital. It was brief. He was sent to Intensive Care for further treatment. He didn't know that Jackie Gleason was flying from Miami, hoping to see him.

He's fighting his battle in what he considers a "classy" way. "I don't want to know what I've got," he said in a roar considerably lower than the one he used to have. "I've got the best doctors!

"They examine me here stricter than I ever examined a bottle of whisky," he said. "I'm a lucky bum to get so many calls." A newspaper was spread out on his bed with Red Smith's column calling him "the world's greatest saloon keeper."

"That's what I am," he said, "the world's greatest saloon keeper. Name one other one. There's nobody left — just Toosie the pretty Jew."

I OWE Tootsie for a thousand favors. At his first "store" on W. 51st Street he introduced me to Harry Truman, then vice president, Chief Justice Earl Warren and gangster Frank Costello. "Early Curly's OK," he told them, and made it easy for me.

He invented words: "Crubbums," "intelligenerates." Just the other day he said a failing discotheque was a "a discosteck." At the intermission of a chic "Hamlet" opening, he said, "I'm the only bum here who's going back to see how it comes out.

His name's up on three restaurants. He visited the newest one for just an hour. The name Toots Shor will be up on marquees for several years to come.

Seventy-one now, he's been feisty as usual with friends Pete Rozelle, Eddie Arcaro, Frank Gifford and Jack Dempsey. He still believes as he once said during a wartime curfew, "Anybody that can't get drunk by midnight ain't tryin'."

He also said, "Whisky never hurt anybody." Friends say his serious illness wasn't brought on by drinking. Of course, the world's greatest saloon keeper is sure of it.

Pretty Leslie Easterbrook, who doesn't speak a word in "California Suite" — playing a passed-out hooker — finally gets to talk to the audience at intermission; she asks them to contribute to the Actors' Fund.

Sir Lew Grade wants George C. Scott to repeat his hilarious "Sly Fox" role on screen and star in the best-selling "Raise the Titanic!" ... At Dionysos: the Red Skeltons with Peter Falk ... Barry Manilow and his girl, Linda Allen, were at Ted Hook's crowded Backstage ... Jose Ferrer said at Gian Marino's he's starting a college tour, talking about theater.

EARL'S PEARLS: Ex-fighter Lou Nova once told why he switched to acting: "I found it was getting easier to go three acts than 15 rounds."

Music review

Mehta concert is at least in tune

By JUDITH MUSAFIA

For what was billed as a gala concert, Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic appeared Wednesday night at the Long Beach City College Auditorium. The orchestra was still full of adrenalin from a recent European tour.

The program opened with the Fourth Symphony by Brahms, which I hope they did not play in Germany. They played accurately and well in tune, but this is, of course, ground zero for a professional orchestra, and below mention in a great one. The Los Angeles Philharmonic lacks that telling cohesion of spirit, that oversoul which marks the greatest orchestras.

In the music of Brahms, dense and darkly dramatic moods alternate with a warm and expansive romanticism. Like an uncut stone, it requires careful shaping and polishing to reveal its genuine luster. In this postcard performance, the larger lines were lost, smaller ones unphrased. The acoustical balance between sections was precarious, and the dynamic range was narrow, leaning mostly on forte.

It is an indication of Debussy's monumental talent that De Falla praised "Iberia" above the works of many Spanish composers, although Debussy wrote it after having spent only a few hours in Spain. The kaleidescopic orchestration of this work allowed full exposure of every section of the orchestra. There was agile solo playing among the winds, especially the principal flute. Here, in contrast to Brahms, the music is so lush, the orchestration so stunning, that a creditable reading is sufficient for an effective performance.

The undying fame of the Bolero by Ravel must surely rest in part on the fact that by the end of the piece anyone can hum the tune. In this performance, Mehta advanced the choreographic art by conducting the three-beat measure in countless imaginative ways. He began with barely perceptible gestures to conform with the beginning pianissimo and advanced to furious lunging and slashing, leaping and contorting in every direction with the mounting crescendo. The feat was all the more amazing as he was observed chewing gum at the same time.

The concert ended with Mehta administering a triple-fortissimo coup de grace; and, if the audience was not moved to tears, it knew at least that the bull was dead and it was time to stand up and cheer.

BOSSES of five Mafia families met till 6 a.m. in Greenwich Village and decided to shy out Atlantic City gambling ... Shirley MacLaine's a possible show-opener and M.C. at the pre-inaugural gala. Producers James Lipton and Bob Wynn conferred with her in Vegas ... Irving Fields wrote a catchy tune, "Spread the Word — Good Times Are Coming," which Emory Davis' band will play at the inaugural ball ... A movie about Roseland called "Roseland" will be filmed at Roseland with Don De Natale as a starring M.C.

Country group gropes for hit

By JOE EDWARDS

NASHVILLE (AP) — After singing professionally for only three months, the Four Guys accomplished a goal others spend a lifetime seeking: The group of versatile 6-footers joined the Grand Ole Opry.

That was about 10 years ago. Now they're concentrating on recording — which the four haven't done extensively.

The group have recorded two albums and a handful of singles, but none has been distributed nationally.

"Ninety per cent of our mail asks where to buy our records," said Gary Buck, a member of the group.

"We have done well except for recording. We're going to put our efforts in the hands of Paxton and let him select the material and mold the voices and then let him take credit or blame or none of the above."

The quartet, finalists as top vocal group in the 1975 Country Music Association awards, came to Nashville from Steubenville, Ohio, on New Year's Day, 1967.

They sang on several local television shows and impressed Opry officials, who asked them to make a guest appearance on the revered country music show.

The group did, got an encore and were asked back. This continued for 33 straight encore appearances. They became Opry regulars that April without the benefit of a smash hit or national recognition.

"We still enjoy our affiliation with the Opry," Wellington said. "The Opry is still a very important part of country music. It's like home to us; once you get there, you've got 4,400 folks feeding your ego."

The group have noticed some changes at the Opry, which has been on the air 51 years — longer than any other radio show.

"In the last year or two, the Opry's made an effort to come into the mainstream of country music by signing people like Ronnie Milsap, Don Williams and Barbara Mandrell," Wellington said.

"When we joined, there was more bluegrass music and less electrified stuff. They use a full set of drums now, but I don't notice that.

"There used to be more comedy, too. And it's harder to get an encore.

The Four Guys are often compared to the Statler Brothers, the top country vocal group five straight years.

"We are the only two country music groups with four members who dress alike," Wellington said. "But about 18 hits separate us."

"We do a variety of music," Buck said. "We don't do any hard rock, but we do some Eagles things. The club is an outlet for us to do what we want — to develop new things and express our own individual talents."

But Wellington emphasizes that the group's roots are in country music:

"It's the field where our ties are. There's no such thing as security in this business, but country music is the closest thing you can get. Once you get accepted, you're like a member of the family."

Robbins gives formal party

Harold and Grace Robbins scheduled their annual black-tie New Year's Eve soiree at Gatsby's Restaurant in Beverly Hills. Some of the invitees asked if it would be OK not to come in evening clothes if they were only dropping in for a short time. They were told: "So sorry. It's a black-tie-only party."

Among those who accepted invitations are the Tony Curtises, George Burns, Susan Blakely, Mae West, Barbara Eden, Valerie Perrine, the Jack Albertsons, the Robert Stacks, the Ed McMahons and Gen. Omar Bradley.

U.S. collective chases Soviets

By VAL ADAMS
Knight News Service

NEW YORK — ABC, CBS and NBC are still working collectively to get TV rights to the 1980 Summer Olympic games in Moscow.

They are not writing off their chances just because of an announcement that the Satra Corp., a Soviet-American trading company, had signed a protocol with the Soviet Olympic Organizing Committee.

It's still not known just what the protocol means, but it's a good guess that Satra has not actually been awarded American TV rights to the Olympics. But the development was enough to cause the three U.S. networks to fret a bit and start moving to overcome any obstacles.

Wednesday the three networks held their first meeting to discuss ways of approaching the Department of Justice on their proposal to share rights and costs in coverage. A three-network deal with the Russians could violate antitrust laws, which is why the networks seek guidance from the Justice Department.

The network representatives met in a conference room at CBS headquarters that was supplied by Robert Wussler, president of the CBS-TV network. Roone Arledge, president of ABC Sports, was there, and also executives of NBC. All networks brought along lawyers on staff and also outside legal counsel.

Since possible antitrust is a nightmare for the networks, did they violate antitrust laws in merely holding a meeting to discuss how to go about gaining collective TV rights to the Olympics without running afoul of antitrust? Apparently not. A network source said lawyers representing ABC, CBS and NBC met Tuesday in the office of Cravath, Swaine & Moore, a law firm. In the course of this meeting, they reportedly got an OK from the Justice Department for the networks to have a joint meeting, high executives and all, to talk about the Olympics.

It must be assumed that not everything was accomplished in Wednesday's meeting and there likely will be at least one more. But, in preparing to seek an antitrust waiver from the Justice Department, the networks had to present an exact plan of what they propose to do. How would TV coverage of the events, running from 12 to 14 days, be divided among ABC, CBS and NBC? Some events have more interest for the TV audience than others. Would a network that had the more interesting events pay more in sharing the TV rights than the other two networks?

And what about the Public Broadcasting Service, which represents more than 250 noncommercial public TV stations. If the three commercial networks collectively obtained rights, would they also have to make the events available to PBS? And, if they did not, could this be ruled restraint of trade?

All these questions are what ABC, CBS and NBC must answer for themselves before approaching the Justice Department. It is paramount for the networks to have a concrete plan to present to the Justice Department if they have any hope of winning approval.

Two weeks ago, network representatives who had gone to Moscow to bid competitively for TV rights suddenly asked for a suspension of negotiations, even before they got around to bidding. They were stunned by a Soviet demand of $50 million for TV production facilities to be supplied by the Russians — 40 per cent to be paid in 1977 and 60 per cent in 1978. As for a TV rights fee on top of $50 million for production facilities, there has been speculation this could run between $75 million and $100 million.

In suspending negotiations, the networks said they wanted time to review with the Justice Department "the desirability of the networks' assuming jointly the costs and risks."

Before leaving Moscow, one high executive of each of the three networks had a final meeting with Soviet authorities on Dec. 17 to discuss suspended negotiations. The networks were told then that the Russians would not deal with an American television pool. That stand may have been a ploy, a bargaining point, an effort to pressure the networks into action, but who knows for certain?

Four days later the announcement came that Satra and the Soviet Olympic Organizing Committee had a "cooperation agreement" relating to TV rights. In the weeks ahead, there may be lots of maneuvering by all concerned.

NBC announces more 'Laugh-In'

Is America ready for more "Laugh-In"? NBC thinks so, and the network has scheduled six new specials of the comedy show beginning next fall.

George Schlatter, who produced the original "Laugh-In," will be in charge of the new specials. He says he will assemble a new cast of regulars, replacing such originals as Lily Tomlin, Goldie Hawn, Henry Gibson, Arte Johnson, Gary Owens, Ruth Buzzi and Jo Anne Worley. No mention was made of whether Dan Rowan and Dick Martin will return as top bananas.

H. WERNER BUCK:

Since 1946, when he and the late Mel R. Morrison teamed to present the first Sportsmen's Show at old Gilmore Field, Buck's name has been synonymous with Sportsmen's, Vacation, Travel and Outdoor Vehicle Shows. Not only in Los Angeles, but in Anaheim, Oakland, San Diego, New York, Chicago and Honolulu as well.

He has operated continuously since the successful 1946 show and has been a leader in the field, foreseeing many of the recreation and leisure trends that have developed.

He was one of the first to recognize the potential in the recreational vehicle field and many a successful RV manufacturer or dealer got his start when he first displayed his products at Buck's shows.

Buck is looking forward just as eagerly to his 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center as he was to that first show more than 30 years ago. His enthusiasm for presenting the bes tand newest in the outdoor field has never wanted.

As usual, he is headlining his Anaheim show with top entertainment. The famed Cypress Gardens Water Ski Show, Martin Denny and his world-famous Hawaiian music, a Hawaiian stage show, blowgun expert Pat Shawn, and the Sound Effects Man, Greg Shideler are all top acts and should be crowd-pleasers.

Visitors to the show will see one of the greatest indoor collections of recreational vehicles of all types ever assembled. Travel exhibits of states from Florida to Alaska, from resort areas you have only dreamed about, and Canada will be there to provide vacation ideas. Outstanding travel films will be shown continuously, and millions of dollars worth of fishing tackle and camping equipment will be displayed.

Buck is highly respected by other show producers who often come to his for advice on some particular problem. He is regarded as a top crowd control expert and was chosen by U.S. exhibitors to tour Europe and study crowd control and display methods.

He has handled crowd control at many auditoriums and stadiums, including the Coliseum. He also was in charge of operations at the 1960 Democrat National convention in Los Angeles when John F. Kennedy was nominated.

Historic park

Located on the grounds of Indian Grinding Rock State Historic Park in northern California is a large granite rock once used by the Miwok Indians of the area as a community acorn grinding center. The rock is reported by the National Automobile Club to be pocked with grinding holes.

Nearby in the park are interpretive exhibits explaining how the grinding was accomplished and the importance of the acorn to the Indians' existence.

SOUNDS OF THE SOUTH SEAS

Few persons have captured the flavor of the music of the Islands as well as Martin Denny, "the music man of Polynesia." His million-record seller, "Quiet Village," is known and identified with him the world over.

Denny and his unique style of music are as much a part of Hawaii as Diamond Head and Waikiki Beach. His two decades of performing the songs of Hawaii and the South Seas have brought a sense of feeling of polynesia to millions of people in all parts of the world. His 36 Liberty record LP's attest to his popularity.

He and his orchestra will be one of the headline attractions at H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Center.

Entertainment is the frosting on the cake at the Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show. Visitors there will see the West's largest indoor display of recreational vehicles of all types, travel exhibits of states from Florida to Alaska and many vacation spots, continuous showing of the best in travel films, a display of millions of dollars worth of fishing tackle and camping gear plus fishing clinics.

Denny "paid his dues" in the music business before his big break came in 1958 with the hit single, "Quiet Village." Since that time he has sold over $4,000,000 worth of records, performed at nearly 50 hotels and nightclubs from New York and Alaska to Florida, been on a dozen TV variety shows — including Johnny Carson, Dinah Shore and Steve Allen, recorded commercials and played colleges, military bases and made personal concert appearances almost too numerous to list.

Denny came to the Pacific in the early 1950's. From the moment he landed in Hawaii he knew the Islands were to be his home, literally and musically.

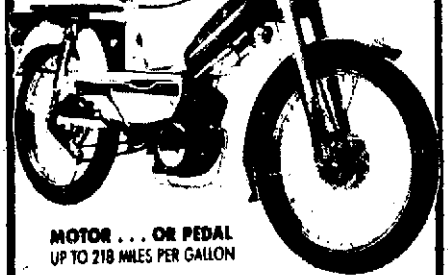

Now the Martin Denny Sound is known throughout the world. Songs such as "A Taste of Honey" and "Quiet Village" are familiar to millions.

If you want to know where the hot surfer van action is these days, you should take a look at the Bill Barry VW store at 3940 Cherry Ave. in Long Beach.

Jeff Baker, general manager of the agency, says his is one of the most outstanding selections in Southern California, and if there isn't an answer for everyone looking for a special surfer van interior, then it probably doesn't exist.

"These are all 77 vans," says Baker, who says he anticipates the sale of 60 vans a month in the forthcoming year. "They are loaded with the many extras hard to find in the surfer van market."

Baker says he means like rich paneling, heavy turf carpeting, superscoops, wet bars, sofas, etc., including the custom paint jobs.

The vans are on both Dodge and Chevrolet chassis, with 360 and 318 Dodge engines and the 350 for Chevrolet.

"Our biggest and best buy right now, though," says Baker, "is in VW Rabbits. We're loaded with them, and you can drive off in a new Rabbit, which the E.P.A. says can get you 41 miles to the gallon the highway and 31 in town, for nothing down, with financing for 48 months if your credit is good."

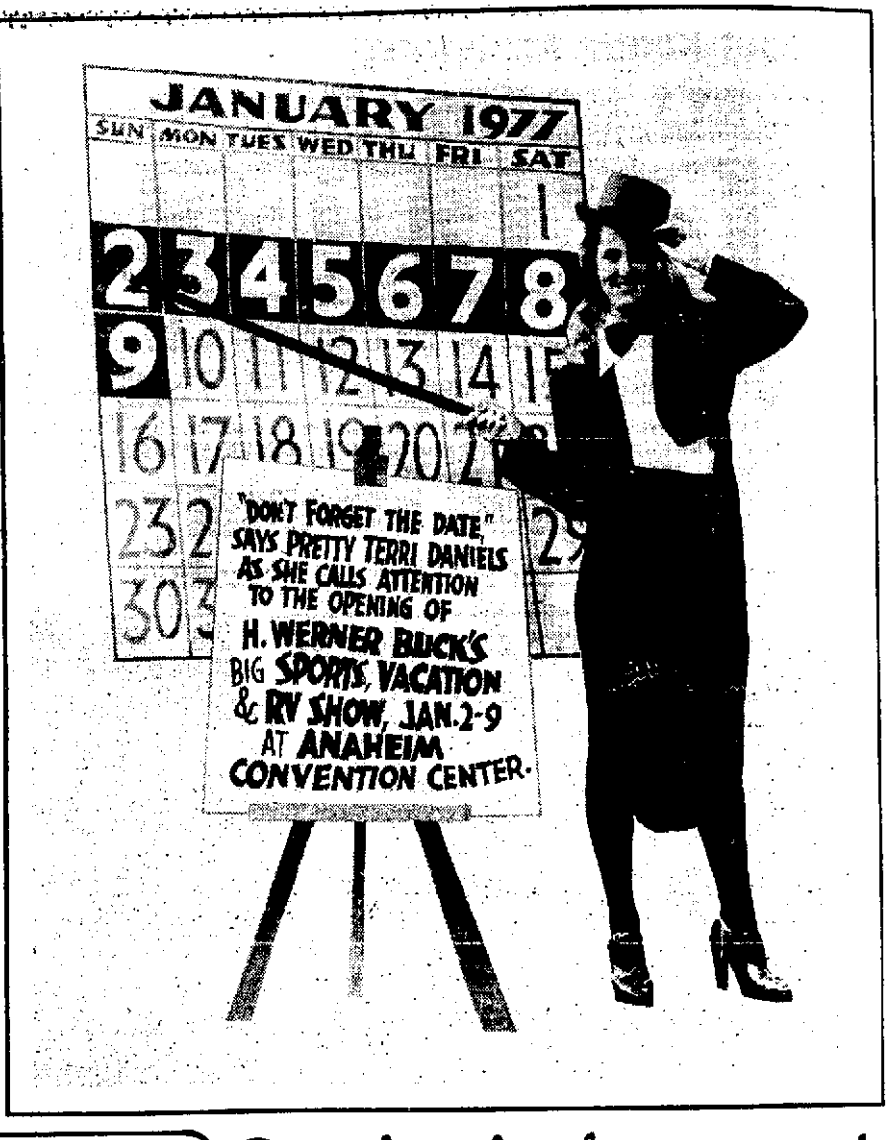

And if you'd like to look over the 77 Bugs, Baker says he has the first in Southern California. "Far out," is the way he describes the new Bug, what with its sunburst paint job and sun roof.

Baker said he has 15 used Bugs in stock, too, with everything from sticks to automatics that he has to move for the new 77 Bug inventory.

Baker is an enterprising, young man who is determined to make the world beautiful for you at a prices that's right. He'll even buy your used car from you, or if you bring your new car or van in for service, he'll give you a loan car without charge.

"I've been in the business since I was 17 years old," says Baker, "and I believe in treating the public like I expect to be treated.

Camping tips from expert

With an eye on their pocketbooks, more and more families are turning to camping vacations.

And, whether a family camps out in a tent, camper or trailer, this outdoor life appeals to all ages, but it also can present some health and safety problems not normally associated with more antiseptic surroundings, says the American Automobile Association.

Since 1946, when he and the late Mel R. Morrison teamed to present the first Sportsmen's Show at old Gilmore Field, Buck's name has been synonymous with Sportsmen's, Vacation, Travel and Outdoor Vehicle Shows. Not only in Los Angeles, but in Anaheim, Oakland, San Diego, New York, Chicago and Honolulu as well.

He has operated continuously since the successful 1946 show and has been a leader in the field, foreseeing many of the recreation and leisure trends that have developed.

He was one of the first to recognize the potential in the recreational vehicle field and many a successful RV manufacturer or dealer got his start when he first displayed his products at Buck's shows.

Buck is looking forward just as eagerly to his 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center as he was to that first show more than 30 years ago. His enthusiasm for presenting the bes tand newest in the outdoor field has never wanted.

As usual, he is headlining his Anaheim show with top entertainment. The famed Cypress Gardens Water Ski Show, Martin Denny and his world-famous Hawaiian music, a Hawaiian stage show, blowgun expert Pat Shawn, and the Sound Effects Man, Greg Shideler are all top acts and should be crowd-pleasers.

Visitors to the show will see one of the greatest indoor collections of recreational vehicles of all types ever assembled. Travel exhibits of states from Florida to Alaska, from resort areas you have only dreamed about, and Canada will be there to provide vacation ideas. Outstanding travel films will be shown continuously, and millions of dollars worth of fishing tackle and camping equipment will be displayed.

Buck is highly respected by other show producers who often come to his for advice on some particular problem. He is regarded as a top crowd control expert and was chosen by U.S. exhibitors to tour Europe and study crowd control and display methods.

He has handled crowd control at many auditoriums and stadiums, including the Coliseum. He also was in charge of operations at the 1960 Democrat National convention in Los Angeles when John F. Kennedy was nominated.

Historic park

Located on the grounds of Indian Grinding Rock State Historic Park in northern California is a large granite rock once used by the Miwok Indians of the area as a community acorn grinding center. The rock is reported by the National Automobile Club to be pocked with grinding holes.

Nearby in the park are interpretive exhibits explaining how the grinding was accomplished and the importance of the acorn to the Indians' existence.

SOUNDS OF THE SOUTH SEAS

Martin Denny to highlight entertainment

Few persons have captured the flavor of the music of the Islands as well as Martin Denny, "the music man of Polynesia." His million-record seller, "Quiet Village," is known and identified with him the world over.

Denny and his unique style of music are as much a part of Hawaii as Diamond Head and Waikiki Beach. His two decades of performing the songs of Hawaii and the South Seas have brought a sense of feeling of polynesia to millions of people in all parts of the world. His 36 Liberty record LP's attest to his popularity.

He and his orchestra will be one of the headline attractions at H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Center.

Entertainment is the frosting on the cake at the Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show. Visitors there will see the West's largest indoor display of recreational vehicles of all types, travel exhibits of states from Florida to Alaska and many vacation spots, continuous showing of the best in travel films, a display of millions of dollars worth of fishing tackle and camping gear plus fishing clinics.

Denny "paid his dues" in the music business before his big break came in 1958 with the hit single, "Quiet Village." Since that time he has sold over $4,000,000 worth of records, performed at nearly 50 hotels and nightclubs from New York and Alaska to Florida, been on a dozen TV variety shows — including Johnny Carson, Dinah Shore and Steve Allen, recorded commercials and played colleges, military bases and made personal concert appearances almost too numerous to list.

Denny came to the Pacific in the early 1950's. From the moment he landed in Hawaii he knew the Islands were to be his home, literally and musically.

Now the Martin Denny Sound is known throughout the world. Songs such as "A Taste of Honey" and "Quiet Village" are familiar to millions.

Elk Grove

The park is reported by the National Automobile Club to contain picnicking facilities, baseball fields, a swimming pool and bathhouse, a three-acre lake and pirate island, play apparatus, and a large pavilion for reserved group activities.

Visitors to the park can rent paddleboats and use biking and hiking trails. A refreshment stand is also available.

Fishermen will be hooked on angler displays at show

Imagine walking into a huge exhibit hall and finding a fisherman's paradise — seeing one exhibit after another with tackle from every big name manufacturer in the country, lures, bait and tackle boxes, salt water jigs, special sinkers, fishing boats of all types, knot typers, fishing magazines and guides who can tell of fishing tours to remote, uncrowded streams.

All these booths will be expert anglers who will talk about fishing and equipment all day long if the visitor wishes. These are old pros who can pass on tips learned through years of fishing. There will also be clinics to help the angler improve his ability.

No fisherman will want to miss H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Southern California Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center. This show offers probably the greatest collection of fishing gear ever seen in one location, plus master fishermen to demonstrate it.

Among the big brand name tackle firms represented will be Fenwick, Bomber Bait Co., Lou J. Eppinger Mfg. Co., Kencor Sports, Inc., Lowrance Electronics, Inc., Rec Tack of America, Vicheck Plastics Co., Gadget Knot Tyers, Rudy Masson Knot Tyers, Silverball Sinkers, Straggler Jigs, Trav-L-Bob Lures, Fin & Feather Mfg. Co. and many others.

On hand to promote fishing tours will be representatives from Teton Expeditions, Inc., Big Sky Fishing Tours, Butterfield Country and Vail Lake and others. Queen's Wharf Sportfishing, which offers salt water fishing, will be represented also. Few fishermen will be able to resist a trip to the back country after talking to these guides and listening to their descriptions of the big ones that DODN'T get away.

The Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show appeals to a lot of different interests, but probably no one enjoys it more than the fisherman. He is catered to like at no other time — whatever fishing fancies he ever dreamed of, he will find here.

Elephant boy, high wire man, adagio dancer, stuntman, pitchman, circus barker, world traveler, inventor, manufacturer and one of the few completely happy men you'll ever meet.

That's Rudy Masson, designer of a snell tyer, lure tyer and clipper-hook retriever, devices which every fully equipped fisherman feels he must have.

Rudy enjoys the shows and traveling, though. He has been doing it most of his life. When he was 10, he ran away from his home in Biarritz, France, to join the circus. His first job was looking after the elephants. Then he worked up to a high wire act. As was the custom with European circuses, he was also a barker for the shows.

Masson came to America with Ringling Bros. Circus. He continued in circus work for a few years, then went into musical comedy, working with Eddie Cantor and performing his speciality — adagio dancing.

He then moved into movies, doing stunt work and doubling for Tony Curtis, Robert Taylor and Clark Gable. A broken back ended his stunt work. He has become an inveterate fisherman while working in movies and invented his snell tyer after finding it difficult to tie on hooks during cold weather in the mountains.

He knew of the demand for his tyers from his studio friends. He started his business with $25. (It now runs into thousands). He began by demonstrating and selling them wherever he could get space in stores.

That's still the way he operates, selling them individually at shows and fairs. He doesn't want a lot of employees and have to worry about distribution or firms going out of business. He had to turn down a firm that wanted 300,000 of items annually.

Service center offers plenty of real service

After you buy your motorhome, mini-motorhome or other recreation vehicle, where will you get it serviced with those "little things" occur and stop you from getting full use of it?

Mike Thompson R. V. Center, just off the Santa Ana Freeway at the Valley View Ave. off-ramp, has the answer for you, whether you purchase your vehicle from them or not.

Mike Thompson, an oldtimer in the recreation vehicle business, has one of the most complete and thorough service departments in the Southland.

As an example, if you have one of the big motorhomes, and if you have wondered where you could find a hoist for work beneath it, your worry is solved with Mike Thompson who has installed a hoist that will lift one of the gigantic 35-ft. jobs.

Danny Engle heads up the service department, and it would be his pleasure to acquaint you with his company's many services.

For instance, say you have a motorhome that has an interior in need of replacement, including cabinetry carpetry and drapes. Mike Thompson's service center can handle it professionally, and your motorhome will look like a new one.

"Collision damages are our specialty," says Mike Thompson. "We can repair any kind of a service, whether it is fiberglass, aluminum or plywood."

"We are the price breakers in the industry," says Thompson. "We try to give our customers the best of all prices, and we invite them to shop, but they won't beat our prices."

If you're in the market for a mini-motorhome, Thompson's line includes the Fireball, which will be displayed at the sports show at Anaheim Convention Center.

"We intend to make the Fireball the center of attention at the show," says Thompson. "By that, we mean that we will sell this outstanding mini-motorhome at a price you won't believe."

Besides the Fireball, you will see Thompson's other "price-breaking" motorhomes, including the Winnebago, Pace Arrow, Establishment and Tioga, at his sales center at 13940 E. Firestone Blvd.

"Our center is a little difficult to find," says Thompson, "but our customers tell us that it was worth the time it takes to drive into our facility, some saying they saved hundreds of dollars."

Fishermen will be hooked on angler displays at show

Imagine walking into a huge exhibit hall and finding a fisherman's paradise — seeing one exhibit after another with tackle from every big name manufacturer in the country, lures, bait and tackle boxes, salt water jigs, special sinkers, fishing boats of all types, knot typers, fishing magazines and guides who can tell of fishing tours to remote, uncrowded streams.

All these booths will be expert anglers who will talk about fishing and equipment all day long if the visitor wishes. These are old pros who can pass on tips learned through years of fishing. There will also be clinics to help the angler improve his ability.

No fisherman will want to miss H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Southern California Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center. This show offers probably the greatest collection of fishing gear ever seen in one location, plus master fishermen to demonstrate it.

Among the big brand name tackle firms represented will be Fenwick, Bomber Bait Co., Lou J. Eppinger Mfg. Co., Kencor Sports, Inc., Lowrance Electronics, Inc., Rec Tack of America, Vicheck Plastics Co., Gadget Knot Tyers, Rudy Masson Knot Tyers, Silverball Sinkers, Straggler Jigs, Trav-L-Bob Lures, Fin & Feather Mfg. Co. and many others.

On hand to promote fishing tours will be representatives from Teton Expeditions, Inc., Big Sky Fishing Tours, Butterfield Country and Vail Lake and others. Queen's Wharf Sportfishing, which offers salt water fishing, will be represented also. Few fishermen will be able to resist a trip to the back country after talking to these guides and listening to their descriptions of the big ones that DODN'T get away.

The Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show appeals to a lot of different interests, but probably no one enjoys it more than the fisherman. He is catered to like at no other time — whatever fishing fancies he ever dreamed of, he will find here.

Anniversary party planned in 1978

How about a couple gentlemen who will spend their 40th anniversary in the automotive business in 1978?

The least you can say is that they have tenacity and most certainly they have made a lot of friends since they started in 1938.

They are, of course, W. J. Holmes and John H. Van Dyke, who have been associated for the past 15 years and now have Verne-holmes Dodge in Long Beach, an agency that has been at the same location now since 1931.

Located at 35th Street and Atlantic Boulevard, in the California Heights-Bixby area of Long Beach, Holmes says he and Van Dyke still have customers coming to them for new cars after buying 10 or more from them in the past years.

Of course, the Verne-Holmes Dodge dealership has Dodge cars, too, comprising the Colt, Aspen, Monaco and Charger.

"Service means everything to the customer and to us as well," says Holmes. "We invest heavily in service and repair equipment to keep our customers' running far longer than what they generally expect."

By that, Holmes proves a point. The Verne-Holmes agency recently purchased an electronic, computerized machine called Auto Sense at a cost of $15,000.

What does this machine do?

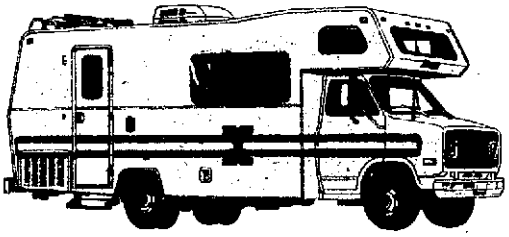

"It will give you a complete computerized readout on your electrical system," says Holmes.

Actually, it's more than that. Auto Sense will be specific. Anything that is wrong that is wrong electrically — and this can be a multitude of wrongs — with your car, the computer will find it and provide you with a print-out as to what it is and where it is.

It really saves money for the car owner. For an example, if there is a bad plug, a distributor problem, a bad wire, alternator, or there is a short in your lights, air conditioner or heater, the machine will find it.

It eliminates the guesswork and reduces labor and parts costs by immediately finding the trouble, and it's usually the eletrical system, in one way or another.

Tyer designer scheduled for show

Elephant boy, high wire man, adagio dancer, stuntman, pitchman, circus barker, world traveler, inventor, manufacturer and one of the few completely happy men you'll ever meet.

That's Rudy Masson, designer of a snell typer, lure tyer and clipper-hook retriever, devices which every fully equipped fisherman feels he must have.

Rudy enjoys the shows and traveling, though. He has been doing it most of his life. When he was 10, he ran away from his home in Biarritz, France, to join the circus. His first job was looking after the elephants. Then he worked up to a high wire act. As was the custom with European circuses, he was also a barker for the shows.

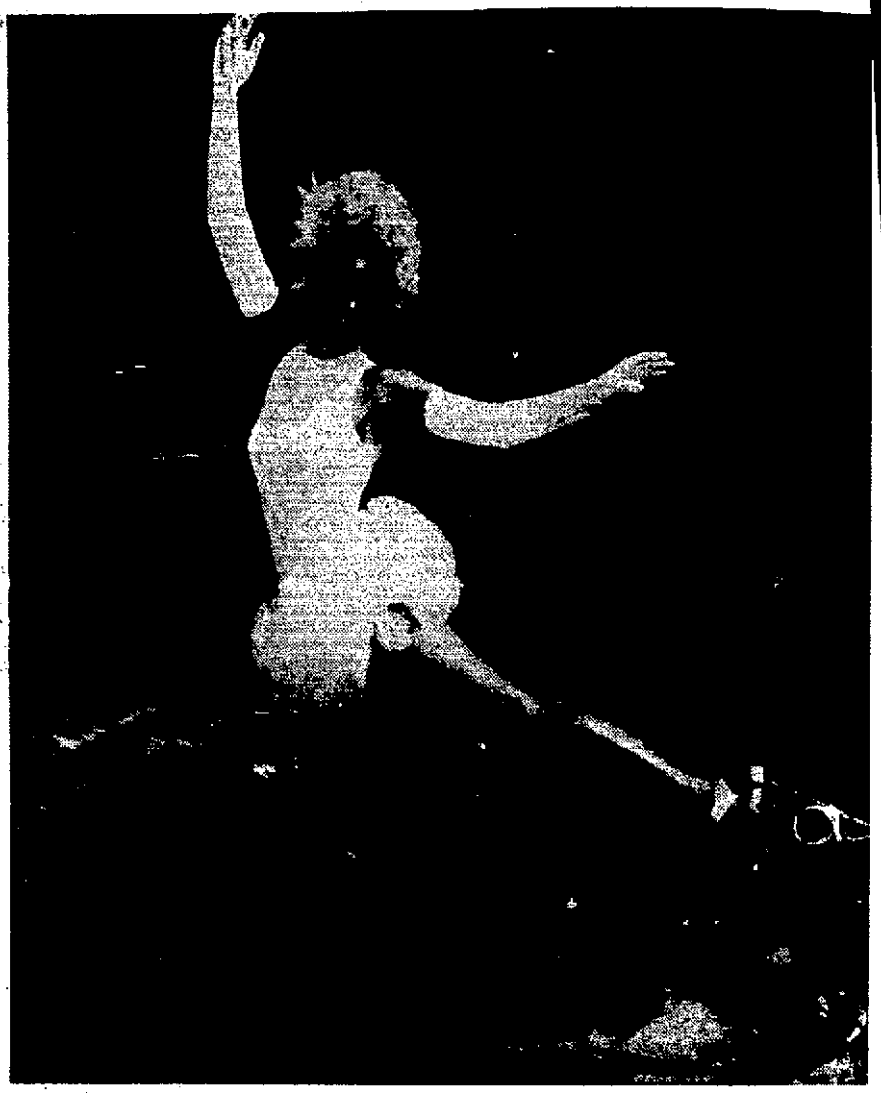

Masson came to America with Ringling Bros. Circus. He continued in circus work for a few years, then went into musical comedy, working with Eddie Cantor and performing his specialty — adagio dancing.

He then moved into movies, doing stunt work and doubling for Tony Curtis, Robert Taylor and Clark Gable. A broken back ended his stunt work. He has become an inveterate fisherman while working in movies and invented his snell tyer after finding it difficult to tie on hooks during cold weather in the mountains.

He knew of the demand for his tyers from his studio friends. He started his business with $25. (It now runs into thousands). He began by demonstrating and selling them wherever he could get space in stores.

That's still the way he operates, selling them individually at shows and fairs. He doesn't want a lot of employees and have to worry about distribution or firms going out of business. He had to turn down a firm that wanted 300,000 of items annually.

This skier doesn't need snow

What is a recreational vehicle?

"Recreational vehicle" seems to be a broad term that covers a lot of territory, and we do mean just that. All over the U.S. you see RV's — vans, campers, trailers, mini motor homes, luxury motor homes, 4-wheelers and all their variations. America is on the move and it is usually in a RV.

Purists will argue what is a recreational vehicle. Some will say that vans and small truck campers are not true RV's, others question the off-road buggies as real RV's. What does it matter? It is a general term that has a lot of support and acceptance. It really counts when politicians are considering vehicle regulation and remember the number of RV owners.

This has long been one of the top RV expositions in the nation, primarily back of Buck's pioneering work in bringing recreational vehicles to the public's attention. He was one of the first to recognize the potential of the fun machines.

It has always been a favorite show for introducing new RV ideas. Many a firm now doing a multi-million dollar a year business had its start at the Buck Show. All the major and several new companies will have exhibits at the Anaheim show.

The line-up of exhibitors reads like a Who's Who of the RV industry. Probably the brand names are more familiar than the manufacturers — and more interesting:

Cardinal, Titan, Field & Stream, Silver Streak, Terry, Jeep, Apollo, Alfa, Jamboree, El Dorado, Roll-A-Long, Commander, Fireball, Fleet Aire, Wilderness, Wild Country, Four Winds, Gold Coast, Gypsy, Coleman, Landau, Apache, Vogue, Dreamer, Golden Nuggets, Chinook, Midas, G.M.C., Sportscoach, Tioga, Winnebago, Pace Arrow, Establishment, Prowler, Komfort, Vacationeer, Jayco, Me Too, Ardon, Taurus, Travco and others.

These are the names you see on the roads and in the campgrounds of America and these are the RV's you'll see at the Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center.

Map out some travel ideas

Interested in an expedition on Canada's Yukon River? How about a river trip down the rapids of the Colorado? Maybe fishing is your game — ever consider a fishing tour in the Yellowstone Park area? What about backpacking in the High Sierras? Maybe something a little more leisurely would suit your tastes — such as houseboating on Lake Shasta at Bridge Bay.

Or perhaps you just want to drive your recreational vehicle around the U.S., now that the Bicentennial throngs have moved on. Texas, now that's a spot that can give you the flavor of the Old West — and we do mean flavor, as in steaks. It's Oklahoma, if you want to see the Cowboy Hall of Fame.

If mountains are your thing, you can't top Colorado and the Pacific Northwest. How about Canada — a trip to Calgary is a real experience. For different scenic beauty, the bluegrass country of Kentucky is your bet. Florida has an appeal all its own and more variety than you can imagine.

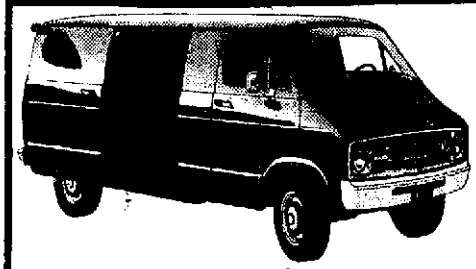

For shorter trips there is more to see in California, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona than can ever be covered — mountains, lakes, rivers, resorts, marinas, whatever your interests, they can be found within easy driving distance.

Where else would you expect to find information about all these places except at H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center? This mammoth exposition is the ideal spot to find out all you want to know about travel and facilities.

Representatives of states from Florida to Alaska, resort areas and locations with special appeal will have exhibits at the show and can provide lots of information. They can supply business data, also.

Now is the time to plan for those junkets in the spring and summer and the Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show in Anaheim Convention Center Jan. 2-9 is the place to do it.

Bud Jellerson, president of Amerec, has lined up a $2 million inventory, with 64 different models and floorplans, 19 different makes and 11 different sizes.

Among those his firm offers are the Pace Arrow, Brougham, Beaver, Four Star, Tioga, Harvest, Midas and Roll-A-Long, plus Diplomat II, Executive, Midland, Winnebago, Condor, Commander and Establishment.

Camping is many things

Camping is all things to all people. It depends on the view of the person enjoying it. To some, it means backpacking to a remote spot in the mountains; to others, it means tents beside a lake with good fishing; and to still others, camping means staying in a luxurious motor home in a clean campground with full facilities.

Who's to say what is best? It's all a matter of likes and dislikes. Camping is what a person wants it to be. It all comes down to a break in normal routine, getting away from everyday duties. It can be just some new, refreshing experience.

Of course, there is only one place to get the complete camping picture — H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center.

It's all there — camping equipment exhibits, information on campgrounds, ideas and literature galore on camp areas not usually thought of and hundreds of recreational vehicles of every type, from off-road buggies to 35-foot motor homes.

Having exhibits at the show will be such equipment specialists as Back Country Mountain Sports, High & Light, J.C. Penney Co., and Hatch-Pack Products.

On hand to provide campground and camping information will be representatives from American Sporstman's Club, California Travel Parks Assn., Cal-KOA, Crazy Horse Campgrounds, Eastern High Sierra Packers Assn. and Inyo-Mono Counties, High Sierra Pack Station and Vermilion Valley Resort and others.

Camping requires some kind of vehicle, if nothing else but to get out of the metropolitan area. No where else will you find such a complete choice as will be at Werner Buck's show. This is THE exposition for nearly all the major and new RV manufacturers in the nation.

This is the show famous for its innovative RV ideas. Many a million-dollar business got its start here by introducing new products. Veteran campers make it a rule to visit the Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show just to check new ideas and pick up information.

Anniversary party planned in 1978

How about a couple gentlemen who will spend their 40th anniversary in the automotive business in 1978?

The least you can say is that they have tenacity and most certainly they have made a lot of friends since they started in 1938.

They are, of course, W. J. Holmes and John H. Van Dyke, who have been associated for the past 15 years and now have Verne-holmes Dodge in Long Beach, an agency that has been at the same location now since 1931.

Located at 35th Street and Atlantic Boulevard, in the California Heights-Bixby area of Long Beach, Holmes says he and Van Dyke still have customers coming to them for new cars after buying 10 or more from them in the past years.

Holmes and Van Dyke feature many hard-to-get automotive items such as van conversions, with an inventory of 35 vans on hand, and 4-wheeldrive pickups and vans.

Of course, the Verne-Holmes Dodge dealership has Dodge cars, too, comprising the Colt, Aspen, Monaco and Charger.

"Service means everything to the customer and to us as well," says Holmes. "We invest heavily in service and repair equipment to keep our customers' running far longer than what they generally expect."

By that, Holmes proves a point. The Verne-Holmes agency recently purchased an electronic, computerized machine called Auto Sense at a cost of $15,000.

What does this machine do?

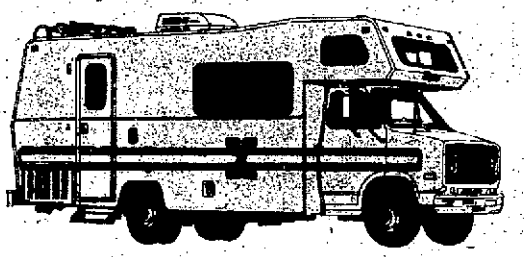

"It will give you a complete computerized readout on your electrical system," says Holmes.

Actually, it's more than that. Auto Sense will be specific. Anything that is wrong that is wrong electrically — and this can be a multitude of wrongs — with your car, the computer will find it and provide you with a print-out as to what it is and where it is.

It really saves money for the car owner. For an example, if there is a bad plug, a distributor problem, a bad wire, alternator, or there is a short in your lights, air conditioner or heater, the machine will find it.

It eliminates the guesswork and reduces labor and parts costs by immediately finding the trouble, and it's usually the eletrical system, in one way or another.

Serene surroundings of Big Bear

(excerpted from Big Bear Valley Life)

Big Bear Valley offers a beautiful lake, quiet forested trails and clean air. At an elevation of 7,000 feet, the area is bordered by the San Bernardino National Forest. It is Southern California's largest lake and mountain resort, only two hours by freeway from Los Angeles or Orange County.

Ample facilities for the traveler are available in this alpine community with modern motels, condominiums and rustic cabins. There are also more than six public forestry campgrounds and seven private recreational campgrounds in the valley. While staying in the area visitors will find a vast number of summer and winter activities. Whether indoor or outdoor, summer or winter, these recreational activities should prpvide something for everyone.

Several scenic sky chairlift rides, good restaurants, a zoo, and even a solar observatory highlight the blue skies and majestic mountains of the are. Ski resorts (with excellent skow-making capabilities), tobogganing, ice skating, tube sliding, snowmobiles, snow play and of course the after-skiing activities service the winter sports enthusiasts. Throughout the summer many fishermen line the shores or launch their boats in hopes of landing a few of the thousands of pounds of rainbow trout which are planted in the lake each year.

Big Bear Lake has scheduled special events for every season. The Oktoberfest celebration, Chirstmas Winterfest, the Fourth of July celebration and Old Miners' Days prpvide o4ganized festivites that can be enjoyed by tourists and permanent residents alike.

There are three complete business communities in the valley. Big zbear Lake, on the south shore, has a year-round theater, radio station, banks, medical centers, shopping center, schools and churches.

The new Bear Valley Community Hospital is a 29-bed facility which offers 24-hour emergency service. It is a multi-million-dollar addition to the area.

Picturesque boutiques and specialty shops sline the streets if the village. Some merchants have remodled in Alpine and Western themes lending a quaintness to the toen.

Fawnskin, on the North Shore, sports campgrounds, a shopping center, public boat ramp and boat landings. This lakeside community bi popular with the fishing set.

Big Bear City, to the east of the lake, has the only airport in the mountain area. It is a two-million-dollar facility with an improved, surfaced runway for private planes. The airport is well maintained and well plowed in the winter. Official weather reports are given three times daily, and airport conditions are always available from flight service.

Big Bear City is mainly a residential community and its growth and expansion are ever-increasing. The city supports its own market, shops, amusement park, playground and Convention Center.

A beautiful lake, permanent residential communities, recreational yearround activieies combine to make the Big Bear Valley a land for all seasons.

Ever thought about renting a vacation RV?

"Renting a vacation trailer from us must be one of your more pleasant experiences of the year or we're not satisfied. It's just as big a deal to us as selling a home is to a real estate salesperson.

"Our trailer is no less your home when you are camping in it than is your permanent residence. We go through our units with the utmost of care cleaning and polishing the floor, stove, sink, ice box, tables, cabinets and exterior. In addition we vacuum, air-out and sanitize the mattresses.

Natural beauty

Within the cool, mysterious aura of the caverns, visitors are surrounded by stalactites, stalagmites, stone curtains, and cave coral.

What is a recreational vehicle?

"Recreational vehicle" seems to be a broad term that covers a lot of territory, and we do mean just that. All over the U.S. you see RV's — vans, campers, trailers, mini motor homes, luxury motor homes, 4-wheelers and all their variations. America is on the move and it is usually in a RV.

Purists will argue what is a recreational vehicle. Some will say that vans and small truck campers are not true RV's, others question the off-road buggies as real RV's. What does it matter? It is a general term that has a lot of support and acceptance. It really counts when politicians are considering vehicle regulation and remember the number of RV owners.

This has long been one of the top RV expositions in the nation, primarily back of Buck's pioneering work in bringing recreational vehicles to the public's attention. He was one of the first to recognize the potential of the fun machines.

It has always been a favorite show for introducing new RV ideas. Many a firm now doing a multi-million dollar a year business had its start at the Buck Show. All the major and several new companies will have exhibits at the Anaheim show.

The line-up of exhibitors reads like a Who's Who of the RV industry. Probably the brand names are more familiar than the manufacturers — and more interesting:

Cardinal, Titan, Field & Stream, Silver Streak, Terry, Jeep, Apollo, Alfa, Jamboree, El Dorado, Roll-A-Long, Commander, Fireball, Fleet Aire, Wilderness, Wild Country, Four Winds, Gold Coast, Gypsy, Coleman, Landau, Apache, Vogue, Dreamer, Golden Nuggets, Chinook, Midas, G.M.C., Sportscoach, Tioga, Winnebago, Pace Arrow, Establishment, Prowler, Komfort, Vacationeer, Jayco, Me Too, Ardon, Taurus, Travco and others.

These are the names you see on the roads and in the campgrounds of America and these are the RV's you'll see at the Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center.

Map out some travel ideas

Interested in an expedition on Canada's Yukon River? How about a river trip down the rapids of the Colorado? Maybe fishing is your game — ever consider a fishing tour in the Yellowstone Park area? What about backpacking in the High Sierras? Maybe something a little more leisurely would suit your tastes — such as houseboating on Lake Shasta at Bridge Bay.

Or perhaps you just want to drive your recreational vehicle around the U.S., now that the Bicentennial throngs have moved on. Texas, now that's a spot that can give you the flavor of the Old West — and we do mean flavor, as in steaks. It's Oklahoma, if you want to see the Cowboy Hall of Fame.

If mountains are your thing, you can't top Colorado and the Pacific Northwest. How about Canada — a trip to Calgary is a real experience. For different scenic beauty, the bluegrass country of Kentucky is your bet. Florida has an appeal all its own and more variety than you can imagine.

For shorter trips there is more to see in California, Oregon, Nevada and Arizona than can ever be covered — mountains, lakes, rivers, resorts, marinas, whatever your interests, they can be found within easy driving distance.

Where else would you expect to find information about all these places except at H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center? This mammoth exposition is the ideal spot to find out all you want to know about travel and facilities.

Representatives of states from Florida to Alaska, resort areas and locations with special appeal will have exhibits at the show and can provide lots of information. They can supply business data, also.

Now is the time to plan for those junkets in the spring and summer and the Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show in Anaheim Convention Center Jan. 2-9 is the place to do it.

California as the Spanish found it

In this age of bustling cities and suburban developments, it is almost impossible to imagine how California looked to the Spanish explorers who landed here two hundred years ago. But thanks to Montana de Oro State Park, we don't have to imagine, according to the National Automobile Club, for here the California coast remains untouched.

Located just west of San Luis Obispo, the park includes 7,000 acres of small beaches, secluded coves, and mountain ridges. It makes a beautiful and unusual picnic spot, but many visitors prefer to savor its peacefulness at greater length, camping in a valley set back from the ocean where they can watch the fog roll in on summer mornings and evenings.

Calling good buddy

State park

Castle Rock State Park, in the Santa Cruz Mountains of northern California, delights rock-climbers of all abilities with the sandstone outcropping from which the park gets its name. And for nonclimbers picnicking nearby, the climbers put on a delightful show as they try out different techniques of ascent and descent.

This unusual park, according to the National Automobile Club, also offers riding trails that lead to three other state parks. And for hikers the natural backdrop ranges from sunny chaparral to cool redwood forests.

Shopping for a motorhome or a mini-motorhome?

Bud Jellerson, president of Amerec, has lined up a $2 million inventory, with 64 different models and floorplans, 19 different makes and 11 different sizes.

Among those his firm offers are the Pace Arrow, Brougham, Beaver, Four Star, Tioga, Harvest, Midas and Roll-A-Long, plus Diplomat II, Executive, Midland, Winnebago, Condor, Commander and Establishment.

Amerec, located at the Carson St. off-ramp form the San Diego Freeway in the City of Carson, is almost a landmark, certainly a historical one to the recreation vehicle industry.

Camping is many things

Camping is all things to all people. It depends on the view of the person enjoying it. To some, it means backpacking to a remote spot in the mountains; to others, it means tents beside a lake with good fishing; and to still others, camping means staying in a luxurious motor home in a clean campground with full facilities.

Who's to say what is best? It's all a matter of likes and dislikes. Camping is what a person wants it to be. It all comes down to a break in normal routine, getting away from everyday duties. It can be just some new, refreshing experience.

Of course, there is only one place to get the complete camping picture — H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center.

It's all there — camping equipment exhibits, information on campgrounds, ideas and literature galore on camp areas not usually thought of and hundreds of recreational vehicles of every type, from off-road buggies to 35-foot motor homes.

Having exhibits at the show will be such equipment specialists as Back Country Mountain Sports, High & Light, J.C. Penney Co., and Hatch-Pack Products.

On hand to provide campground and camping information will be representatives from American Sporstman's Club, California Travel Parks Assn., Cal-KOA, Crazy Horse Campgrounds, Eastern High Sierra Packers Assn. and Inyo-Mono Counties, High Sierra Pack Station and Vermilion Valley Resort and others.

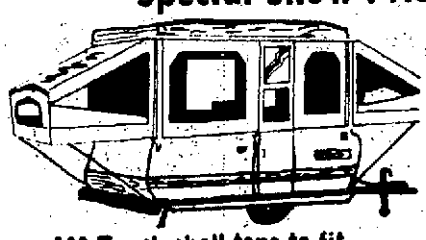

Camping requires some kind of vehicle, if nothing else but to get out of the metropolitan area. No where else will you find such a complete choice as will be at Werner Buck's show. This is THE exposition for nearly all the major and new RV manufacturers in the nation.

This is the show famous for its innovative RV ideas. Many a million-dollar business got its start here by introducing new products. Veteran campers make it a rule to visit the Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show just to check new ideas and pick up information.

Comfort is No.1 with RV fans

There are almost as many new ideas each year in the recreational vehicle industry as their are manufacturers but there seem to be two constant trends — more comfort and convenience and increasing sales. Of course, the sales come when buyers find what they want.

Buyers have come to expect most of the conveniences of home when they go camping. From vans and small pickup campers to 32-foot motor homes the word is "luxury."

CB's are practically standard equipment now and the airwaves are full of travel talk. Cadillac-class motor homes offer central air conditioning, built-in color TV, microwave ovens, etc. Truck campers are providing bigger beds, larger bathrooms and finer interiors. Customized vans offer the ultimate in fine rugs, wood cabinets and paneling, stereo systems, etc.

There is, or was, a pattern of sorts in recreational vehicle buying, but there are so many variations and cross currents now that is hard to chart where it is going. Only one thing is sure — people are buying more RV's each year.

Generally, a youth will begin with a van or small camper. Then, after getting married and starting a family he may need a larger camper and truck. Seeking more comfort, his next move may be to a mini motor home. At least, that's the way it was thought to be.

In actuality though, he may find all the comfort he wants in a van or camper, plus other advantages they may have in mobility or gas mileage. Also, vans are appealing to a more mature audience each year, as they leave behind their wilder paint jobs and surfer beginnings. Actually, it was these youthful images that attracted some of the older buyers to start with.

The customized van trend, which began in California, is moving eastward and is expected to peak in about two years. Ellis Blankenship, president, and Gary Wobig, his top assistant at Recreational Vans Inc., manufacturers of the famed Kar-A-Vans, cite a new vehicle trend that is growing by leaps and bounds — customized four-wheelers and pickup trucks.

A lot of these beauties are already being seen on Southern California roads. There is a big market of mature RV owners who simply want a fancy pickup as an "adult toy." Many of them had hot rods when they were young, or else could not afford them then, and the customized trucks sort of enable them to relieve those happy days.

There are changes in all types of recreational vehicles for 1977. The luxurious Landau Motor Homes are offering a beefed-up chassis, with 7-inch wider front track for improved handling, larger windows, central air conditioning and more comfort features.

Keith Boswell, manufacturer of Pilgrim truck campers, which will feature new, unbreakable, tinted windows, painted scenes on outside panels, and redesigned interiors, notes the public has become very conscious of consumer reports and government regulations. RV owners look for safety features and are more careful about weight limits.

In turn, truck manufacturers have stepped up production and are building in items to please camper buyers, such as sliding rear windows.

It is obvious that RV's have arrived when both Washington and Detroit are giving them special attention.

Park damage

About one-fifth of all the money spent on recreation by the California region of the Forest Service went to cleaning up and repairing the damage. This money, according to the National Automobile Club, would have been enough to build some 750 new picnic grounds or campsites.

Serene surroundings of Big Bear

(excerpted from Big Bear Valley Life)

Big Bear Valley offers a beautiful lake, quiet forested trails and clean air. At an elevation of 7,000 feet, the area is bordered by the San Bernardino National Forest. It is Southern California's largest lake and mountain resort, only two hours by freeway from Los Angeles or Orange County.

Ample facilities for the traveler are available in this alpine community with modern motels, condominiums and rustic cabins. There are also more than six public forestry campgrounds and seven private recreational campgrounds in the valley. While staying in the area visitors will find a vast number of summer and winter activities. Whether indoor or outdoor, summer or winter, these recreational activities should prpvide something for everyone.

Several scenic sky chairlift rides, good restaurants, a zoo, and even a solar observatory highlught the blue skies and majestic mountains of the are. Ski resorts (with excellent sknow-making capabilities), tobogganing, ice skating, tube sliding, snowmobiles, snow play and of course the after-skiing activities service the winter sports enthusiasts. Throughout the summer many fishermen line the shores or launch their boats in hopes of landing a few of the thousands of pounds of rainbow trout which are planted in the lake each year.

Big Bear Lake has scheduled special events for every season. The Oktoberfest celebration, Chirstmas Winterfest, the Fourth of July celebration and Old Miners' Days prpvide o4ganized festivites that can be enjoyed by tourists and permanent residents alike.

There are three complete business communities in the valley. Big zbear Lake, on the south shore, has a year-round theater, radio station, banks, medical centers, shopping center, schools and churches.

The new Bear Valley Community Hospital is a 29-bed facility which offers 24-hour emergency service. It is a multi-million-dollar addition to the area.

Picturesque boutiques and specialty shops sline the streets if the village. Some merchants have remodled in Alpine and Western themes lending a quaintness to the toen.

Fawnskin, on the North Shore, sports campgrounds, a shopping center, public boat ramp and boat landings. This lakeside community bi popular with the fishing set.

Big Bear City, to the east of the lake, has the only airport in the mountain area. It is a two-million-dollar facility with an improved, surfaced runway for private planes. The airport is well maintained and well plowed in the winter. Official weather reports are given three times daily, and airport conditions are always available from flight service.

Big Bear City is mainly a residential community and its growth and expansion are ever-increasing. The city supports its own market, shops, amusement park, playground and Convention Center.

A beautiful lake, permanent residential communities, recreational yearround activieles combine to make the Big Bear Valley a land for all seasons.

Ever thought about renting a vacation RV?

"Renting a vacation trailer from us must be one of your more pleasant experiences of the year or we're not satisfied. It's just as big a deal to us as selling a home is to a real estate salesperson.

"Our trailer is no less your home when you are camping in it than is your permanent residence. We go through our units with the utmost of care cleaning and polishing the floor, stove, sink, ice box, tables, cabinets and exterior. In addition we vacuum, air-out and sanitize the mattresses.

"Our motto is "We wouldn't put you into anything that our mothers wouldn't sleep in."

In addition to a large fleet of trailers, campers and shells for sale or rent, A-1 Coast vacation land of Harbor City performs repairs, service and appliances installations for customer's RV's to supplement their large inventory of trailer supplies for sale, sanitary dump station, ice and propane service.

GEORGIE CLARK:

Queen of the Colorado

Not many persons become a legend in their own lifetime, but at 65 Georgie Clark is known already as the "queen of the Colorado." Actually, she has been a legendary figure ever since she made her first successful run down the Colorado River 28 years ago in a rubber raft.

Veteran river runners called it "luck" but if it were, it is still continuing after all these years, for Georgie has conducted more people through the rapids of the Grand Canyon than all other guides combined, without a single casualty.

She was a "liberated woman" long before there was such a term and she has been her own woman for as long as she can remember.aAnything she has wanted to do, she has.

In the 1930's she decided to head west for California and bicycled from New York on a hard leather seat, when there were no easy-riding 10-speeds, no gears and braking on the mountain roads was rough.

Georgie first became "involved" with the Colorado while she was on a 125-mile hike in the Southwest after her discharge from a World War II ferry command. She accepted a challenge and swam 185 miles of the lower Colorado in a life jacket.

Her life now is the Colorado. She says of it, "I like the water. I like the rapids and the fact they change all the time."

She will be at H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center to promote her river tours and talk with those interested in the river.

Charlie wears many hats

"Charlie Tuna," "Prof," "Author," Charles Davis III — call him what you will — the amiable Carson angler could reply to a lot of titles. You could probably add "All America" if such a mythical team of top fishermen were picked, for Davis has won a natimnal reputation for his exploits. He was dubbed "Charlie Tuna" years ago for his ability to land the big ones.

He teaches evenimg classes on fishing at Long Beach City College, he has written several articles for hunting and fishing magazines and is the author of a book on salt water fishing being released soon. He also has served with a museum group on a fishing expedition.

Along with all this, Davis represents such tackle manufacturers as Fenwick, Bomber Bait Co., Lou J. Eppinger Mfg. Co., Lowrance Electronics, Inc. and Vicheck Plastics.

He will be exhibiting products from these firms at Werner Buck's 12th Annual Southern California Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center. Davis also will be conducting clinics at the show.

He considers fishing the nation's favorite pastime, pointing out it has more participants than any other sport. He says there are more than 2,000,000 licensed fishermen in California alone. This is the nation's largest registration. He believes the calico bass is probably the most popular catch in the state.

"I see continued growth in fishing as people get more leisure time," Davis says. He also points out that more women and children are taking part as they join in trips in campers, motor homes and vans.

California as the Spanish found it

In this age of bustling cities and suburban developments, it is almost impossible to imagine how California looked to the Spanish explorers who landed here two hundred years ago. But thanks to Montana de Oro State Park, we don't have to imagine, according to the National Automobile Club, for here the California coast remains untouched.

Located just west of San Luis Obispo, the park includes 7,000 acres of small beaches, secluded coves, and mountain ridges. It makes a beautiful and unusual picnic spot, but many visitors prefer to savor its peacefulness at greater length, camping in a valley set back from the ocean where they can watch the fog roll in on summer mornings and evenings.

State park

Castle Rock State Park, in the Santa Cruz Mountains of northern California, delights rock-climbers of all abilities with the sandstone outcropping from which the park gets its name. And for nonclimbers picnicking nearby, the climbers put on a delightful show as they try out different techniques of ascent and descent.

This unusual park, according to the National Automobile Club, also offers riding trails that lead to three other state parks. And for hikers the natural backdrop ranges from sunny chaparral to cool redwood forests.

Comfort is No.1 with RV fans

There are almost as many new ideas each year in the recreational vehicle industry as their are manufacturers but there seem to be two constant trends — more comfort and convenience and increasing sales. Of course, the sales come when buyers find what they want.

Buyers have come to expect most of the conveniences of home when they go camping. From vans and small pickup campers to 32-foot motor homes the word is "luxury."

CB's are practically standard equipment now and the airwaves are full of travel talk. Cadillac-class motor homes offer central air conditioning, built-in color TV, microwave ovens, etc. Truck campers are providing bigger beds, larger bathrooms and finer interiors. Customized vans offer the ultimate in fine rugs, wood cabinets and paneling, stereo systems, etc.

There is, or was, a pattern of sorts in recreational vehicle buying, but there are so many variations and cross currents now that is hard to chart where it is going. Only one thing is sure — people are buying more RV's each year.

Generally, a youth will begin with a van or small camper. Then, after getting married and starting a family he may need a larger camper and truck. Seeking more comfort, his next move may be to a mini motor home. At least, that's the way it was thought to be.

In actuality though, he may find all the comfort he wants in a van or camper, plus other advantages they may have in mobility or gas mileage. Also, vans are appealing to a more mature audience each year, as they leave behind their wilder paint jobs and surfer beginnings. Actually, it was these youthful images that attracted some of the older buyers to start with.

The customized van trend, which began in California, is moving eastward and is expected to peak in about two years. Ellis Blankenship, president, and Gary Wobig, his top assistant at Recreational Vans Inc., manufacturers of the famed Kar-A-Vans, cite a new vehicle trend that is growing by leaps and bounds — customized four-wheelers and pickup trucks.

A lot of these beauties are already being seen on Southern Califoraia roads. There is a big market of mature RV owners who simply want a fancy pickup as an "adult toy." Many of them had hot rods when they were young, or else could not afford them then, and the customized trucks sort of enable them to relieve those happy days.

You'd be surprised how many top professional and business leaders come to Recreational Vans for special vans and pickups.

There are changes in all types of recreational vehicles for 1977. The luxurious Landau Motor Homes are offering a beefed-up chassis, with 7-inch wider front track for improved handling, larger windows, central air conditioning and more comfort features.

Keith Boswell, manufacturer of Pilgrim truck campers, which will feature new, unbreakable, tinted windows, painted scenes on outside panels, and redesigned interiors, notes the public has become very conscious of consumer reports and government regulations. RV owners look for safety features and are more careful about weight limits.

In turn, truck manufacturers have stepped up production and are building in items to please camper buyers, such as sliding rear windows.

It is obvious that RV's have arrived when both Washington and Detroit are giving them special attention.

Park damage

About one-fifth of all the money spent on recreation by the California region of the Forest Service went to cleaning up and repairing the damage. This money, according to the National Automobile Club, would have been enough to build some 750 new picnic grounds or campsites.

GEORGIE CLARK:

Queen of the Colorado

Not many persons become a legend in their own lifetime, but at 65 Georgie Clark is known already as the "queen of the Colorado." Actually, she has been a legendary figure ever since she made her first successful run down the Colorado River 28 years ago in a rubber raft.

Veteran river runners called it "luck" but if it were, it is still continuing after all these years, for Georgie has conducted more people through the rapids of the Grand Canyon than all other guides combined, without a single casualty.

She was a "liberated woman" long before there was such a term and she has been her own woman for as long as she can remember.aAnything she has wanted to do, she has.

In the 1930's she decided to head west for California and bicycled from New York on a hard leather seat, when there were no easy-riding 10-speeds, no gears and braking on the mountain roads was rough.

Georgie first became "involved" with the Colorado while she was on a 125-mile hike in the Southwest after her discharge from a World War II ferry command. She accepted a challenge and swam 185 miles of the lower Colorado in a life jacket.

Her life now is the Colorado. She says of it, "I like the water. I like the rapids and the fact they change all the time."

She will be at H. Werner Buck's 12th Annual Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center to promote her river tours and talk with those interested in the river.

Charlie wears many hats

"Charlie Tuna," "Prof," "Author," Charles Davis III — call him what you will — the amiable Carson angler could reply to a lot of titles. You could probably add "All America" if such a mythical team of top fishermen were picked, for Davis has won a natimnal reputation for his exploits. He was dubbed "Charlie Tuna" years ago for his ability to land the big ones.

He teaches evenimg classes on fishing at Long Beach City College, he has written several articles for hunting and fishing magazines and is the author of a book on salt water fishing being released soon. He also has served with a museum group on a fishing expedition.

Along with all this, Davis represents such tackle manufacturers as Fenwick, Bomber Bait Co., Lou J. Eppinger Mfg. Co., Lowrance Electronics, Inc. and Vicheck Plastics.

He will be exhibiting products from these firms at Werner Buck's 12th Annual Southern California Sports, Vacation & Recreational Vehicle Show Jan. 2-9 at Anaheim Convention Center. Davis also will be conducting clinics at the show.

He considers fishing the nation's favorite pastime, pointing out it has more participants than any other sport. He says there are more than 2,000,000 licensed fishermen in California alone. This is the nation's largest registration. He believes the calico bass is probably the most popular catch in the state.

"I see continued growth in fishing as people get more leisure time," Davis says. He also points out that more women and children are taking part as they join in trips in campers, motor homes and vans.
